A dark cloaked figure jumped up in front of them, landing next to the archer. Claire put her hand on her sword, ready to fight, but her companion relaxed. Claire and the mystery girl stared each other down. Mostly covered by a faded black cloak, she could only see that the girl was slender, and about the same age as the other girl. Short brown hair was visible in her hood, and her amber eyes regarded Claire cautiously.

“How was it?” The first girl whispered, a note of worry in her voice.
“Can we trust her, Mireille?” the new girl didn't take her eyes off of Claire. She spoke perfect French, but in a distinctly English accent.
“The Seventh said she just contracted. Asked me to take care of her. She doesn't even know what's going on.” Claire tried to interrupt, but was cut off by the cloaked English girl.
“Good enough for now.” She finally looked toward her companion. “Your friends are all captured, I think. Couldn't get too close. They have a bloody powerful Culexus.” She paused. “...and it's moving this way. We need to get going.” She made to exit in the opposite direction.

The pale-haired archer, Mireille apparently, clenched her fist. “Damn it all! How did they know we were here?” For a second, she gazed longingly at the town. Tearing herself away, she turned toward Claire with a forced smile.

“Don't mind Amy! She's a little paranoid, but she's nice, deep down.” She looked past Claire, and jogged to catch up with Amy.

Not wanting to find out what a Culexus was, Claire hurried to follow them off the roof and into the darkness of the forest.

Caroline Brandt closed her eyes and sighed as the slightly inebriated Vindicare next to her scoped out one of the ritzier hotels in Santa Destroy. They were up on a nearby rooftop, and supposed to be scoping the place out as a possible hunting ground for a witchcult, and more than one magical girl had vanished or been taken out by surprise near here in the past few weeks. Her partner, Anastasia Krylova, was giggling to herself as her pale cheeks went pinker and pinker. Between her, the constant sirens in the distance, and the fact that neither of them could feel anything witchy nearby was starting to grate on her patience.

The redheaded Eversor frowned, and picked up her binoculars to see what the ruskie was so smitten by. She almost immediately dropped them again. “Fer fuck's sake, Stacy!” she hissed, smacking the Vindicare on the back of the head. “It's always people goin' at it with ya' nowadays, what the fuck is wrong with you.”

Ana yelped and pulled back, only avoiding firing her Vychlop in surprise because she'd had the sense to keep the safety on. She glared over at Caroline, rubbing her other eye.

“Yeah!” Carol narrowed her eyes. “Two chicks goin' at it with the window open while ya' were turnin' beet fuckin' red.” she teased. “Ya' wanna tell me somethin? About how ya' wanna rip this stupid costume offa' me an' take me right here fer the whole city ta' watch?” the Eversor grabbed up the bottle of good ol' American Honey they'd been sharing and downed a slug. “Cause ah'm a screamer, they're gonna know alright.”

“Oh don't be so confident, Carol, I know you don't bat for both sides. And quiet down, someone will hear us.” Ana snapped, snatching the bottle out of the redhead's hands and taking a slug of her own.

Carol scooted closer to Ana, and started to whisper right in her ear. “Aaaw, but that don't mean ya' can't lust and stew over yer best friend in secret, right?”

The Vindicare rolled her eyes, pushing the redhead off. “Just because I do bat for both sides doesn't mean I find you attractive. Since you're straight, do you find... let's say... Lance Kilgore attractive?”

The Eversor frowned. “Kilgore? That fucker? He kicks ass and ah'll say he don't look too bad at all but he's supposed ta' be an awful jackass-”

“It's the same with you, except you ARE an awful jackass.” Ana chuckled, going back to her rifle.

“Yeah, yeah...” Carol chuckled too, surprised as she actually felt a little twinge of dejection at Ana’s comment deep down in her guts. “Well how come all yer' doin' is just watchin' people? The Eighth is full a' dykes, ah'm sure ya' could find someone ta' roll around in the sheets with.”

Ana's cheeks pinked again, and she spared a little glance over at her friend before replying. “Kills the Insomnia and gives much better dreams than...” she trailed off.

“Goin' fer wound shots an' watchin' the targets bleed out on the pavement did?” Carol finished for her.

“Yes, Carol.” the Vindicare sighed. “Glad to see tact is still alive and well among Eversors.”

“Well shit, forget tact ah'm just glad it's only somethin' a little pervy yer doin' now instead a' somethin' that's got me worried yer gonna fuckin' lose it one night and murder me in my sleep. Was worried even all the way back durin' trainin' when ya' told me all them murder reports on the news weren't doin' anythin' fer ya no more.”

“At least you're concerned about me.” Ana smiled. “Have you spotted anything tonight? I haven't seen a thing... relevant to our search at least.” she added with a little cough. “I thought I saw some odd shadows skulking around in the alley but I think it was my eyes playing tricks, there was nothing that could have cast them.”

Carol shook her head. “Most interestin' thing was some fatass getting mugged in the alley down there, got stabbed even after forkin' over his wallet. Ya' can probably still see the blood if ya' look close but he went hobblin' off pretty fast.” she pointed down toward where she'd seen it a few hours ago.

“Only stabbed? Lucky fatty.” Ana snerked, checking out the alley with her scope. “I hate these stakeouts, nine times out of ten I swear those witchcult freaks see you before they see them and either crawl into the dark and pull the hole in with them, or sneak up close and start throwing frags everywhere.”

“Yeah, that's how Riggs and Ash bought it last month, ‘bout a dozen guys just blew em' ta' pieces...” Carol nodded, looking around their rooftop for a moment.

“Well at least it looks like another mugging going on to help alleviate the boredom, check it out, two kicking around some bald fellow.” the Vindicare pointed them out as the redhead grabbed up her binoculars again.

A man and a woman were taking turns kicking around some middle aged homeowner type, who was balled up on the ground, unmoving.

“Ya' think they killed him?” asked Carol, then frowned. “...shit, not even two months ago ah'dve been chargin' down there ta' save him, now we're watchin' this guy get beat the fuck up fer fun, what's wrong with us?”

“I think he's only knocked out... and maybe we've both just seen too many people die to really give much of a damn anymore. I know I don't.... there's something on the woman's neck...” she trailed off, giving her scope a click and taking another look. “That's a kiss!” she gasped. “Carol, it's them, the woman has a witch kiss!”

A moment of looking hard later, Carol could see it too… a little white spider over a slowly pulsing black circle, writhing around on the nape of the woman's neck. She was wearing a dark blue jacket that normally would have covered it with the hood up, but it'd fallen down during her assault on the bald guy. The woman put her hood up again, and grabbed one arm of the unconscious man while her partner took the other.

“Ana, they’re dragging him off to God knows where! Waste em’ already!” Carol hissed.

“Not yet, we don't know where they're hiding, I do it know and we're back at square one except with the cult on alert.” she replied, keeping them in her sights.

The two waited as the cultists pulled the man down the alley way and over to a manhole, which they pried up with surprising ease. The woman quickly entered, getting baldy's legs inside while her partner knelt over the hole, easing him down.

“There...” Ana exhaled, and fired her rifle. The heavy bullet caught the male cultist in the head, blowing his skull apart like a piece of rotten fruit hit with a hammer. He fell forward, and the woman fell inside under the weight of her captive.

“Missed one, but that's still one less a' them shitheads we gotta deal with.” Carol smirked. “Let's get down there and wreck their night before she alerts all a' them.” the Eversor grabbed up the bottle of whiskey.

“I'd almost rather she did, and I know you do too. Sometimes it's more fun that way... probably just the whiskey talking...”

Carol laughed. “Ah'll make a' Everser outta you yet, Ana!” she raised the bottle. “Ta revenge, an' Eightball who gave us a shot at it, bless that little bastard.” the redhead downed half of what was left, then handed it off to Ana.

“Aye, and to your sister, Blessed Lady rest her... and both our families.” Ana grinned, finishing off the bottle and pitching it off the rooftop.

I ran the rag across my helmet's visor for the thousandth time. It was spotless, it practically sparkled - it still wasn't clean. I laughed, quietly, bitterly. Already turning into Lady MacBeth, at the ripe old age of seventeen.

The pressure seal popped with a hiss, and the Osprey's rear ramp dropped. I punched the release on my chest, and the crash webbing retracted. I stood slowly, stiffly, rolling my shoulders, and followed Rev and Linde out the back of the transport. The miniature cyclone kicked up by the Osprey's rotors whipped my short, purple hair as I stepped onto the flight deck of the Hand of Vengeance - the flying, heavily-stealthed aircraft carrier that served as the headquarters of the Sixteenth Officio.

We paced toward the superstructure, as techs and ground crew swarmed around the Osprey. Another squad of Puella Magi loped past us toward the waiting transport; it was impossible to tell their identities through the opaque visors and powered armor. Just another group of nameless, faceless, coldly professional teenage murderers, off to do some nameless, faceless client's dirty work.

I was exhausted. We were all exhausted. My body mindlessly walked its way belowdecks to our squad bay, following my squad leader on autopilot. Linde palmed the scanner beside the hatch, and we plodded through the door. I took my place under the servo-tech in my armor's pod, relaxing as the robot stripped me of my restrictive suit.

I was the third one into the shower - Rev and Sonja were already there, washing mechanically. As Linde stepped in after me, a chuckle died on my lips. Six months ago, I would have recoiled in blushing shock and dismay at the thought of sharing a shower built for one with three naked girls. Basic, and life aboard ship, beat that out of me. Now, I was barely conscious of their nudity as I washed myself. Linde motioned to me, and I obediently soaped her back, then turned so she could do the same. We were too tired to joke about lewdness. Eventually, somebody sat down and leaned against the wall. It might have been Sonja. All I remember is that sitting suddenly seemed like a really, really good idea. I'll just close my eyes for a minute. Let the hot water sluice over me, erase the aches.

I woke up sometime later. It couldn't have been too long - the water was still hot. I started to sit up, but stopped as I became conscious of the warm, breathing weight across my middle. At some point, Sonja had decided that my bare stomach would make an excellent pillow, and was curled up next to me. I was also apparently leaning on someone, either Rev or - no, not Rev, Rev's head was...heh. You never have a camera handy when you really need one. So I was leaned against Linde.

I heard a knock over the sound of the water. Linde stirred, and carefully distangled herself. I watched somewhat blearily as she padded over to the door and opened it a crack. She listened for a moment, nodded twice, and closed the door. She turned back towards us. I raised an eyebrow, and indicated the sleeping girls questioningly. She shook her head and put a finger to her lips. I slowly extricated myself, being careful to avoid shoving my nethers further into Rev's sleeping face and leaving Sonja propped up against her.

I stepped out of the shower, snagging a towel from the rack and briskly drying my hair with it. I pulled my hair into a loose ponytail and dried the rest of myself. Linde stood to the side, going through the same motions. I collected a pair of black gym shorts and an olive-drab tank, and sprawled on the couch. Linde sat somewhat more gracefully at the end of the sofa - I obediently moved my long legs out of her way, then replaced them across her lap. My eyes wandered around the room.

Our squad bay was an incongruous mix of the spartan and the opulent. A deep, shag carpet covered corrugated metal floors, overstuffed furniture sat in a loose circle below naked incandescent bulbs, and a battered, much-loved table stood off to one side with mismatched chairs and stools around it. Four bunks were stowed up against the bulkhead, chained out of the way, and Rev had scrounged a small TV and an ancient Gamecube, both of which sat on one end of the haphazardly-repaired coffee table in front of the sofa. It wasn't an aesthetically pleasing room by any stretch, but it was comfortable, and it was home.

I let my wandering gaze rest on Linde. She was tall for a girl, with long, slender arms and legs. If it were anyone else, her body would've looked coltish and awkward - on Linde, it just looked sleek and graceful. She moved like a cat - all grace and poise, not a movement wasted. Her short, blue hair set off her storm-gray eyes beautifully, and while her strong-jawed face would never be considered a classical beauty, the cheer and liveliness in her more than made up for it.

There was a quiet splashing behind me, followed by the ruffle of a towel. Rev walked past, bending to pull on a pair of panties and a black tee, before she, too, dropped sideways into a chair. Rev wasn't tall, but she wasn't excessively short, either. She was built like a dancer, slim and sinewy, and she moved with an economy of motion that hinted at a vast capability for swift, efficient violence. Her red hair clashed somewhat with the slight, exotic cant of her eyes - nobody expected to see a redheaded Asian. The tattoo that snaked up one arm only added to her image, giving the girl a touch of savagery that, coupled with her looks and manner, gave the impression of a lethal, joyfully unrepentant free spirit.

Another splash, another ruffle, and Sonja padded over to sit in the remaining armchair. The white-haired girl wore a fuzzy, too-big pink bathrobe, one that had been given to her by her late grandmother on her tenth birthday, four years ago. The bathrobe enveloped the short, skinny girl like a fuzzy blanket, hiding her face up to the nose as she sat in the chair, legs crossed under her. Her age and size meant that she'd inevitably become the rest of squad's favorite littlest sister, and we doted on her. She was also my spotter, and, from what little I'd seen, a damned good one.

We sat in companionable silence for some time. Sonja dozed, and Rev pulled a book from under her chair. Linde contented herself with sitting quietly, savoring the moment of peace. Eventually, however, she stirred. I moved my legs, and she stood.
"That run went well, girls. I'm proud of you. I know this wasn't the most glamorous job ever, but it was necessary, if we want to preserve stability in the Middle East."

I made a face. "I'm pretty sure the Powers that Be want the exact opposite of that, Boss. Instability means the jobs keep coming, and the revenue keeps moving."

Linde shook her head with a smile. "Rev, you can field this one."

The redhead closed her book (In Fury Born, as I recall) and stretched lazily. "Now, Pawn. You haven't been here long enough to see it happen, but there's something odd about the contracts we keep getting. Do you know what that is?"

I shook my head, and she grinned. "A lot of our contracts come from Mossad, like the last one. But we also get 'em from MID and the Egyptian Mukhabarat. That's why secrecy and stealth is so important - neither side knows we're working for the other."

I felt my eyebrows climbing toward my hairline. "We're playing both sides, is what you're saying. I...really don't see how antagonizing both parties helps stability."

Linde smiled. "Give the girl a cigar. Yes, we're playing both sides. But it's not that simple. Out of all the contracts we've accepted in the last nine months, every one of the targets was a Hawk."

The eyebrows climbed higher. "You're implying Jyuro is legitimately trying to preserve peace. Through killing off the people who want to go to war. That's...that's kinda twisty, Boss."

She nodded. "It is. But I suppose the ends justify the means."

I shook my head. "I still can't see it. We'd make more money if they actually went to war, so it can't be that. And Jyuro didn't strike me as having much of an altruistic streak, so it isn't that either. What's the angle?"

Linde studied me for a moment. "Not much gets by you, huh? You're right, that's not it. None of this discussion leaves this room, understood? I'm...technically not really supposed to tell you this."

I nodded.

"The reason we're bumping off the warmongers is because we have an overarching, multibillion-dollar contract with NATO. We keep the peace, through whatever means we deem necessary. Jyuro, and Warmaster Pavolvena, decided the best way to do it was simply to be...selective about which contracts we accept. Business as usual."

I frowned. "One would think that nine months and a hundred Magical Girls, with support, would be more than enough to liquidate the people keeping the region volatile."

Linde shrugged. "You'd have to talk to Intel about that one. I just carry a rifle and shoot who they tell me." Her demeanour changed, slipping into what I privately referred to as 'business mode.' "Now. As much as I'd like to continue this discussion, we are actually on a schedule here. Intel believes we have a potential security breach on our hands." The atmosphere in the room changed subtly, tension ratcheting up. "Specifically, they believe there will be an infiltration of - or outright attack on - one of our offshore facilities, codenamed Big Shell. We'll be briefed en route. I let you sleep and relax as long as I could, but it's time to suit up. Dustoff in five."

We stood, stifling groans of exhaustion. No rest for the wicked, I guess. And the rest of us don't get much sleep either.

QB stated that
a) he wouldn't leave the girls of the Tenth Officio without an Incubator
b) the Ninth Officio basically can't get any bigger
c) he didn't want another bloodbath like what happened with the Third, so just killing them all is also out
Which is why he was actually considering helping Jyuubey with his problem, which is obviously mass desertions.
I have a potential solution to b), but I'll leave it to next thread to ask Decu about the bits I need to know for it to work.

I normally don't catch these threads while Decu's still posting plot (and if I do, it's usually just the last update or two) but I want to throw out a few suggested courses of action for the rest of the day or so, before our date with Midori.

Obviously, we need to shut the shit going on right now down. I'm pleasantly surprised Pinky didn't nom on Haruka's soul yet, but this is still bad.

Almost as obvious, we need to interrogate Lucius and crew

And we need to sit down for a while in a Silent Room and get two things done: our chat with Pinky, and our attempt to connect with Kirika in the golden sword.

~~And maybe get Mami or somebody to help us get some nice clothes for our date.~~

To elaborate, I'm supper busy between work and other IRL related stuff, so when I get home it's pretty much draw for MGNQ until I pass out and I've pretty much left the wiki entirely to the nice fellow who's helping me until Archivalfag stepped in very recently to help out.

So, it's a very small team and we can't all do everything. I have my hands full just trying to keep the index and gallery udpated.

The First passes down some general instructions and it's up to the other Incubators to follow or interpret them. If one Officio is doing something that's totally detrimental to the other Officios or involving a whole lot of innocent civilians, they will send one Magical Girl. Two if it's really bad.

I don't think it's a matter of rescue. Kyubey would probably be quite happy to send her back to the first if he asked. He might not even ask for a lot of concessions, such is his apparent respect for the First.

There's probably some reason they don't want her back though. I'm guessing the ninth's Culexus are the best place for her to be treated after Murderface and Pinky broke her. Though efforts have probably been rather stilted since we lost most of our Culexus.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/09/13(Sat)08:36 No.28192140

"SHUT IT DOWN!" You roar at Yuma, just as you pull the Golden Desert Eagle from its holster and aim it towards the shrieking, burning conflagration in one smooth movement. The very light from the approaching apparition filling the entire room with a searing heat, a blinding glow and the choking stench of hell and brimstone. And along with all of these, a deafening rumbling - one so deep and so loud that it drowns out Haruka screaming bloody murder beside you. "SHUT IT DOWN NOW--"

+ I HEARD YOU THE FIRST TIME + Yuma's pulse, an ugly thing made jagged by desperation, haste and anger, stabs painfully into your consciousness. You see her grasp at her visor, pulling it up - and it's here that you see a flash of green hair, pale white skin, and bloodshot crimson eyes. + BRACE FOR EMERGENCY ACTIVATION +

You've never been in a Silent Room during its Emergency Activation Sequence. Either you've been placed in it long after it's been activated, or you yourself visited someone inside an already-activated one. But being in a Silent Room WHILE it's being turned on - and in Emergency Mode at that - well, you've heard nightmare stories of girls just being knocked out flat, rendered comatose, only to wake up weeks afterwards. Even the clever few who canceled their transformations before it happened - well, even THEY were affected, enough that they were out of commission for days on end.

A mechanical whine, one that takes no time to reach its teeth-itching crescendo - and everything goes completely black.

+ BRACE +

>> ☐ Anonymous 11/09/13(Sat)08:37 No.28192146

[x] brace for the most exciting time of the day

>> ☐ Deculture 11/09/13(Sat)08:38 No.28192159

The sensation hits you like a fucking truck no matter how hard you braced for it. It's a heavy, crushing thing - one that presses down on your shoulders, your head, forcing your knees to buckle, forcing you to kneel. It's like gravity had suddenly decided to fuck everything and increase itself until even the simple act of breathing felt like lifting an entire ton.

And it's then that you feel it, more than hear it - an explosion, followed by eight others. The last one - the nearest one, beside you, where Haruka was - knocks you off of your feet, sending you crashing to the floor in a bone-jarring thud. Your shoulder and hip bear the brunt of the impact of that fall, the pain promising dark, ugly bruises later. You don't mind this, particularly - all you know is that even with all of this shit, you didn't let go of the Desert Eagle in your hand.

Yes. Yes, that's good. That's a good thing, right?

"...uka? Warmaster? Warmaster, you're hurt. Sit...down--"

Dimly, you feel a slight itching on your face, your arms, your hands, your back - an itching that is soon replaced by a sharp, irritating burning sensation. You reach with your free hand to scratch at your arm, but a warm, sticky wetness there greets you instead. You recoil slightly at this, before wiping at your own eyes. Why can't you see? Why are you blind? Did the lights go out or something? Where's--

"Relax, Warmaster, relax. The lights are back on. Open your eyes, you've got them closed."

No. No, you're blind. You can't see. You're--

You open your eyes, and see your bloodied reflection staring down at you from a cracked, tinted visor. A shellshocked girl with purple eyes, her black hair matted to her face with blood. Her glasses askew, one of the lens shattered, the other knocked out of frame completely. The entire front of her gown - at least the top, anyway - also red with blood. Probably from all the fucking cuts on your face and arms.

Well. So that's how it feels like, then.

"Can you hear me alright, Warmaster?" The vox-ruined voice of the Culexus barks sharply at you, and it's then that she thrusts a gloved hand at your face, two fingers stuck out and three fingers curled. "You may have suffered a conscussion, there. How many fingers am I holding up?"

How do you respond?

>>You see her grasp at her visor, pulling it up - and it's here that you see a flash of green hair, pale white skin, and bloodshot crimson eyes.

Yuma lifts her visor and reveals green hair and red eyes. The green hair normal, but the red eyes aren't. Culexus side-effect, maybe?

Not like we didn't just murder-fist 3 girls in-front of a live audience because we have an insane cult of a blood drenched goddess on our hands, where we then run into our (beloved) ex who just happens to now be deeply involved in said cult.

Nope no noir here.

"...She's fine, Warmaster." Yuma seems to hesitate, here, sounding vaguely amused despite the fact that the seeing nearly fucking killed all three of you. Or at least, you think so. "Well, as fine as anyone being forced out of their transformation with the anti-magic equivalent of a point-blank sniper round to their skull would be." She spreads the rest of her fingers all the way, and it's here that you realize that she's offering to help you up. "Can you stand?"

Yeah. You clasp her wrist with your own blood-slick fingers, and she hauls you up back on your feet with no apparent difficulty. It's here, then, that you spot Haruka lying on the floor beside you - her face peaceful, as if asleep. The rest of her body covered with a blanket.

...She's not dead, is she? You find yourself asking.

"No, Warmaster. I did say." Yuma sounds calm, calmer than anyone has any right to be after...well, after what happened earlier. "Her Soul Gem's with me, and it's still functioning. She's just comatose - probably for a week, maybe two. I'll have our Venenum get her on an IV in the meantime." Yeah, too fucking calm. "She'll be up and about again once she wakes up."

Alright, you can't resist pointing it out, now. For someone who tried to punch all your teeth out for bad-mouthing Haruka, Yuma sounds so fucking relaxed. What the fuck gives, here?

"No, Warmaster, I still don't like you." The Culexus replies, now sounding very amused. "But considering that we were both expecting for her to not survive today, well..." her spiked shoulderpads lift up and down as she shrugs. "I guess this is what happiness feels like. It's kind of annoying, but there it is."

Hnh. Well. If Haruka's fine, and Yuma's not about to try anything stupid again, then you'll leave it at that.

"Whatever you say, Warmaster."

You shake your head at the Culexus, before moving away from her, trying to survey what kind of damage Oriko's attack and the emergency activation did to Haruka's room. ...Well, it IS a Silent Room first, but she's made it her own, so...

You shake your head again.

It's a fucking shambles.

The bed's been crushed against the wall, reduced to nothing more than flinders and torn-up foam and shredded cloth. The mirrors themselves had all been blown out, with twisted, red-hot frames being all that remained of them. It's here that you realize where your cuts came from - the explosions turning that much broken glass into flying shrapnel. Table's gone, too, along with the chairs. ...Probably the only thing left standing is the closet, although it's got bits of glass, dagger-sharp, sticking out of it.

Wait. No. One of the mirrors still have half of its glass still intact, clinging to its frame. And it's still glowing with a bright, white light.

...What the fuck. Is the Silent Room broken or something? Isn't this supposed to be shut down, already? Why is the mirror still glowing?

"Hmm?" Yuma looks up at you, the Culexus crouched beside Haruka's supine form. "Glowing? Nothing's glowing, Warmaster. What are you talking about?"

...

You walk towards the glowing mirror, carefully stepping around the piles of broken glass and detritus on the floor as you do so. The Golden Desert Eagle you've miraculously kept a hold of the entire time growing warm in your grip.

"Warmaster?" Yuma calls. "Warmaster, what's going on? I don't see anything--"

You tell her to shut up. And it's Chiaki, godammit. You're starting to hate the title, the way she makes it sound like her least favorite ice cream flavor. Anyway, you tell her to get Haruka to a safe corner, because shit may not be over yet.

"...Are you going to do something stupid, Warmaster?"

You would have turned to glare at the Culexus, if it weren't for the fact that she was right in the first place.

Really stupid, you find yourself replying. Much more stupid than allowing this seeing to take place.

"Right." You hear the rustling of cloth and leather, along with what sounds like a grunt of effort hissed into a vox. ...At least she knows how to follow instructions.

You keep moving, until you're right in front of the mirror. It's...well, it doesn't seem to be doing anything other than just glow in a weird way, like something is supposed to be shining a really bright light on the other side. But that's impossible, Haruka's all but knocked out, and the Silent Room--

"...won't protect you from me." A sharp, venomous voice hisses at you, from somewhere deep inside the mirror. Your first instinct is to level your Desert Eagle at it, but you find yourself suddenly transfixed by the voice.

Namely because you've heard it before. More familiar than Mami's own voice, or Wendy's, or even Pinky's.

It's yours. It's your own fucking voice, hissing out at you.

You try and frame a reply - anything - when the silhouette from earlier appears on the mirror once more.

What the fuck...?

And then, as suddenly as it appeared, it vanishes. The mirror loses its glow, and it slides off the frame and shatters by your feet with a loud crash. Some of the shards bite into your feet, giving you a few more cuts, but you ignore these, trying to comprehend just what the hell you saw.

While I suggested taking Gorefather for the kill... Reckon Oriko would consider trading the staff for the Katana first?

She'd recognise it as Kirika's, right?

If we've gotta kill Oriko, I feel like we should at least try and reunite the two one last time. And honestly I'm not sure how Kirika would feel about Oriko whoring it up with another golden weapon.

On the other hand, the thought of having to fight Kirkia MK2 is terrifying.

"If you say so, Warmaster." Yuma replies after a moment. "With your permission, then, can I send some medical staff over to make sure she's alright? You don't really know for sure with this kind of thing, and I'd like to do everything I can and all."

Hnh? Oh...yeah, sure. Sure, anything she needs. If they ask Yuma, she can tell them that she's got the authority of the Warmaster. And if she could, could the Culexus tell Haruka thanks for you when she finally wakes up?

"I'll do that, Warmaster. I'll even tell her that after everything went to shit, our esteemed Warmaster asked about her first, rather than ask for a drink as she first predicted."

...Right. Well. Okay. That's good. You just need to get cleaned up yourself and get some plans regarding Orikok started. Then there's that dinner to take care of...

"She'll be thankful, you know?" Yuma says, as if she hasn't heard anything. "Including her older sister. Well, maybe. I don't think the Warmaster of the First even cares whether or not her little sister lives."

...Wait, what?

Haruka's older sister is the Warmaster of the FIRST?

That's why we need to get Team Midori (feat.Kumatora) installed in there as soon as possible.

Midori should be able coordinate with Kyoko and Sayaka from there and relay us the stuff that we need to know, assuming that she doesn't mind basically being deskbound.

She's proven surprisingly capable on field missions, but our Officio has plenty of MG's who can fill that role. Murderface's social circle has few in it who are well equipped for the kind of information processing the Warmasters Office needs, though.

You need a drink. You need two drinks, probably. You also need to challenge four Eversors to a fight and win. Yeah, it's getting to be that kind of day.

But you're not turning into a watch-wearing dildo for nothing. You're a drunk, you're irritable, and you're the worst kind of person for this role, but you do the job in front of you. You do the job in front of you and only then will you consider getting sauced.

You all but tear off the bloody gown, balling it between two hands and tossing it over your shoulder on your way out of the Silent Room - and it's here that you trigger your transformation, the ring around your finger burning hot before exploding in brilliant purple light. You keep walking as your costume materializes around you, stumbling just a bit as your usual heels push you up a couple of inches taller.

You ignore the brief flareups of pain as the magic expended by the transformation washes over the many cuts you'd gotten during the seeing - sealing them, healing them, removing them from sight. The comfortable weight of your Shield settling once more on your arm as it materializes there before locking into place.

Your glasses are the last to repair themselves, both lenses quickly replaced with new ones with a brief snap of materializing glass. You squint here, before making a satisfied noise as you continue to make your way to the office of your mutant cat boss.

Yeah, you say a lot of shit about being a Magical Girl and everything, but you can't deny that it's really convenient. ...It's only the only thing you know how to do. Reliably, anyway.

Some more walking and a long elevator ride later, and you finally arrive back where you started - in Kyuubey's Office, only this time it's approaching the afternoon now.

The mutant cat is still hard at work, tapping every now and then on his keyboard while his array of monitors continue to flash indecipherable information at him, in breakneck speed. He doesn't seem to have moved from where you left him - although from the empty plate of spaghetti on his desk, it looks like he'd only finished eating lunch a few moments ago.

"Ah, Matsuda. You're back a bit early. From what I hear, Miss Amane is very tough to get answers from." Kyuubey turns towards you. "Well? What did we learn from this?"

How do you relay your findings to Kyuubey?

You tell him what you found out with Haruka, getting to the point as quickly as you can: about how Oriko is the Prophet, and how she seems to have a Golden Weapon in her possession; about the red Culexus with her, and how she was able to sense Haruka scrying upon them; and also how Oriko managed to try and kill you even through the fucking scrying thing. That last thing, you can't even believe yourself. How do you even do something like that?

...You don't tell him about what you saw after, though. That's...no. You don't share that kind of shit with anyone, including your boss. You'll worry about that when it actually becomes something to worry about, and not just your fucking conscience playing tricks on you.

"I see." Is all that Kyuubey replies with, the moment you finish. "Mikuni Oriko. Granted, I was expecting something like this, but I was thinking of something much more...fitting to her nature. Mikuni Oriko is very much a pensive creature, never one to jump into things with wild abandon. Using a Golden Weapon instead of establishing a contract..." He shakes his head. "Well, I suppose grief can change a person to such an extent."

Yeah. Yeah, that can happen.

You have an inkling that you know all about that kind of thing.

The mutant cat turns to look at you. "Very well, I'll see what can be done. And yes, we do own the copyright to the Culexus Suit, and no one is allowed to manufacture and sell it besides us - but once they're sold, the buyer can modify them any way they so wish. If they were the least bit competent, they'd have removed the trackers we usually sneak into the Anima Speculum helmet." He shrugs here. "It's worth an attempt, though. With enough luck, we may be able to triangulate a location." Kyuubey pauses, here. "I'll keep you updated, of course."

Right. Well. That's everything, you think.

...Wait. About Haruka. Why didn't he tell you that she had the Warmaster of the First as her fucking older sister? Did he actually want you to fuck things up with the First Officio? Yeah, right, you forgot a lot of stuff, but you don't forget the First.

"You didn't ask." Kyuubey blinks at you.

You didn't ask? That's...that's stupid. This kind of information should--

"--be forgotten if it doesn't actually matter." Kyuubey's voice has a chiding tone to it. "Yes, I realize having the First Warmaster's younger sibling as a captive does sound like the tricky affair, but the First Officio - and my older brother, as well - has assured me that they will not retaliate nor act untowards the Ninth should anything happen to Amane Haruka." A shrug, here. "Family problems, I hear. Certainly none of our business, of course."

Yeah. Of course.

...Man. Sometimes you do feel sorry for yourself, but compared to people like Haruka, who doesn't even deserve it...

Damn.

"Is there anything else, then, Matsuda?" Kyuubey turns back to his array of monitors. "If there isn't, then you might want to get to your office soon. Tomoe Mami left a package there for you, which I believe are clothes for your dinner earlier. It should be beside the package that Omegon left on your desk - I believe it was something you asked her to repair for her."

Ah. Right.

Not that its wrong.

I'd just point out the problems that come when kyuubey asks where we came across this information.

Do we say a dead girl told us?

It's not a really reliable information source... unless we know it is (which we do) and then he'll start questioning why and then our mental state.

Goddamnit, Neco.

Although a hilarious twist would be Neco-quest, and then at the end she's just been in Midori's callidus barrier the entire time.

guys, one thing we need to do before/during the date. we need to make sure that Midori know the difference between Chiaki and Murder Mayumi. if she expects us to act like Murder Mayumi she is gonna have a bad time if the self improvement keeps going. now the fact that she is trying to get us to cut down on smoking and drinking implies that she is ok with it, but we need to make sure.

we can do this in two ways,
1. talk to her about it for maximum awkwardness
2.look up some later volumes of the series on the laptop in our office and see if the Murder Mayumi character changes to be less of a dick.

I see your point, but look at it from Midori's POV: she created MMxMM long before knowing Chiaki (yeah she saw Murderface at the noodle bar, but that's hardly knowing her even if she was similar to Chiaki) from fantasies, and continued it because she has a huge fanbase and success, as well as enjoying it. And she has treated Chiaki with nothing but respect and understanding, even going as far as trying to help her in every way she knows - which also happens to be the entirely opposite way of how Murder Mayumi acts.

She feels like she's close to Chiaki, like she knows her properly. And I'm sure she wants the opposite to be true too. So how well would she take accusations that she's mixing her together with MM in her mind at this point?

Well, if you insist.

Chiaki's out collecting rare weapons and have a unique shield, right? We're working for a bad guy (well, he's not as bad as he could be, but he's supposedly vilified by the other officios) and we don't particularly like our boss (sometimes). We got glowing eyes, and we're on fairly good terms with somebody we fought against in the past. We have our magical girl transformation, and I think Yuu even lets us sprout extra arms (that might not be canon in this universe though). There's Midori, our loyal, green retainer. We had an important person die while we were indisposed or away (sorry, Mirai!) though Chiaki doesn't die even when killed - she had her heart torn out at least twice. And there's an all-powerful entity messing around with us that wants to destroy everything (that's what Pinky wanted, right?).

Oh, and time magic. We tend to not fight fair when things get desperate either.

>> ☐ Anonymous 11/09/13(Sat)14:51 No.28196230

Pinky's ultimate goal is to make Chiaki suffer as much as possible (and in the right ways) before she dies. I think.

>> ☐ Anonymous 11/09/13(Sat)14:56 No.28196296

>>28196240

That is unclear. The whole destroying the world thing isn't one of Pinky's goals, or at least she hasn't stated it outright or implied it yet. But there are a lot of others who think that Chiaki will usher in the end of the world.

>>28196261

Oh yeah, definitely. Her #1 goal is to make Chiaki miserable and make her life a living hell. She'll only probably kill Chiaki after an arbitrary (and probably near-infinite) amount of suffering has been reached.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/10/13(Sun)06:32 No.28207906

Well, there is just one thing. You have another mission lined up in a few days or so, right? Is that on hold now because of Oriko, or what?

"Ah, you're referring to the mission involving the off-shore facility?" Kyuubey shakes his head. "No, that mission's still on your docket, Matsuda. Do you realize how that will look like to our client - and all the other Officios? About us dropping our active assignments simply because of a small group motivated by the most puerile and immature of pursuits - revenge?"

...Well. You're not sure you've seen the Incubator as angry as this before. Even angrier than he was earlier, with Jyuubey.

Kyuubey turns to look at you, before sighing. "I...well. I'm sure you have more reason to be displeased than I do, Matsuda. But I can't help but feel that this could have been avoided had I not asked Kharn to use a lighter hand with the Third."

Huh. He did that, then?

>> ☐ Deculture 11/10/13(Sun)06:34 No.28207922

>>28207906

"Against my own better judgment, yes." Kyuubey shakes his head. "I thought it would have been...a much more compassionate way of dealing with things. Everyone, including the Eighth, told me that I was in the grip of insanity once more, to absorb the Third Officio into my own instead of simply having them destroyed. Every one of them favored the easier, cleaner solution. But it didn't feel right, to me." The mutant cat reaches forward with a paw, tapping something on his keyboard, and all the screens on his monitor array blank out. "It didn't feel proper. And now...well."

You stay quiet at this. You're not exactly sure, but it seems like Kyuubey needs a bit of comforting right this moment.

"Kharn wanted them gone. She wanted to break every single one of them. She would've killed them all herself, if I'd let her. But after they all went down on their knees and surrendered, I had Kharn stay that chainsword of hers and allow them to rise once again, as part of the Ninth. ...I should have asked Kharn to make another throne out of their skulls. Or maybe even a coffee table."

Kyuubey glances at you, his face as unreadable as it has always been. "Well, go on, Matsuda. You do have that engagement to get ready for, don't you?" He turns back to his monitor array, the screens coming alive with yet another tap. "Don't let my complaining about my own careless mistakes keep you."

How do you react?

On the other hand he is more emotional so less likely to kill us for no reason. On the other hand from that he is also more emotional so his plans won't screw up as much because he can see the human element better.

We've got the same overall goal right now: Preserve the status quo. We're both very happy with the current state of affairs, and want to keep it that way. The Officio system is definitely something we want to keep around, after all.

You shake your head, here. For what it's worth, you don't think what he did was a bad decision at all - and you're speaking as someone who regularly makes bad decisions, and are being punished for quite a few (including those you can't even remember making). This thing with the Prophet would've happened no matter what, or at least that's how it looks like to you.

And it's not his fault if they took the second chance he gave them and just spat it back in his face. Some people just don't deserve second chances.

"I suppose. I've never really thought of it in that manner." Kyuubey seems to chuckle, here. "I'll take your words to heart, Matsuda. Right after I overcome my surprise at actually being consoled by one of my own Magical Girls - and my own Warmaster, no less." He shakes his head, his long ears swaying with the movement. "Maybe I really am going insane as they say."

Insane or not...well. He's not to let it get to his head, but there's no other Incubator you'd want to be signed up with.

There's a moment of silence, here, and you could swear that Kyuubey seems to be taken aback by your words.

"I...yes. That's..." He stumbles for a moment. "...Thank you, Matsuda."

Heh. Stupid alien cat bastard.

You turn around and make to exit his office, waving at him from back over your shoulder as you do so.

You manage to get to your own office without any problems or delays - although you do stop for a minute to glance at the office next door, namely Malal's. What could be inside it, you wonder? Did she leave anything there inside for you, a clue you could use to help you with the trail of breadcrumbs she's having you follow?

Well, you guess there's the servo skull she left you, and it seems Yuma's finished fixing it. You can't help but be curious still, however. Maybe you can ask Yuma to let you in Malal's office sometime.

You step into your own office, and immediately see the two packages on your desk. One's a bit bigger than the other, and looks like it's from some upscale clothing store that you've never stepped into before. The other is an ordinary, if beat-up looking cardboard box with the word 'REMOV' written on its lid with black sharpie - making it obvious who's it from.

Just as you try to take the lid off of the second box to get a look at what's inside is when you hear something coming from inside the Warmaster's Quarters. Like someone's sleeping in there, or something.

It's Mami. Sleeping in your own quarters.

Your personal blonde goddess of victory, in her business suit, but with the blazer off. She's kicked off her shoes, too. Lying on her side, looking peaceful and serene on the really big bed built to sleep an entire orgy.

She's...she's hugging one of the pillows close to herself, too. In the way that you'd hug someone you're sleeping with.

What do you do?

Despite wanting to leave the sleeping blonde alone - you find yourself moving close to the bed, before carefully sitting down on its edge. Slowly and deliberately settling your weight down, so as to not disturb her.

It's a rare thing, to see Mami like this. She's always been the kind of person who always presents herself properly to other people - taking care not to appear vulnerable or anything less than the perfect Magical Girl she'd always been. The last time you saw her break character was when she apologized to you at the airport, right before you left Siberia. And you felt so special then, to be trusted and held in such importance by her that she allowed you to see that side of her, the side she normally worked hard to conceal from view.

And now she's...she's sleeping on your bed. Well, technically it's not really YOUR bed, since you have your own, back at the apartment - but it's the Warmaster's, and you're the Warmaster, so it counts as your bed. Right?

Eat it, Kharn, you scream mentally at the former Warmaster enjoying her retirement in Bumfuck, Siberia. Eat it.

Well, anyway. You should probably let her sleep - no doubt she'd worked through the night again, if her rumpled office clothes are anything to go by. She probably just planned to rest her back for a bit after bringing you your clothes, but fell asleep right away.

...Gah. If you didn't have anything to do right now, you'd replace that pillow she's hugging with yourself. It'd...it'd probably feel really nice and comfy, wouldn't it? To be squeezed between those soft, warm arms, your face buried into her chest--

"...Nn? Chiaki-san...?"

You freeze right in your tracks, your eyes wide behind your glasses, a cold sweat breaking out all over you as you hear the shapely young woman underneath you murmur your name in the sweetest voice you've ever heard. The fact that it's slightly slurred from sleep seemed to even make it sound more...loving, somehow. As if she'd just said it while dreaming of you.

You look down and see her smiling up at you, her soft amber eyes hooded.

"Oh, it really is you, Chiaki-san." She giggles here, the sound of it - along with the sight of her teasing smile - turning your resolve into so much jelly. "I thought I was dreaming again. Have...have you come to take advantage of me in your own quarters?"

How do you react?

You look down at Tomoe Mami, utterly speechless. Never had a bed ever looked as inviting as it did now, with the warm, soft blonde stretched out on top of it. Your cheeks burning fiercely at what she'd just implied, it takes you an awkward eternity to grumble out a reply. But what you actually replied with, well...it's anything but awkward.

"Yes." You hear yourself say, in a completely deadpan voice, with a confidence you didn't even know you have. You blink in surprise, at the same time Mami does - and you immediately reach up and pat the top of your head with a hand. You're not wearing the hat, right? You stuffed it into your inventory earlier before you met Haruka, right?

...Yeah, that's right. You did. You're not wearing it.

"Chiaki-san...?" Mami looks up at you, propping herself up with an elbow. "I was actually just--" She tries to begin, rather flustered, but you cut her off as you allow yourself to fall forward on top of her. Both your arms wrapping around her as you pull her into a hug. "A-ah, Chiaki-san...!"

You close your eyes as you press your face against her neck. Allowing yourself this one moment of self-indulgence - at least, the sort that doesn't have you killing bottles of Kong left and right.

Soft. Really soft. And so, so warm.

Honestly, you can die right now. It's over. It's done. Fuck Pinky. Fuck th e Golden Weapons. This is your Flesh of the Fallen Angels, right here.

It's here, then, that you feel Mami's own arms curl around you as well, another soft giggle escaping her lips and tickling your ear. "Hee. I was trying to tease you, but I guess that backfired on me a bit, huh?" Her grip shifts a bit, and it's here that you feel her fingers running through your hair, smoothing it down your back. "Silly Chiaki-san. What am I going to do with you?"

...You're not even sure what to do with yourself, sometimes. So that makes two of you.

Actually, both Kharn and Chiaki are special cases.

For one, Chiaki's psyche was put back together by Madoka herself.

For two, Kharn came back from being witched out not once but twice. And the first time was seemingly sheer willpower.

If Mami still thinks that Oriko is a friend, because we didn't tell her about Oriko becoming the Prophet, then she could be invited for tea and cakes with a cyanide spread. If we tell her that she is being specifically targeted, and that this is Oriko involving and killing innocent civilians and targeting her specifically, then we can try to get Mami to go Full Professional and not be captured by Oriko.

No evidence to suggest that whatsoever. In fact, just the opposite; she discarded what appeared to be a perfectly viable weapon, during a combat situation, based purely on gut instinct. Even if the musket DID return, she would maintain that wariness.
She deliberately threw it away into a witch's barrier. She didn't fire it, she didn't hit something with it, and she didn't un-summon it; she made a concious decision to cease all interaction.

You pull Tomoe Mami's soft, warm body tighter against you, not replying right away. This moment is...it's too perfect to spoil with talking about prophets and cults and people you're going to kill sometime in the near future. But she did tell you to be more honest, and it does concern her, so...

"Chiaki-san?" Mami urges you again, her voice soft, barely above a whisper.

You tell her, then. About the seeing. About what happened during the seeing - and what you found out from it, namely who the Prophet really is, who she's after, and what she has up her sleeve.

You're scared, you tell her. Not of the Prophet herself, but...what she's willing to do to get to you. She's already made it clear that she's going to go after Mami, and you don't want to happen, so you're going to take care of it yourself. This Prophet business, you'll handle it personally, so that you can cross it out and Mami will never have to worry about it ever again.

You just want Mami to be safe, you murmur into her hair.

Because you don't want to be Murderface again.

Mami is silent for a few moments before she replies. "...If you say it like that, Chiaki-san, then how can I worry even the slightest bit?" You can hear the smile in her voice, as much as you can feel the soft, pliant warmth of her body underneath you. "Although, Oriko-san being the Prophet...I still can't believe it. I thought...I talked to her about Kirika, told her that it was an unavoidable tragedy, and it wasn't your fault at all, but..."

It's here that she pushes you back slightly, to look at you directly. "...Have you told Kyoko about this, Chiaki-san? If you haven't, it may be advisable for you not to tell her for now. She and Oriko-san are very close, and she may not take the news all that well..."

How do you respond?

The trick to dealing with a seer is to force them into an uncounterable situation. That is to say, a super sneaky plan probably won't work? But rolling in with guns blazing and all the firepower we can muster could, assuming we could pin them down in one place. Which any other plan would also require.

No. The trick with a seer is to show them exactly what they expect to see.

Figure out where she is. Make a mock up of that place. Have your own teams dress as the enemy. Get a lot of movie makeup and stage effects. Have them defeat your own team, one by bloody one. Show them unequivicobly that not only do they win, they win fantastically.

Then run the SAME EXACT SCENARIO when you invade - except now you're doing it for real. Suddenly they don't have sure fire proof that you all die and fail to succeed. You've reintroduced the random element by making a singularity into a binary.

Didn't Oriko not have anything to do with the stadium attack? Besides, we already know that she doesn't automatically see everything (otherwise she wouldn't have needed to be told about our scrying), but unlike her minions going off attacking on their own, or said scrying, neither which would be obvious to look for, Chiaki's eventual assault is the one thing we can bank on 100% her using seeing for.

I thought the current plan was to use Kirika to try and sever her connection to Ahriman. Having friends there saying. "I know you're still in there." might help.

As far as I can see Oriko is being manipulated by the Golden Weapon. She is the perfect vessel for Ahriman. Full or grief, hatred, at her weakest moment, and most importantly wants revenge against us.

If she still wants to try and kill us after her connection with Ahriman is severed. And I know just how DERPHUE this sounds, I think we should give Kirika to her.

You blink at her words, before nodding. You haven't told anyone yet - well, besides Kyuubey, anyway - but you'll have to tell Kyoko soon enough. If you know the red-haired Eversor, then yes, she'll probably take it badly, but not as bad as her finding out that you've deliberately kept it from her. Besides, she's your aide, and she trusts you as her Warmaster, so...

"I see. Well, I've no doubt you'll make the right decision, Chiaki-san. Just be careful when you do it, and try to be gentle when you break it to her. Kyoko's a big girl, and she has Sayaka to support her when it all gets too much, but..." Her voice trails off into silence, as if suddenly deciding against completing her thoughts. "Kyoko sometimes cares a bit too much, and may do something rash. If she does, ask Sayaka to help you rein her back in."

Yeah. You'll do that. ...You thank her, here. For being here for you, and...and stuff.

"You don't need to thank me for something I want to do, Chiaki-san." Mami smiles at you again, that smile that makes every single shitty thing in your life seem insignificant and far away. "I'll always be here for you, alright?"

...Nnh. You're not sure what you did to deserve her, and you're not sure you'll ever remember. But whatever it was, you hope it was enough to get Mami forever.

The blonde giggles again, before seemingly remembering something. "Oh! I nearly forgot! Chiaki-san has that dinner with Midori later, right? I brought some clothes I'd like you to try out--"

But you don't need clothes just to go to dinner, you reply, hunkering down again. You'll just take another shower and just wear your costume to it, like always. Maybe with the jacket on, so you don't look like you're cosplaying. That should be enough, right?

"Of course it's not enough, Chiaki-san! Honestly!" Mami squirms from underneath you, but you've pinned her down good. "Midori-chan's been looking forward to this, you know! You need to make tonight special for her, and one way to begin doing that is to dress properly!" It's here that she giggles again. "Ah, but I can't show you how, with Chiaki-san on top of me like this..."

It was much more painless than you'd anticipated, getting this 'dressing' thing down. The clothes that Mami had bought you are...well, thematically similar to your Magical Girl costume, but made to look like something that actually might exist in someone's closet.

The main colors match those of your costume's - black, with some white and purple, and the pantyhose you're accustomed to is swapped out for some thigh-high stockings, so it's not that much of a drastic change. You also have a tie, which Mami had to teach you how to tie yourself (and which she decided to simply do herself, after the twentieth or so attempt). All in all, it's not that bad of an outfit, but like the maid costume, it doesn't feel...natural. Making you miss the familiar comfort of your Magical Girl costume.

About an hour or so into making sure you've got your outfit down, it's then that Mami's smartphone rings, from where she left it on your bedstand. She excuses herself to take it outside the Warmaster's Quarters, and you allow her to, while you yourself fuss with the stockings biting into your thighs. ...It's a bit tight, but you guess you can manage with them.

"Ah, Chiaki-san, I'll have to run! Kyuubey needs me to re-negotiate some contracts - the business kind!" She picks up her blazer and throws it on, before stepping back into her shoes. "Good luck, and be sure to show Midori-chan a great time during your dinner!"

Yeah. Of course. ...You thank her too, for the clothes and all. And helping you.

"It was my pleasure, Chiaki-san!" She leans over to kiss your cheek. "Thank you for letting me nap there, too! I'll probably do so again in a few days!" She giggles here, before finally leaving, the door closing solidly behind her. Leaving you alone in your office, wearing clothes that look good, sure, but...unfamiliar. Alien.

Well, it's for Midori, so. You can stand a night in some strange duds if it's for her.

You move back to your office. The box labeled 'REMOV' still there, taunting you with its lid barely closed, exactly how you'd left it earlier.

...Eh, well. You still have a few hours before the date. You can see what kind of clues Malal left you with the servo skull.

You open the box, and peer inside. ...It's the servo skull, alright, but in a wildly-different form than how you gave it to Yuma back then. It's put together now, and looks like the Culexus also threw in a cleanup job and some detailing. She also threw in a product manual of sorts, consisting of some instructions written in a folded piece of paper - and you follow it as best you could, finding the switch on the underside and toggling it to ON.

The camera lens-like bulb embedded into the servo skull's left eye socket begins to glow green, then red - and the machinery sprouting out from the skull's cranium and underside begin to vibrate and hum. And then, from its place on your desk, the skull begins to rise, floating up into the air until it's face to face with you.

[AWAITING COMMAND], it hisses at you from a hidden speaker, scratchy with static.

Awaiting command...? Oh. Wait. The manual said it took verbal commands, didn't it? And Yuma left you a list of commands to try out. You unfold the piece of paper and look it over again.

The last resort should be killing her. If at all possible, I think we should try to save her. For Kyouko, for Mami, to get a bad ass sword that will be more agreeable in the future.

If she really wants to try and kill us. I think she should be using Kirkia, not Ahriman. I don't want to kill her because she is being manipulated by a bitch, but I would kill her in self defense after giving her all to avenge her lover.

Two things could possible happen if we give her Kirika. She becomes content that she has Kirika back, or she tries to kill us with her. I'm fine with either scenario, fuck Ahriman.

The hope is that Kirika would want Oriko alive more than she wants us dead. And thus help us bring her back to her senses. Because all she is right now is a proxy for Ahriman.

The plan depends on some horribly specific things to happen. IF Kirika is still sane enough to give a damn (and doesn't just bullshit us), IF Oriko doesn't bullshit us only to get her hands on the blade etc.

The things that can go wrong at every step? Way too fucking many. You don't even know if Ahriman is using her or just lending her power for a common goal. The plan is stupid and too complicated.

The floating skull settles back down onto your desk, but its one glowing eye pulses steadily along with its digitized words.

[COMMAND ACCEPTED. PLAYING. FIRST. AVAILABLE. JOURNAL ENTRY.]

Static. Then clicking. Then, finally, you hear a voice speak. Another familiar voice, but...speaking in a different tone. A different accent, even. Rougher, unrefined, but still clearly...her.

"Alright, this thing should be on." It's Malal. And without the vox speaker of her helmet ruining her voice. "Uh, hello, I guess? If you're hearing this, whoever you are, then I am clearly dead. Let's get that right out of the way first. I'm dead, there's no going back for me, yes, it's all very sad, but I'm going to tell you that wherever I am, I'm probably happy and catching up on all the sleep I missed. Okay? Okay."

A clearing of the throat. "Right. This account should be about the Virtuous Mission in Varrigan City, about...four years ago, I think? Don't ask Kyuubey about this, because we both agreed that no record should exist about this mission ever - or at least, records he knows about. This one is for you, and you know who you are."

The voice pauses here, and when it resumes, you can hear the smile in it.

"And sit down. This could take a while."

One step at a time anyway. If we can't even get Kirika to help, I say Oriko dies at the hands of Gorefather/child.

But I would like to save her since it would make Kyoko happy and impress Mami. And for a bit of a meta reason, maybe even enough to convince her that Wendy couldn't pollute us back to our old lifestyle and let her see us in person.

Plus, it might mean Kirika would be a viable weapon option. Instead of just something that sits in cold storage for the rest of this quest.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/13/13(Wed)05:33 No.28265086

Five years ago, you were a Magical Girl.

And five years ago, you were still alive.

You knew, of course. You knew that you didn't have as much time as anybody else. Even before you signed up with the mutant cat, you knew it, deep in your bones, that Kaneda Madoka would not be long in this mortal coil. She would not have enough time to do everything she wanted - but it would be enough time - barely - to do what she needed.

And this particular mission, one you had to strong-arm the little alien bastard to authorize, is a big fat number on your bucket list.

Going into Varrigan City - a lawless shithole full of rapists, murderers, monsters, augmented humans and rogue magical girls - to save a kidnapped rookie that you haven't even talked to for more than a few minutes.

Alone, without any backup, and with only your own wits at your disposal.

Into fucking hell itself, just to save another girl you barely even know.

Jesus Christ. Being this nice is going to be the death of you.

The trip here was a rough one, but you're getting better at choking down the natural instinct to empty your breakfast into the inside of your helmet's faceplate. Soon you'll be able to open your visor just in time, too.

Kyuubey's long range teleporter was still in its experimental stages, and designed more for his use than Magical Girls - but it did its job well enough in getting you to where you wanted. You had to do the rest of the work halfway - meaning you had to tear yourself back out of the hell behind reality - but it worked. That's what mattered.

Besides, you're not much for diving out of airplanes and depending on a big poofy bag of nylon to slow your terminal dive just enough that you don't end up a red paste when you gently slam into the ground. You take risks, sure, but you're not fucking insane.

After you've finished cleaning the inside of your helmet and disinfecting it to be sure - it's here you look around. You're in Varrigan City, alright. Downtown, from the looks of it - once a bustling commercial area, now turned into a hideout for gangs and fugitives looking to avoid the other, more powerful and more well-armed kill-gangs roaming around.

No place for a Magical Girl, but then again, you're not exactly the normal kind, are you?

It's here that the word [CODEC] lights up on your visor display, at the very center of your vision. You grumble at this - you calibrated that to show up somewhere less obstructive, dammit. But you may as well check in, right?

[]Answer the call where you are. No one seems to be around anyway.

With your codec still chiming and begging for attention, you make to duck into one of the alleyways near you - but your common sense pricks at you enough that you decide against it. You're in Varrigan City, remember? A place ten times worse than fucking Roanapur, and you nearly died trying to get out of that place. Sure, you had fun doing it, but it's not somewhere you'd whittle down what's left of your ever-shrinking lifespan.

You instead find a building with a rooftop you can access. One shows up easily enough after a few moment's searching, and you clamber up the rusting fire escape ladder jutting out from its side.

A few more moments of grunting and very nearly shitting in your suit when one of the rungs gave way in your gloved hands, and you finally manage to get topside. You sneak a glance down at the city from your raised perspective - it's only two floors up - but it gives you enough of a preview of the kind of legwork you'll be making.

...Huh. Varrigan City isn't that pretty of a place, but it looks even shittier from up high.

Your codec's still whining and beeping, and you finally hunker down to answer it. You blink at the flashing rectangle, and it magnifies into a larger window that shifts to the side, occupying the right side of your vision. A small bar below it showing just how strong the signal is - and it's high enough to make a clear connection at the moment.

The square flickers, flashes, before finally showing the face of a pouting young woman, her long brown hair tied back with some sort of frilly red ribbon. She's staring at you like she wants to hate you to death, and you know she means it.

You couldn't help but grin. "Kept you waiting, huh?"

"Uuu..." The girl puffs up her cheeks at this, before exploding in a veritable blast of hate and fury.

"Malal!" She shrieks your name here, making you wince at the volume. "Why you no answer immediately?! Had been waiting for more than five minute, FIVE!" Her accent, heavy to the point of impenetrable, makes no mystery of where she came from, even if she goes around dressed like a fucking shrine maiden half the time. "I not doing this for health, you know! Xiaomei Baocun not Malal's little stupid mei mei to be ignored!"

Alright, alright. Sheesh. You just needed to get to a safe place to answer her call.

"Well Ma-RAR did not have to go in filthy criminal asshole of world in first place, right?" Oh, shit. She's still angry. She doesn't say your name like that unless she's really angry. "Who in right mind go into Varrigan City just to rescue one little magical girl? She become wife to hundred gang members already! Forget her! Come, Xiaomei send evac now, okay? Okay?"

...You talked about this. No. You need to save her. It's important. That's why you asked for help too. You even refused Kyuubey's own support network, here - because you wanted this to be on your own dime, your own elbow grease. And of course, the network of friends you've made under the table.

"...Uuuugh. Wo de ma he ta de feng kuang de wai sheng dou..." Xiaomei lets out an exasperated groan, before burying her face in her hands. "This is stupid mission, Malal. Hope you know that." She shakes her head. "Pwah, well. If Malal say it is important, then important. I am support, so ask anything you need now." She grumbles here. "Stupid Malal."

Right. Fine.

"Ah, see? Using teleport machine make you forget! Cannot even remember main objective, how can be Warmaster if like that?" The raven-haired girl smirks at you. "But is okay, Xiaomei help little mei mei Malal remember. Now, where is paper...so much paperwork, have to look really hard!" She makes a show of shuffling the sheaf of papers in her hand, as if trying to annoy you - but her smirk soon turns into an expression of utter panic. "W-wait, is not here?! But I had it in hand only few minute ago! What the hell?!"

"Xiaomei..." You warn her, shaking your head. This isn't really the time.

"Wait, wait, I have it here...ah! There! See, I have it in hand! Hahaha!" She waves a paper at you. "Did Malal piss in suit because of fear? You did, right?"

No. Come on, you don't have all day--

"Ah, so impatient! Okay, here we are!" Another window comes up on your HUD, this time displaying a closeup of a scared young woman with long black hair and large eyes bloodshot from too little sleep. "Main objective! Valnikov Ekaterina! Fresh Vindicare recruit from Russia! Suddenly did not turn up for training a few months back, suspected kidnapped. Tenth Officio was suspected, but there was no evidence. Declared deceased one month ago, so all search attempts formally stopped then. But of course, some annoying pink-hair idiot not following that, and tracked her down into Varrigan City through UN CON FIRMED reports." Xiaomei stresses the word enough that her harsh accent dismembers the word into three bleeding, twitching syllables. "You know what that mean, right? Is chance she is not here?"

Yeah. You know that. Nothing's really guaranteed.

But you know you'll find her here. Her or her corpse.

"Hokay, stupid. So, main objective of this Vir-choo-us mission--"

"Aiyah, I do not care!" Xiaomei snaps. "Main objective of STUPID mission is to recover Valnikov Ekaterina and make way to Varrigan City Tower for extraction with Fulton surface-to-air recovery system. Estimated mission time is four hours, so you need to be very quick, Malal, or else will have to swim back home."

Right. Four hours. You remember.

"Good. Now, you know contact, right? Do you need Xiaomei to remind you?"

Yeah, that'd be good.

"Fine...okay." Ekaterina's portrait vanishes, replaced now by a smiling portrait of a pale-skinned girl with long hair so blonde it's almost white, and what appears to be...suture marks on her cheeks, and on her forehead. There are two disc-shaped things sticking out on the sides of her head. "Contact! Strange foreigner girl, I am thinking half-Japanese but looks German, I think. Professor Madaraki The Second. Venenum, Thirteenth Officio. Do not know what she is doing off their little boat, but I am thinking selling stimpacks to gangs here. Last seen in Asian Town, Great Wall Street, I think, ten kilometers east from current position."

Ten clicks? Great. What are your options in getting there?

"Steal car or motorcycle, go down Red Line Highway. A bit safer, but there is motorcycle gangs around. Other choice is go to Central Station, take train directly. Much quicker, but have to go through long way to get to it, plus more locals to encounter." It's here that she shakes her head. "Is stupid no matter where you go, but train station at least much faster."

Right. You'll think about it, then.

"Anything else you want ask?" Despite her obvious reluctance, it seems that Xiaomei's getting into the role of your support. "If have something, then ask now. Signal not guaranteed to always be there for communication, you know."

"Alright, she say she have enough, so enough. No need to help more than ask. No need to go extra mile, because Malal know what Malal do. Right?" Dear god this girl loves to grumble. "Okay. Synchronize watches, it is now 10:32:44 exactly. Evac in four hours, okay? So do not spend too much time playing around."

Right, right. You'll be fine. Four hours is a lot of time, anyway, and you're used to working alone. You'll find Valnikov before too long and be out of here before anyone even knows you were here.

Xiaomei narrows her eyes at you. "Malal, you forget about the Eighth, right? Worry about gangs, worry about bad girls, but also worry about other Officios in there. Girls from the Eighth are crazy, crazier than you. And they do not like it if they find strange girl from Ninth suddenly appearing in their territory without permit or papers. You know what they do? They KILL your ass! Eat your intestines like noodle!"

Ah, they're not that bad. No one is that bad.

"Hah! Stupid! Do not cry to Xiaomei if you get your intestines eaten! Will not fly and rescue you this time!"

Your support ends the call with a huff and a beep, your HUD blanking out and giving you an uninterrupted view of the city before you. You shake your head, before getting up from your crouch and start to make your way back down on the street. Might as well get started. Ten fucking kilometers...that's a whole lot of legwork--

"Well, well. What do we have here?" You hear a rough, nasal voice bark from behind you, and you turn to see a musclebound punk wearing camo pants, a tank top and the most ridiculous mohawk you've ever seen. The kind with a physics-defying hole in it. "You're not from around here, are ya, kid?"

Oh, great. Varrigan Welcoming committee's here. Just what you needed.

"Looks like one of Rin-Rin's boytoys," Another punk huffs from behind you - one of what looks to be a small gang melting from the alleways' shadows, dragging chains and bats and pipes behind them. "No...wait. Not a boytoy. I can smell her cunt from here." It's then that the punk laughs, loud and long, holding his massive round belly. "Boys, we've got a sparklie here, right in the flesh! And looks like she's fresh, too!"

...What? Your suit's sealed. How can he...ugh. Absolutely disgusting.

"For real?" The first punk's bulbous, yellowing eyes go wide, and his rubbery lips stretch to reveal blackened teeth in a horrible rictus of a grin. "Rin-Rin charges way too fucking much for her girls at the Bistro...and it's been a while since we managed to hunt one down."

He licks his teeth, the purple veiny appendage doing nothing to scrape off the strata of plaque covering the skewed bits of enamel embedded in his bleeding gums. "This one's a bit skinny, though, but I'll take it." The punk steps forward, crunching one thick-fingered fist into another, cracking his knuckles in one popping cacophony. "I'll share with you guys when I'm done!"

Oh, he's going to SHARE. That's nice. Yeah. This one's mother raised him right. You shake your head here, before reaching behind you to unclip your crowbar from its magnetic lock on your back.

...Wait. Maybe you don't need to kill people to get what you want? Perhaps you can try to communicate.

Yeah. Yeah, that sounds good. Communication's good. You should try it once every now and then.

"Why don't you take your pretty helmet off and let us see you, love?" The first punk - obviously the leader - says, towering over you. The great lumbering idiot's probably two fucking meters of pure beefy asshole.

[]Nope. Crowbar to the face.
[]Try to communicate. "Any of you guys want to lend me a motorcycle?"

Hoodlums. Punks. Street trash. You know his sort - idiots who got into the wrong side of the law, either for fun, for profit, or a simple-minded yet violent dislike of authority in general. People who thought that respect isn't automatically deserved if you have a badge and a gun.

You don't hate them. Most of your best friends were the same. Hell, you've been one nearly all your life, going full time when you dropped out of middle school and worked as a runner for one of the small-time Yakuza in Mitakihara.

They treated you like a kid, then. No respect at all, worth little more than a glance. You didn't get through a single day without being threatened of murder, or rape, or both at the same time.

It was only when they found out you were handy with a crowbar - as well as killing the Magical Girl sent by a rival family to kill the overboss you were working for - that you earned their respect, and the rank of enforcer. They started seeing you less as a weedy little shit with pink hair and more of someone they needed to look out for. They even started calling you Kaneda-san, and taught you all you needed to know.

They even became your family for a time. The family you never had.

These, though? These punks didn't have the same kind of respect the folks back home did. Yes, it was a black kind of respect, the sort only earned when you prove that you can slit someone's throat and watch as the light goes out of their eyes - but it was respect all the same. Something like that is wasted on scum like these.

Most especially the one in front, looking down at you like you're a piece of meat.

"Oh, what's she going to do, now?" Mohawk crows loudly as you reach behind you, pulling your crowbar free from its maglock with a tug. "Is she gonna hit me with her little crowbar, here? Ooh, this is right scary, lads!" The peanut gallery hollers with laughter. "Look, she's gonna wave it like a wand, gonna sparkle me to death with it--"

"Kneecap." You tenderly whisper into the vox inside your helmet, the outward-facing speakers turning it into a murderer's hiss.

"Eh?" Mohawk raises an eyebrow. "Did she just say--"

One swing. Right-handed. Textbook perfect diagonal, downward. The part of it where it curves into its two-pronged hook crunching hard into meat, into bone. The shock of the impact slams up your wrist, bounces off your elbow and up your shoulder, along with the tactile sensation of something disintegrating under the force of you strike.

A wet, juicy crunch, and something tears from the punk's knee, flying a short distance before landing on the ground with a soggy slap.

Silence. Then--

"KNEEECAAAAP! MY FUCKING KNEECAAAAAP!" Mohawk howls, his bloodshot eyes bugging out, all color draining from his face as he screams - and he falls back on his ruined leg, kneeling down on his unshattered one. His huge meaty fists trying to clamp down on the bleeding, ragged hole that had been a working, load-bearing joint. "YOU BITCH, LOOK WHAT YOU DID TO MY--"

Second wing. Backhand. Hook first. There's no crunch this time, no sensation of any bones breaking - but instead the soft resistance of meat and skin and cartilage giving way, tearing off. The punk howls again, louder this time.

"FAAACE! MY FACE! OH GOD, MY FACE!"

He falls to the ground, bloody hands now covering the bloody mask he's screaming through.

Insultingly, none of his mates come to his rescue. Not even the guy who outed you as a sparklie. You snort at this - if it'd been any of your family back home, they'd have gutted you even before you made your first move. They'd have torn you apart even before you could have pulled your crowbar free from its maglock.

These idiots just watched you beat the shit out of their leader.

Shameful. Just shameful.

What do you do now?

[]Finish Mohawk off. Put him out of his misery. Then ask for a vehicle.

They're all staring at you, slackjawed, wide-eyed, faces pale like they've seen a ghost. Weapons hanging useless in their hands, when they should already be trying to kill you with them.

Deplorable. Absolutely disgusting. This is what they've been reduced to.

You give your head a brief shake, before moving toward Mohawk, the musclebound brute now trying to crawl away from you, to safety. You plant one steel-toed boot down the back of his head, pressing his face into the ground, making him kiss dirt - and he struggles wildly here, thick-fingered hands scrabbling at your leg, his cries muffled and pathetic. You press down just the slightest bit - and blood starts to pool where his face meets the asphalt.

No one? No one's going to even challenge you?

You let out a snort, and it's then that you bring down the crowbar, hook first, into the top of Mohawk's skull - both your gloved hands gripping the prising end for the most amount of leverage. There's a crack, followed by a liquid pop of released pressure - and the briny stink of exposed brain matter reaches even through your helmet's air filters.

The hoodlum under your foot shivers here, tiny little spasms of misfiring nerves upon death. He shivers one last time as you jerk your crowbar free. You wipe the hook clean on his trousers, still shaking your head, and it's here that you turn to face the rest of his gang.

"Anyone feel charitable enough to lend me their motorcycle?" You say as politely and as cheerfully as you can - the vox spitting out your words in a snarl.

"Y-you...you killed him," the smart punk from earlier said. "Christ, you killed 'im."

You shrug, here. "Still waiting for the motorcycle. Need it for where I'm going." You make to replace your crowbar back onto its maglock, and the entire gang - the ENTIRE GANG surrounding you - flinches. "Well? I don't have all day."

Other magical girls, huh? Well. Could be rogues, having fun shooting non-magical fish in a Varrigan City-shaped barrel. You won't feel too bad in stealing their ride if that's the case.

"I can show you where we saw them last, if you want." Piercings offers. "Just, uh...don't kill us like you did Zeed. We're just tryin' to survive, here."

"One of them had, like, scars all over her face, man. Like she'd been sucking face with a lawnmower, or somethin'. The other one had these crazy knives on her belt, she had like six of them, and she also had this weird checkered scarf...black and white, you know, like on that flag when someone wins a race?"

Whatever it is, you need a motorcycle. You can probably leg it to the train station, but you run the risk of attracting too much attention, especially with all the gangers coming out of the woodwork. Malal was always a badass. She had to tone down her antics to play the "Better than horrible Cop" to Kharn's Khornate-BerserCop.

Kharn isn't here yet, and even if she was, she's a weak noob who hasn't even got the basic framework of her skull-throne yet.

You tell Piercings to lead you to the motorcycle, and he's only too glad to lead you away from the rest of the gang.

Only watch-wearing dildos take the train, after all. And from your own personal experience, there's a lot that can go wrong with public transportation. Sure, the Red Line Highway's not all that safe, but at least you can handle anything that comes at you there on your own terms. In a train, you're all but trapped inside a moving metal shell until it either comes to a stop or explodes.

Piercings leads you deeper into Varrigan City's downtown area, the punk wisely using back alleys and connecting passages to slip past the main roads and streets. Not exactly the most direct route, but it keeps him - and you, more importantly - out of sight of the gangs currently infesting those main junctions. And good thing, too - the lot choking the streets look like they're gearing up for a war, bandoliers of ammo draped onto chests, hands tightly clenched around guns, fingers stroking triggers.

You ask the punk leading you up a building rooftop about it. What's the occasion?

"Dunno, we never stay too long in this part of town." Piercings whispers back. "We're almost there. Keep your head down, those folks love a moving target, and love practicing their shooting even more."

You shake your head at this, and continue following him - until he finally stops at what looks to be the more run-down part of Downtown Varrigan City. The slums, where houses are built from corrugated steel sheets and wood and cardboard and whatever else anyone can get their hands on. You spot a few children peeking out from windows and behind half-open doors, only to be pulled away by hasty parents.

And it's here that you see it, parked beside a fire hydrant.

One of the most beautiful bikes you've ever seen.

It's...it's a giant white beast of a motorcycle, with orange and red highlights. Its tires fat and oversized, to accommodate its hulking frame. But despite how big it is, how unwieldly it looks, you know that it can turn on a dime if the rider wants it to. And you know how absurdly fast it can be.

You know, because you've ridden in it before. Hell, you've driven it before, when you had to drag its owner out of an assassination mission gone bad, with blood leaking out of three different holes on her back and three squads of magical girls at your tail. Each one eager to take the considerable bounties off your heads.

Schpeltiger. Its name is Schpeltiger. And Schpeltiger being here means SHE's here too. But what the fuck is she doing here?

You turn back towards Piercings, to ask once more about the people he saw riding the motorcycle - only to find that he's gone. Must have run off, or something.

Punks. Seriously. Didn't even try to rabbit punch you, or anything. Just ran, period. It's almost sickening.

Ah, well. You have a bike to steal. Or borrow.

She won't mind if you take it for a spin. It's always been like that with the girl - sure, she's crazier than a pack of nuts, but she's always been great when you need something from her. She'd pull off her own underwear and give it to you if you asked for it. An unrelenting kindness and warmth, to match just how batshit insane she really is.

You approach Schpeltiger, and carefully pat its dash. You throw your leg over it, and tap its control panel touchscreen. Nicole had you jury-rig it with a touchscreen starter, just in case she lost her keys and needed Schpeltiger to get her someplace fast. She made you change the password, sure, but she didn't say anything about you setting your own emergency password. And this is an emergency.

Just as you're about to start it, though--

"What? Who?" The voice, already menacingly tight with menace despite being flat and deadpan, gets a rather dangerous edge as soon as you mention that girl's name. "How'd you know that name? And what's with the Japanese accent?" It's then that you feel her grab at your suit's collar, pulling you roughly out of Schpeltiger's seat. "And I fucking told you to get off the fucking bike, bitch!"

You could've broken out of her grasp and broken her arm in three different places, but you don't - you instead let her do what she wanted, only moving to steady yourself from the rough treatment and save yourself from a faceful of asphalt.

"Now, hands up, and tell me how the fuck do you know Nico." It's here, then, that you see the Magical Girl that's put herself in between you and Schpeltiger. ...Scrawny, just like you, with a costume that's pretty much just a long salmon-pink jacket ending just below the waist, with checkered leggings and a checkered scarf. Two bandoliers of knives, three each, hang from a harness of sorts around her waist and hips. But you don't notice these much as you notice her eyes - dull, unpolished copper that looks like they've seen too much for her age. This, combined with rather deep eyebags, a mouth pressed hard into a frown and disheveled, shoulder-length dark brown hair - makes for the most tired-looking Magical Girl you've ever seen. She looks like she died and forgot to lie down.

And yet, she's young. Probably younger than you, at that.

"I'm going to ask you one more time, Japan." She steps forward, and it's here that you realize she's been pointing one of her knives at you. ...No, it's not just a knife, it's a fucking kitchen knife!

Right, okay, fun's over. You draw the line at getting cutlery being pointed at you like that.

One more time, and then I'm going to stab you. How the fuck do you know Nicoblaghaaghagh." And just like that, you make the threatening American Magical Girl spill her breakfast down the front of her cute costume, the vomit flooding past the hand she tried to clamp over her mouth with.

Hah. Works every time, and never gets old.

"Kaneda?!"

You blink at this, and snap your gaze to whoever just shouted your family name. What meets your gaze is a familiar and friendly face - one hidden underneath a series of cruel scars.

"Kaneda! It's you, right?" Nicole Touchdown grins, stepping forward, the activated beam saber in her hand turning off and disappearing up her jacket's sleeve. Her long blonde ponytail swishing behind her with every step she took. "Aw, man, you're still short! I thought you were gonna wish for a few more inches, at least, ya little runt! Or some boobs at the very least!"

You'll admit the thought crossed your mind, you reply dryly.

"Hah! Well, I ain't gonna pry further, I hate hearing about you selling out to those alien fuckers." Nicole waves a gloved hand. "What are you doin' here, anyway? This is a long way from Japan, and--" It's here that she sees Wendy, still trying to stop her sudden case of bulimia. "Hey, Wendy! What're you -- eww! What's going on?" She turns to you. "Kaneda, what's happening to Wendy? Why's she blowing chunks like it's a hobby?"

You did that. Unfortunate reflex; it happens when you get sharp stuff pointed at you.

"Fuck...you..." Wendy says weakly, before doubling over once more.

"Well, stop it! It's gross!" She makes a face, here, before stopping and turning to look at you. "...Wait. You wished for VOMIT powers?" Nicole's eyes go wide at you. "You're forgiven. I forgive you for EVERYTHING."

Hah! Well, it's not really VOMIT powers, but--

She looks back at Wendy, still in awe, before turning back to you with stars in her eyes. "...Do it to me! I wanna see what it feels like!"

Despite your faceplate, you can't help but grin. It...it feels good to have Nicole joke with you around again. When you called her up to tell you about how your sparkly-murdering days with her as a fellow assassin is over - with you effectively joining the opposing team - she swore up and down that she would find you and kill you, and told you how much she hated you. All while crying like a big, angry baby with its face all cut up.

She never returned your calls, your messages, or even your direct messages on Chirpee. Her hating you...you'll freely admit it, it made you doubt if you were in fact doing the right thing. Then you remembered what your own reflection told you. The one with yellow eyes, that always appeared in your dreams. That the right thing will always be the most painful thing to do.

Anyway, you tell Nicole that it IS indeed a super secret sparkly mission. One with a four-hour time limit, no less. But you're only borrowing it - there's an important distinction, there. And sure, any other bike would've done, but how could you even resist Schpeltiger?

Nicole nods at you, here, seemingly accepting your explanation with the right amount of gravitas. "Well, I really can't blame you there, can I? This is a seriously good-looking piece of hardware you helped me build." She pets Schpeltiger's windshield affectionately, like how one would lovingly pet a cherished animal. "I even make sure to maintain her weekly, just like you always told me to. Nitro tanks are fresh too, just replaced them yesterday! Full charge and everything!"

Full charge? Sweet.

"And if my good friend Kaneda's looking to borrow, hell, I'd hand over the keys in a heartbeat!" She jangles the keys to Schpeltiger in front of you. "But...you're not my bestest friend Kaneda anymore, right? You're Malal now, of the...what's the number again? Eighth? Tenth?"

Ninth. The Ninth, you remind her.

"Right, sorry." Nicole giggles. "The Ninth! Wearing that funky skull helmet an' biker suit and everything. You're a sparkly now, one of them." It's here that her mood grows sombre, melancholic, her voice dropping. "You're not even wearing Jones anymore, are you? Or Tony?"

You shake your head here. Nicole's talking about your masks - the latex animal masks you used to wear whenever you and her went up against yakuza, against the mafia, and the magical girls that worked for them. Jones was your favorite, a crocodile mask with an oversized snout. Tony was Nicole's own mask that she gave you for your birthday - a tiger mask that's had so much blood splashed on it that some of the stains had become permanent.

"Figured not. No sparkly deserves to wear them." It's here that she turns away from you, wiping at her eyes. "Dammit, I promised myself I wouldn't turn soap opera on you like this. Fuck's sake, Kaneda. Why?"

You told her already. A thousand times, over the phone. You need to do this.

"Yeah, yeah. I get it. Some kind of mission that you need to do." She sniffs here, before smiling again. "Well, I was the one who kept praying at Church that you'd find something to keep yourself busy, right? Guess I got what I prayed for." It's here that she tosses you her keys. "Park her somewhere safe when you're done, and put the keys in the lock box under the seat. I'll have Jade pick her up."

You catch her keys in midair, stunned.

"I know I can't see your face through that stupid visor of yours, but I know you." The blonde grins this time, her scars moving along with the gesture, and despite how gruesome they are they serve to make her look...well, prettier. There's no other word for it. "Go on, before I change my mind and kill you for being a sparkly." She sniffs, here. "God damn sparklies, can't stand them."

You throw your leg over Schpeltiger and start her up. The beast roars to life underneath you. What about Wendy, though? She's a sparkly. You look at the stricken girl, and you see her now working to clean the vomit off of her costume, some color already having returned to her face.

"She doesn't count. She's practically my girlfriend." Nicole cackles. "Now go on! Do whatever you have to do, and stuff!"

...Wait. What about them, then?

"Ah, we won't need it much." The blonde shakes her head. "I figure Wendy and I'll have more fun using the train. We're not on a time limit, and we're just sightseeing." It's here that she shrugs. "Besides, you and public transportation? Not happening."

...Well, if she's sure. You thank her for the help, and make to gun Schpeltiger, when she calls you back. "Kaneda!"

Yeah? You turn back towards her.

"Kill a sparkly for me, will ya?"

You chuckle at this, before giving her a nod. Sure. You nod at Wendy, too. Got to say goodbye to Vomit-tan.

"W-what..?" Wendy's eyes go wide. "What did you just call me--"

You finally gun Schpeltiger's throttle, its engine drowning out the rest of her protests, and with that you leave your best friend and her sparkly, vomity girlfriend.

Heading to Red Line Highway. To Asian Town.

On a mission to rescue someone from this shithole city, so she can save the world right after. Or at least help doing so.

PROSE MAGICA

"How is she?" A voice asked.

"Stabilized," a second voice replied. "She should be waking up any second now."

"Great, great," the first voice paused for a moment, taking a deep breath. "Thanks for doing this, Red. It... It really means a lot."

"Ain't no sweat for Snowflake. Gotta keep the old lady's girl alive, after all."

"You look pretty swell in that outfit, by the way."

"Oh for fuck's-"

Odette groaned. An all too familiar tingle ran through her body - the feeling of freshly regenerated tissue and organs. It felt as though she'd just gotten the best sleep of her life. Her mind was refreshed, her body felt new. It was really as much as she could have asked for, given the past week. Her one eye blinked open and she winced as blinding white filled her vision.

"Speak of the devil."

The one-eyed girl pulled herself upright, blinking and squinting until her vision finally adjusted. The room was typical of the Officio's sickbay; a standard hospital bed, a couch to her right and the door at the far end of the left wall. The tables on either end of the couch were covered with cards, bouquets and what Odette sincerely hoped were boxes of sweets. The couch itself was occupied by the retired Vindicare only known as the Russian, polishing her rifle with a rag. Her wife, the Bartender, fiddled with medical equipment to the left of the bed, dressed in what appeared to be a light pink nurse's outfit, complete with a little cap. Finally, at the end of the bed sat Lotte Laufson, stroking a white blob in her lap that the former Warmaster could only assume was the Seventeenth incubator.

Odette rubbed her one eye and let out a long yawn. Her brain still hadn't fully shifted into gear as she greeted the room with a simple, "Mornin' guys."

All eyes suddenly shifted to the one-eyed girl - even those of the moustachioed incubator. A moment passed in silence. Then another, and another after that.

"So, uh," the former warmaster started, "can anyone maybe get me some juice or something?"

Everything seemed to speed up the instant she stopped speaking. It was as if time had stopped for a few precious seconds and was suddenly trying to catch up to where it should have been. The blonde at the edge of the bed burst into tears, launching the incubator off of her lap as she embraced Odette in a smothering hug. The one-eyed girl's vision went dark as her face was abruptly swallowed by a soft and pillowy sensation.

"I was worried sick!" The blonde cried. "I thought you- you- you were dead, you s-stupid- stupid... STUPID!"

Finally relinquishing Odette's face from the grasp of her cleavage, Lotte sunk lower, burying her own sniffling face against the former Warmaster's chest. "I- I thought..."

"Come on, Lotte," the silvery-haired girl muttered, still barely awake as she ran one of her delicate hands through the Callidus' hair. "You didn't think I'd die that easy, did you?"

"You should've seen her," the Bartender said, passing a glass of juice into Odette's free hand. "And here I thought we retired from babysittin' you two dumbasses."

The one-eyed girl took a quick sip of the orangey-yellow juice, then nodded contentedly. "Peach."

"Your favourite. Still remember."

Odette nodded again, suddenly shifting her gaze to the redhead's clothing. "Cute outfit."

"Come on! It's standar-"

"She is wearing because it is making her look cute!" The Russian interrupted, rising from her seat to step over to her partner and plant a kiss on the redhead's cheek. "Is okay for her to do the dressing up some times, too! Believe or not, she is still girl on squishy inside parts, even when she makes the grouchy pretends."

"Th-thanks?" The Bartender muttered, half a question.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:44 No.28270423

"But," the blonde foreigner added, taking a seat beside Odette, opposite the still-sniffling Callidus, "do not be mistake. Your big sisters did much worrying. It is good to see you safe, malenkaya." She punctuated the statement by ruffling the smaller girl's white hair and planting a motherly kiss atop her head - forcing Odette to turn her head away bashfully.

"I, um," the former warmaster mumbled, trying to regain her words. "Th-thanks, everyone. This, uh, this really means a lot. I didn't... I didn't think-"

"That's your problem, shorty," the Bartender butted in, "you don't think."

The Russian snapped her gaze to the redhead and made a "Tsh!" noise to silence her wife.

"I guess I didn't really think people would miss me all that much," Odette concluded, almost whispering as she reached the end of her statement. She gave a last sheepish shrug as her eye shifted between the three girls in the room, unsure of who exactly to address. "I'm... I'm sorry, guys."

"Stupid!" Lotte cried out again, pounding the silver-haired girl's chest with her fist - all without lifting her head.

"What she said," the Bartender muttered, smirking.

"Yes, yes, you are two of the same kind," the Russian laughed as she rose from her seat, hooking her finger under the redhead's short sleave. "For now we will leave the little ones. You must return uniform to supply closet, yes?"

"But they don't keep them in the- Oh," the Bartender paused as a grin slowly crept across her face. "Ooooh, yeah. Yeah. Definitely gotta return it. To the supply closet."

"Yes, dorogaya," the blonde sighed. "Subtlety is not strongest suit, is known. Now come."

"Coming!"

With that, the couple disappeared through the door, leaving Odette alone with the Callidus who had found her way into the former Warmaster's arms. Her mind was still clouded in a painkiller-induced haze - even the edges of her vision seemed a bit fuzzier than normal. The last thing that she could remember was leaving the cottage in the woods. Everything else melded together in one big blur that seemed to waver between dream and reality. She could pick out bits and pieces, but couldn't entirely make sense of them. Odette could swear that it was none other than the white Culexus herself that had driven her back. Then there were the images that didn't seem to match up with anything. A pastel shade of pink. A pair of jagged, crystalline talons coloured with the dusky crimson of dried blood. A ragged, empty eye-socket. And gold - something about gold that seemed to invade every dark crevice of her mind.

The silver-haired girl's brief musings were interrupted as Lotte began to stir once more, turning her face up to look Odette in the eye.

"Hey," she muttered, red-eyed and sniffling.

"Hey," Odette greeted her in return, smiling gently.

"Ah, erm, excuse me," a Fubey added, rolling out from under the hospital bed. "I apologize, but I believe we agreed that I would be allowed to speak with Odette first, Miss Laufson."

The blonde groaned as she seemed to slither off of the bed. "Yeah, yeah. You won," she grumbled. "I'll see you in a bit, O."

Odette waved as the Callidus stepped out of the room. The incubator balled himself up like a big, fat coiled spring, before launching himself at the edge of the bed. Fubey made it halfway up, his paws out-stretched as he clawed at the sheets, grunting and groaning to heave his entire mass up onto the bed. He placed himself in the one-eyed girl's lap, staring at her with his beady red eyes, his face inexpressive.

"My god, you've gotten fat while I was away," Odette remarked.

"You know full well that I am the same size as I always was, Odette," Fubey replied, blinking.

The former Warmaster shrugged and giggled to herself, a lazy, painkiller-adled smile on her face. "My mistake. You're just as fat as you always were."

"Are you quite finished?"

"Yeah. Yeah, I'm good," Odette laughed, waving a hand at the incubator. "I'm sorry, go on."

"Thank you," Fubey said with the slightest hint of derision. "When you were found, you were extraordinarily close to becoming a witch. It is no small miracle that you were returned to us intact. I look forward to a full debriefing when you are in better condition. Might I ask how you are feeling now?"

Odette looked up and down herself, then replied, "A bit tingly. Pretty tender, but otherwise okay."

"Excellent. When we found you, you were in... rather poor condition, to say the least. Once the ice was removed from the wound in your shoulder, your arm very nearly fell off entirely. While it was a simple matter to heal the injury, you will note that a scar has formed in its place. While I am aware that you detest retaining such blemishes, I was unable to remove it, despite my best efforts."

Odette peered down, hesitantly lifting the light hospital gown away from her chest. There, just below her left shoulder, was a circular scar, no more than an inch across, marring her pale skin exactly where the golden hook had pierced her. It looked, strangely enough, unusually similar to a bullet hole in glass. Odette had always made it a matter of pride to allow any injuries to heal completely, a habit picked up from her predecessor. 'Scars are for magical girls with something to prove,' as Brie had always told her.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:48 No.28270474

"But, I take it you are not feeling any mental side effects?" Fubey asked.

"I don't think so," the one-eyed girl responded, blinking. "Why?"

"Good, good," the incubator nodded. "When you were found, you were clutching a set of golden chains and hooks rather tightly. I assume they were the ones mentioned in Mister Rossi's account. According to Miss Laufson, you were also repeating some phrase involving 'angels'. You have no recollection of this?"

Odette shook her head. "Nope. After I left the cabin, everything's kind of hazy. I didn't even know I brought those things with me."

"Interesting," Fubey nodded again. "As I said, you were holding onto them rather tightly. Regrettably, the Russian was forced to break some of your fingers to remove them."

"Ah..." The one-eyed girl muttered.

"Yes... I may still schedule you for a class two psychological evaluation, just to be sure," the incubator continued. "The hooks have been placed in our maximum security vault until we can determine whether or not they possess any anomalous properties. Currently, only yourself and the Warmaster have been given clearance to handle them. Miss Corbin has been assigned to investigate any previous reports of such weapons from my brothers. It had been brought to my attention earlier, but the reports seemed irrelevant at the time."

"And what'shername?" Odette asked. "The little shit?"

"Miss Vance?"

"That's the one. I brought her gem back, right?"

"Indeed, you did. She has been placed in holding cell nine-oh-one," Fubey answered. "I would suggest interrogating her prior to your debriefing. She is to be detained indefinitely until we are confident that she can provide no further useful information."

"The ninth circle?" Odette asked with a devilish grin. "Thought you would have decomissioned that place by now."

"They are still perfectly adequate silent rooms, despite their secondary function being inoperable."

"Until now," the silver-haired girl added, smirking.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:49 No.28270484

"Yes," the incubator agreed, his voice seeming to trail off, "until now. I am quite pleased with your handling of this assignment, Odette. Your behaviour has, for the most part, been exemplary. I look forward to utilising your talents once more, assuming you are willing."

"It'll be good to be back, if you'll still take me."

"As I said," Fubey replied, "it would be an honour to see you return to service. You will be pleased to know that Miss Bernard has made a full recovery. I believe she wished to speak to you about her father's funeral. The only matter remaining is that of a recent amendment to the Officio's contracts. Due to the incident with Miss Vance, I have deemed it prudent to add a remote observation clause. With respect to your privacy, I have not amended your own contract as of yet. All of the girls have been given until the end of the month to report in. Should you miss the deadline for any reason - barring anything too extreme - your supply of grief seeds shall be cut off until I am able to perform the amendment. Is this agreeable?"

"Guess so," the one-eyed girl shrugged. "Seems to work just fine for the others."

"Wonderful. I believe that will be all then?"

"Yeah," Odette nodded, trying to think of any unresolved matters, "yeah, I think that's it. If I'm gonna be running combat missions again, I've got a bit of a shopping list for Holly. Just a few things that would have come in handy earlier."

"I will see to it that you get what you need. I believe we have kept Miss Laufson waiting long enough, then. Good afternoon, Odette."

With his peace said, the incubator leapt off of the bed and disappeared beneath it. After a moment, a dull whirring was heard as Fubey pulled out, riding atop his roomba steed. One arm of his prehensile moustache seemed to extend unnaturally as he made his way to the door, using it to grasp the knob. Just as the incubator was about to open the door, Odette called out to him once more.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:50 No.28270498

"Ah, Fubey, one- one more thing," she stammered. "About the past couple years. I, uh, I'm really sorry. For everything. I... I'm gonna try to make things right."

The incubator froze in place, the hand of his moustache still resting on the door knob.

"One day of good does not make up for two years of wrong, Odette," Fubey replied, slowly turning his head to look the former Warmaster in the eye, "but, it is certainly a start. I look forward to our next meeting."

Odette watched as the incubator rode out of the room, smiling at the absurdity of the sight. After several moments, Lotte stepped back into the room, this time wearing a pink nurse's uniform, near identical to that worn by the Bartender. Her eyes were still noticeably puffy and red - though, the flow of tears had finally been stymied. The Callidus made her way to the top of the bed, her stride lacking its usual enticing swagger. The one-eyed girl shifted over, making room for the blonde to take a seat by her side and allowing her to hold one of Odette's pale, dainty hands.

Lotte glanced nervously at the former Warmaster and held her hand tightly, as if fearing that she would disappear at any moment. "So, um," she said, "how are you feeling?"

"A little sore," Odette answered, giving the Callidus a weak, but reassuring smile. "Been through worse. Probably. Got a neat scar, though," she added, pulling her hospital gown aside to show off the circular blemish. "Tubby says it won't go away."

"Huh," Lotte muttered, tilting her head to look at it. "Weird. So... what happened?"

"Not really sure," Odette replied, shrugging. "I slipped up at the mansion, next thing I know the little shit's got me strung up in the woods like a slab of meat. Don't remember much of it. Just that I woke up feeling... refreshed, I guess. Like, suddenly I've got some kind of," the one-eyed girl waved her fingers through the air, trying to find the right words, "inner harmony or something like that."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:51 No.28270515

"Really?" The Callidus asked, with no small hint of disbelief.

"Yeah, I don't know," Odette shrugged. "What about you? Anything exciting happen while I was gone?"

"Well, um, a couple things, I guess," Lotte said, anxiously chewing her lip. "I- I decided to stop talking to those people. Y'know, the, uh, the ones that-"

"Said they'd make me Warmaster again?"

"Yeah," the blonde mumbled, "them. I don't know what they want, but I don't think I want anything to do with it anymore."

"You said they were from another Officio, right?" Odette asked. "Probably wanted someone in power who was under their thumb or something."

"Whatever," Lotte grumbled, shaking her head. "Doesn't matter now, anyways. I'm done with them."

"Good to hear. And the other thing?"

"Ah, well," Lotte murmured as her breath caught in her throat. Her hands fidgeted, holding onto Odette's one hand even more tightly. "It's just- A-actually, maybe now's not the best time, anyways, y'know? It can wait until you're better a-and-"

"Lotte..."

"It's nothing. I just-"

"Lotte."

The Callidus bit her lip and groaned, almost bringing herself to tears once again. "God, fine. It's just... I was wondering if maybe, y'know, since you've got this new lease on life and everything, maybe you might want to... retire. Together. With me."

"Ah..." Odette's voice trailed off. She couldn't quite think of exactly what to say to the blonde sitting at her side.

"I- I mean, we've both been doing this for a while, right? You're going on to seven years, I'm almost at six. Maybe we could find a nice quiet place... You could do your poetry or whatever. A-and, y'know, Red and the Rusky, they, uh, they were a couple years younger than us when they retired, right? I just thought, I don't know-"

"But, we aren't..."

"I know, but maybe-"

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:53 No.28270539

"Lotte," Odette smiled gently, squeezing the Callidus' hand. "I, um, I'm grateful for the offer. I am. Really. But, I was kind of planning to get back into the game. I already told the boss that I would, anyway. I was even thinking that I might put my name in for Equerry, assuming Therese didn't settle on that shitstain Argente."

"Oh..."

"I just," the one-eyed girl shrugged, not quite able to look Lotte in the eye, "I don't want to be like some of the other Warmasters. I don't want to let myself just fade off into obscurity and be remembered for being a screw up. I know I'm not what Brie hoped for, but I can at least try to fix my mistakes."

Lotte nodded silently. She didn't dare stop looking at the hand she was holding. She couldn't let Odette see her crying again. "Yeah," she muttered, voice strained. "Yeah, I understand. I should... I should probably g-"

As she was about to stand, Lotte felt Odette squeeze her hand once more, holding her back.

"Hold up, I'm not done yet," the former Warmaster stated. "I appreciate the offer, and... I'm sorry I can't take you up on it, but... maybe we can compromise a bit?"

>> ☐ Prose Magica: Ballad of the Seventeenth Part 14 archivalfag 11/13/13(Wed)14:54 No.28270557

Lotte blinked, her attention snapping to the other girl against her will. "What?"

"I was just thinking that, y'know," Odette started, rocking her head back and forth as she tried to find the right words, "my apartment got trashed and it was a bit of a shithole to begin with. I heard the building might have bedbugs, too. And there's this one outlet that doesn't work and the super won't return my calls and basically what I'm trying to say is... If you're cool with it, maybe I can stay with you for, say, the indefinite future?"

"You," the Callidus muttered, her eyes widening in disbelief, "you want to move in with me?"

"I guess that would be a better way of putting it, yeah. Assuming you want some washed up deadbeat like me hanging around."

"Of- of course, that would-" Lotte tried to force words out, coming out as mere half-sentences. "I mean- Yeah, I-"

"I get it," Odette said, waving the blonde over. "Now shut up and c'mere. I'm cold."

Therese Witton drummed her fingers on her desk, anxiously swaying back and forth in her chair. She couldn't seem to take her eyes off of the black Warmaster's cap sitting at the corner of her desk. Over the past week, she had felt more like a Warmaster than at any point in her two plus months of office. There was no one to hold her hand, to pick up the pieces if she screwed up. It suddenly seemed so real. It was exhilirating.

"Warmaster," Holly called out over the intercom.

Therese glanced over, only offering a quizical, "Hm?"

"Odette's woken up, if you want to go see her."

"Oh, yeah," the Warmaster answered. "Yeah, I will in a bit."

The intercom was silent for a moment before Holly's voice came through again. "Everything alright?"

"I'm fine," Therese replied dismissively.

"You're sure?" Holly asked again. "You know how we've talked about bottling things up."

"I'm FINE, Holly," Therese insisted. "I'll go see Odette in a little while."

"If you say so."

Following the distinctive click of the Vanus disconnecting, Therese leaned back in her chair let out a sigh of relief, tilting her head back as far as it would go. It had seemed so real. Yet, as soon as Odette returned, that old feeling came crashing back to her like being shaken out of a dream. That hollow, oppressive feeling that she was nothing more than a substitute, keeping the seat warm until Odette was ready to take the position back.

She was relieved, of course. How could she not be? The person who had taught Therese everything she knew was safe. Her mentor, her comrade, her friend. Which was why it made her sick to her stomach to know that deep down, in a part of her that she didn't want to admit existed, she was disappointed to see Odette return.

WON'T YOU BECOME A MAGICAL G.I.?

We boarded the Osprey in our neural underlayer, a black, skintight bodysuit that acted as an interface with our battle armor. I kept my mouth shut - Linde had explained we wouldn't be using our normal powered armor. Jyuro had seen fit to outfit us with something called 'Cadre' armor, a term which, when he mentioned it, caused my normally unflappable squad leader to sit bolt upright in her chair, jaw working soundlessly. She had remained silent ever since, and as we stepped up the ramp, she moved woodenly to one of the huge, sleek pods in the Osprey's bay.
There were four of them, one for each of us, I surmised. Linde palmed a scanner on hers, and the pod cracked open with a hiss. My eyes widened, and I heard a quiet gasp from Rev.
Inside the pod was a suit of armor unlike any I'd ever seen. Our normal Mark IV PCA suits were rough, angular things, an amalgamation of armor plates and black ballistic material designed to protect vital areas and allow for maximum survivability. They weren’t perfect, but they did their job well. These suits on the other hand…
Everything about them sang of death. The sleek, smooth joints, the seamless helmet, the way the matte black coating seemed to suck in all light that touched it were a paean to swift, efficient destruction. I could take on an army with one of these.
Linde's hand clenched and unclenched. I filed the gesture away for later, and strapped myself into my crash webbing. Sonja sat beside me, with Rev and Linde opposite us. The pitched whine of the rotors rose with a deep, throaty roar, and the assault ramp closed as the Osprey took wing.
Sonja broke the squad's silence. "I don't remember seeing those in the Armory."
Linde shook her head. "These are from before your time. We don't use them much anymore."
"Why?"
Rev grimaced. "Mostly because these are the only four left. The Sixteenth used to field dozens."

I raised an eyebrow. "What happened?"
Our red-haired XO clammed up completely. Linde's expression was dark.
"The single greatest loss of life in the history of the XVI. Shadow Moses."
I cocked my head. "Never heard of it."
"I'm not surprised. It's not...talked about. But you may as well know the history of the armor you're about to inherit."
---
"Mauser, Winchester, this is Rifle Actual. Coming up on the IP in T-minus ten mikes. All Rifles, prepare for deployment."
Winchester Two-Five made yet another futile attempt to school her nerves into some semblance of control. She stood fifth in line with her squad, Winchester Two, beside a row of drop pods. The heavily-stealthed C-5 Galaxy - second of a flight of four - shuddered as it hit a patch of particularly nasty turbulence, sending yet another jolt through her stomach. A friendly hand slapped her shoulder from behind.
"I know this is your first combat drop, Linde. Trust me, you're not feeling anything all of the rest of us felt on our first deployment. You're gonna be fine." Winchester Two-One, a tall, sinewy black-haired girl who reveled in the painfully Irish name of Alicia Deirdre DeVries, had a warm, pleasant contralto that eased the knot in the rookie's stomach.
Linde Van Dyke didn't turn, but briefly covered DeVries' hand with her own. It was purely symbolic, of course - human contact and Cadre battle armor were mutually exclusive - but it made her feel better.
Alicia closed the private channel, and opened the squad-wide com. "You heard the Old Lady, Winchesters. Check your gear, check your wing's seals, and harness up."
Linde's HUD showed no problems with her armor, but she ran through a systems check regardless. Her battle rifle responded perfectly, sensors and synth-link green across the board, pharmacope dosage full and ready. Her eyes lingered on the last, specifically a single chemical compound labelled with a red "T."

"Linde! Focus. Give me a seal check." DeVries' voice snapped her back to awareness, and she checked her squad leader's telltales while DeVries did the same. She'd been assigned as Alicia's wing for the operation because she'd had no time to integrate into the unit - it fell to her to watch her squad leader's back, so DeVries could focus on running Winchester Two's part of the operation.
Linde slapped Alicia's shoulder, indicating good seal, and stepped sideways into her drop harness. The bulky unit locked into a series of hardpoints on her armor, and Linde took a deep, shuddering breath. There. Now she was committed. No backing out now.
The com crackled again, and Warmaster Artemis Ketia's voice came through her helmet's speakers. "All Rifles, this is Rifle Actual. Let's hit the high points one last time. Your objective is a complex roughly forty kilometers north of your drop point. Intel doesn't know what it is, or who it belongs to, but they know it's important. We may be looking at a facility run by another Officio, so stay alert. As far as we know, they don't know we're coming. Keep it that way as long as you can. If the defecation hits the oscillation, you're on your own until we can mobilize conventional assets to support you, so keep it clean. Good luck, and godspeed. Rifle out."
Alicia began making final pre-drop checks on the rest of Winchester Two, but Linde heard only a blur of sound. Her mouth was dry; she swallowed. Still dry. She closed her eyes and waited.
After a subjective eternity, the drop klaxon blared, and the massive transport shuddered as the first wave of Puella Magi dropped from the launch bay. Linde was fifth in line, and her stomach spasmed as the girl in front of her - Winchester Two-Four, Obaseki Osayaba - dropped into the night.
A very large, very angry mule kicked her squarely between the shoulderblades.

Linde had a cannonball's-eye view of the world as the magnetic rail on which her pod was mounted fired her directly at the ground at precisely 425 miles per hour. Her armor's inertial dampeners absorbed most of the shock, and Linde barely suppressed a whoop as her adrenaline spiked.
----
The impact with the ground should have, by all rights, turned the entirety of Winchester Two into a fine layer of red jelly. At fifty feet from the icy ground, however, the squad's drop pods each fired a set of quick-burning rocket engines mounted in their bases, so that when Alicia DeVries' pod slammed into the ice, she barely had to bend her legs to absorb the impact. The front hatch blew off as explosive bolts detonated, and Alicia sprang free of her harness, going immediately to ground.
She keyed her mic. "Rifle, Winchester Two-One. Winchester Two is on the ground. I say again, Winchester Two is boots on the ground."
"Solid copy, Winchester. Proceed to objective. Rifle out."
The rest of her squad loped down the hillside towards her. Their dispersal pattern on the drop had been nearly perfect, almost precisely one hundred meters separated each trooper. Winchester One, as well as Mauser One and Two, had touched down nearby as well, and the four units advanced toward their objective in a staggered line. So far, it seemed they'd caught the enemy napping.
"I don't know what all the fuss is about, honestly." Astrid Nordbo, Winchester Two-Two and Alicia's XO, spoke on the squad-wide channel. "I mean, it's just a research facility. I don't understand why this warranted the deployment of the ENTIRE Officio, and why we're being so bloody-" Nordbo's voice chopped off with a gasp as missile contrails erupted from hidden launch sites along both sides of the valley. Alicia keyed her mic, and shouted the words nobody wanted to hear.

"SAM launch! SAM launch!"

Forty-thousand feet overhead, Winchester Two-One's alert was received with swift, consummate professionalism. The sixteen transport planes dumped chaff and IR flares and went as evasive as they could, while the two modified Boeing 737s escorting them lit off their ECM. It was beautifully executed. It was an intricate, precise dance, as the pilots threw their planes into maneuvers the aircraft had no right to be doing. Ultimately, however, it was futile.
The missiles streaking toward the transports were not used by any army in the world. They were absolute bleeding-edge, and they navigated the countermeasures like no missile should have been able to.
Even then, the Magical Girls aboard each transport would likely have survived a hit from a normal SAM, unless the missile struck their Soul Gem directly. These missiles, however, had been designed with Magical Girls specifically in mind. As the thermobaric warheads detonated against the unarmored skins of the transports, many of their occupants didn't even have time to scream.

Linde Van Dyke bit off a curse as the SAMs detonated amongst the transports. The huge, lumbering aircraft were ideal for transportation and deployment, but they were also very, very slow to turn. Eight missiles found their mark, and flaming debris rained from the sky. Mixed in with the flaming pieces of aircraft were flaming pieces of her comrades - Colt and Mosin hadn't deployed before the missiles launched.
"Come on, come on! We have to clear the drop zone, they'll have us zeroed in -" Winchester Two-Three, Alexandra Filipov, was thrown from her feet as the world exploded behind her. Shells began to rain from the sky exploding amongst the troopers.
5/11

"FUCK! Mortars! Move it, People!" DeVries's voice galvanized Linde, and she pulled Filipov to her feet, supporting the girl with her shoulder as the pair ran from the bombardment zone. "Astrid! Find the spotter!"

"Got him lit, Alley! Reference right side ridge!"
"Five, take him out!"
Linde took a breath and closed her eyes. Her cerebral implant projected the feed from her armor's sensors into her retinas, showing the artillery spotter highlighted bright red against the trees along the ridge. She thumbed a mental switch, and her suit's integrated, shoulder-mounted battle rifle swiveled on its servos with viperish speed. A crosshair superimposed itself on her 'vision,' appearing over the spotter. Another mental twitch, and a crisp, precise, three-round burst of subcaliber discarding-sabot penetrator rounds punctured the man's helmet.
"Good shooting, Five."
Linde nodded.
The operation channel opened, and Artemis Ketia's shell-shocked voice came through. "All Rifles, Rifle Actual. Break contact and go to ground. We're working on an evac-"
"Belay that." There was a nearly audible intake of breath. Jyuro, Incubator of the XVI, continued. "You will push forward toward the objective."
There was a pregnant pause. Ketia's voice, when it returned, was tightly controlled. "With all due respect, Sir, my people just lost almost half their numbers in a matter of seconds. We have no idea what we'd be sending them into if we push forward. We need to-"
"We can do it." Alicia's quiet interruption stopped her Warmaster cold.
Ketia's response was very quiet. "Think about what you're saying, Alley. We have no idea what you're up against down there, but whatever it is, it's a hell of a lot more than we expected."
"Par for the course, Warmaster. When aren't we outnumbered and outgunned?"
There was a long pause, before the Warmaster eventually sighed. "You're the commander on the spot, Alley. It's your call."

"I'm the what?"
Jyuro again cut in. "The Warmaster is correct. You are the senior surviving member of the strike force."

Alicia blew out a breath. "Then yes. Yes, we'll do it."
"Godspeed, then. And good luck. Rifle out."

Several hours later, Linde lay on her stomach beside DeVries, as her commander surveyed the bunker complex before them. Their being prone probably wasn't strictly necessary - Cadre armor had unparalleled stealth capability, and was all but invisible to the naked eye with its refractor field engaged - but DeVries was taking no chances.

"We'll have to go through it." The older girl sounded resigned, and slightly numb. "If we go around, they'll just airlift them in front of us again."
Linde studied her tactical map. The bunker was exactly where The Book said it should be, on a low rise in the middle of the valley, blocking any attempt to bypass it. Under normal circumstances, such an installation would be a non-issue.
Unfortunately, these circumstances were anything but normal.
Of the hundred Magical Girls of the XVI, only fifty-three were still with DeVries. Forty had been lost to the SAM barrage, and seven more were killed by artillery or ambushes over the past several hours. Now, with a mere five kilometers from their objective, the surviving girls of the Sixteenth were stalled.
Linde let her eyes scan across the map, then focused. "Alley? You seeing this?" She dropped a marker on the map.

DeVries was silent for a moment. "Yes. Yes I am." Her voice regained some of its life. "It strikes me that whoever put that bunker has a better mind for strategy than tactics."
"Oh? How's that?"
Beneath her helmet, Alicia DeVries grinned like a shark. "Otherwise, he'd never have overlooked THIS."

The Sixteenth Officio had long had a policy of disallowing the unregulated use of magic amongst its girls. This applied both to everyday life, and to missions. In order to compensate, Jyuro instead commissioned powered armor from the Fourth, designed to be the most advanced made at the time. This armor did much to make up for the girls' non-use of their powers.
The Tick did the rest.
Of all the secrets Jyuro held, the Tick was among the most jealously-guarded. None of the girls knew where he got it, or how it was made, or even what was in it. What they did know was that it worked.
When the chemical cocktail was released into the bloodstream, it accelerated the user's thought processes by an incredible margin. Every twitch, every movement could be carefully considered, measured, and executed precisely as the user intended it to be. Linde had once seen a pair of Officio girls sparring while riding the Tick; both moved with incredible speed, yet unerring precision. Each bout ended in a draw, as both combatants had ample time to recognize their opponent's next move and compensate accordingly.
Essentially, the Tick gave a soldier a gracious plenty of the most valuable commodity on the battlefield: time.

Thus it was that the soldier who stood watch over a certain part of the bunker's outer fortifications, alert and ready in his powered armor, never had a chance when Alicia DeVries rose out of a fold in the ground before him. He was good, very good, in fact, trained and experienced to the pinnacle of skill.
But Alicia was riding the Tick.
Alicia watched as the man ever-so-slowly brought his rifle to his shoulder. She floated in a daze as her body vaulted the low wall, and her hands gripped the rifle's barrel. She saw the leg sweep coming a subjective thirty seconds before it arrived, and had already leapt over it, bearing the soldier down on his back and cutting his throat with her combat knife.

She watched her tactical map as the survivors of the Sixteenth surged out of that same fold in the ground, the one the area's commander had overlooked when placing the bunker. The one that took the girls directly to the wall, without ever coming into sight of the guards.
The girls ghosted silently into the bunker, quietly killing any unfortunate soldier they came across. They were in their element - this is what they did.
Eventually, one man looked up at exactly the wrong moment, and managed to snap off a shot before Astrid's blade bisected his gun, then his head. The now-alerted soldiers turned to face the girls who'd somehow managed to infiltrate the bunker, and pandemonium ensued. Battle rifles flamed on full automatic, men and Magical Girls cursed and fired and died.
Linde ran past open doors, the speed of the Tick giving her time to target each unprepared individual within each room, putting a burst into every head as she passed the door frame. A subjective hour, and thirty seconds of real-time, later, the fighting was over.
The girls of the Sixteenth left the bunker behind as quickly and quietly as they'd come. Behind them, over seventy-five power-armored soldiers - and four of their own - lay cooling in the night.

Even Alicia was getting jumpy. Ever since they'd left the bunker behind, the girls of Rifle hadn't encountered any sign of resistance. After the constant, harrying attacks of the previous hours, the sudden, unexplained silence set everyone on edge.
Alicia and Linde were once again belly-down on a low ridge, this time scanning the target compound itself. There was no sign of movement on, or outside the walls. No lights shone within, either, lending the whole place an eerie, desolate air.

Alicia stood. “Alright, People, move in. Twenty meter spread, and keep your eyes open. We’ve lost too many already tonight - I don’t want to lose any more.”

The last forty-nine girls of the Sixteenth Officio Assassinorum moved as one down the rise toward the gates of the compound. As they reached the base of the hill, a single, slight figure stepped out. Linde’s battle rifle tracked her, but Alicia threw up a hand.
“Hold fire!”
The girl stopped in front of the gates. The moonlight gleamed off a gold-tipped staff of some sort, and set off highlights in her light-brown hair. Her white-and-blue costume, coupled with her weapon, identified her as a Magical Girl.
She bowed slightly. “Hello. I appreciate the effort you’ve all made to get here, but I need you to leave. Now.” Her voice was pleasant, even friendly - but there was a note of steel beneath.
Alicia pulled her helmet off, and regarded the girl across the snowy field. “If you know how hard we’ve fought, you know how many we’ve lost.” The girl nodded, sadly. “Then you know I can’t let their sacrifices be in vain.”
“You won’t retreat, then?”
“I’m afraid not. Now stand aside.”
The girl shook her head. “I cannot.”
Alicia pulled her helmet back on. “Then I apologize for the necessity.”
“As do I.” The girl lowered her staff, pointing toward Alicia. Something on the shaft moved, like the bolt of a rifle, and a series of pink rings appeared around the staff.
Alicia had had enough. “Open fire!”
“Divine Buster.”
The world went black.

I sat back in the seat. “Jesus Christ, Linde. What the hell happened?”
Linde grimaced. “Apparently, Alicia tackled me just before the blast hit. I don’t remember any of it. I woke up in Medical a week later. They had to regenerate half my body.”
“And the others?” Sonja’s voice was quiet, fragile.
Linde didn’t respond. She just bowed her head.
The pilot’s voice came over the intercom. “Touchdown in five. Welcome to Big Shell.”
Linde looked up. “Anyway. All that to say, that’s the legacy you carry when you wear this armor. The Cadre does not retreat, nor does it surrender. We complete the mission, at any cost.”
We finished the flight in silence.

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/16/13(Sat)07:39 No.28318411

Five years ago, you were a Magical Girl, and you weren't as dead then as you are now.

It's funny. You didn't really feel anything when you were told about it.

No sadness or anger, just surprise. Surprise, and a sudden need to start...writing things down. Just to make sure somebody would be able to know what to do after you die.

Even SHE was surprised - the smirking black-haired girl that constantly haunted your dreams, looking all fancy in her black cocktail dress and stupid wings.

She called herself an angel. Angel nothing - she was more like an annoying crow, loud and annoying and stared a lot.

She didn't like that very much. Not very much at all.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/16/13(Sat)07:41 No.28318424

>>28318411

"You're going to die," You remember her spitting at you, in a haughty, snide tone that you never cared for. "You're going to die for such a pointless reason, and all you can say is 'Oh'? Tell me, are you a complete and utter idiot?"

Your response then was just flipping her off. Flipped her off HARD, and made your decision that as soon as you wake up, the first thing you'd do is to find the mutant cat bastard and get a contract drafted.

She didn't like that very much. Kept screaming about how it would just be cutting what little time you had left in half, and how unimaginably stupid it would be to spend your last days as a Magical Girl. She used a lot of big words, too, words you would've looked up in a dictionary, if you had one. Still made you feel stupid.

But what really ticked YOU off was when she told you that you couldn't go through with it. About how she can't save you if you die as a Magical Girl. Something about her not being able to snatch your soul away before it's eaten if it shatters as a Soul Gem.

If there's anything you hate the most - girls who think they're better than you just because they can say big words and wear expensive clothes being very near the top of your shit list - it's being told what you can and can't do.

Kaneda Madoka didn't drop out of middle school and get her first sparkly award at twelve just for some smirking dream bitch to tell her what to do.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/16/13(Sat)07:42 No.28318433

...

Well. Time to let THAT go, you think. You never saw her again after Kyuubey took you up on your offer, anyway - your dreams instead becoming starkly-clear visions of a future you needed to prevent, and the things you needed to do to prevent it.

Including dying. Yes. That's on the list.

But not right now. Right now, you're crossing off another item entirely - that is, rescuing a Magical Girl from the world's asshole, as Xiaomei had so eloquently described it.

Varrigan City's a huge fucking place, though, and it would take you days to scour the entire city for her. Good thing, then, that you have a contact on the inside - one you're on your way to right now, riding on your best friend's monster of a bike. Driving full throttle on a road so named because of the many illegal races that took place on it - as well as the amount of blood spilled on it, because of said illegal races.

Seriously, you've passed by so many rusting wrecks of cars, bikes, and other vehicles rusting on the roadside that you gave up counting, and focused instead on the task ahead.

In any case, you're headed towards Asian Town. Your contact, Professor Madaraki the Second, should be in there somewhere.

The current time, as displayed by your helmet's HUD, reads 11:08:20 AM. Thirty minutes or so. Not too bad, you consider. You're making good time.

It's around the time when you contemplate switching the radio on for some driving music when your codec beeps for attention again. You blink-click to accept the call, and growl at the speaker to make it quick. You're driving, here.

"Oh, Malal suddenly concerned about safety now, when she is on Redline Highway! Place where people put spikes on everything in their car, including on seats!" Xiaomei's voice, already bristling with sarcasm earlier, was now hitting full middle-aged Chinese Mom right now. "Tell me to hurry up, this stupid girl!"

Right, right. You supress the urge to chuckle, here. Why is she calling again?

"Ah, now you ask! Maybe, maybe if was not so damn RUDE earlier, conversation would have been over already, right?" You hear her clear her throat. "Was just about to say, before being rudely interrupted, that there is distress signal coming from ahead of you."

Distress signal?

"Yes, distress signal! Someone asking for help!" Xiaomei snaps. "It is two clicks away from you. From what I hear I think it is Magical Girl being chased by local motorcycle gang. She is very injured and asking for support." It's here that she huffs. "You can ignore if you want. This would only be delay, I am thinking, so recommend that you leave it."

How do you respond?

Be honest everyone
We're heading after the distress signal because we're deathly afraid of not saving someone who might be important later on, and it's already a given that Malal gets Kharn out of the city alive, so we don't need to worry about time.

Well, unless this is when Kharn goes witch mode, which isn't an altogether impossible event, it just seems a bit early from the way people talk about it.

Malal was reverse-us?

Madoka instead of Homura

Crazy god-Homura instead of crazy god-Madoka

Had her crazy god stalk her while she wasn't a magical girl instead of being stalked while being a magical girl

Prefers to kneecap people with a melee weapon instead of with a gun

Is the second in command to the Warmaster instead of being the Warmaster

And puts up with Kharns shit instead of wanting to murder her in her sleep for being so fucking irresponsible and stupid?

Did the distress signal identify as anything, then?

"If it did, would have told you right away, yes?" Xiaomei's voice could have curdled milk. "No, no identification, no anything. Although, recognize style of address - would bet Malal lunch that girl is from Second." She chuckles. "Accent like that, thinking they are so noble, uppity knights? Not so easy to miss, you know!"

The Second, huh? What's one of them doing so far out here?

"Training mission, probably? Ayah, do not know, am shrine maiden, not psychic!" A burst of static, and Xiaomei speaks up again. "Anyway, whatever you decide, you do it carefully! Could be trap, you know!"

Yeah, yeah. You thank her for the heads up, and the connection severs itself neatly. You gun the throttle harder, urging Schpeltiger to go faster. Trap or not, you'd at least want to get there before too long - you've heard about what the gangers here do to captured Magical Girls.

Soon enough, you come up behind what appears to be a giant...sort of ramshackle tank eating up the road.

It doesn't look like a tank but so much as a lot of motorcycles and cars nailed together by a random assortment of steel plates of varying thickness. Its surface, pockmarked with welding marks and bullet holes, is also covered with vulgar graffiti - and bristling with what looks like enough gun emplacements to start a small-scale war.

A punknaught. That's...nostalgic. Last time you rode one, it was during a street shootout with a rival yakuza. Of course, that one blew up, but it was still fun.

Anyway. This one seems to be escorted by a pack of bike-riding gangers. Six of them, in fact, and they're hooting something about having a sparkly for dinner.

A quick glance ahead with your helmet's zoom function gives you visual confirmation - they're chasing someone who's also on motorbike, and from the plume of black smoke streaming behind it they don't have long before they break down.

The gangers don't seem to have noticed you just yet.

What do you do?

I know a little about that monstrosity. It redefines the meaning of "all-terrain". And if we can get a tank for backup out of this, so much the better.

While you're pretty sure that Schpeltiger has something in it to help you blow the punknaught to Narnia - Nicole had always been a believer in hiding weapons inside anything you own, just for contingency's sake - you're a bit pressed for time, here. The motorcycle trying to keep ahead and out of the punknaught's range of fire is already in a bad way, and it's not going to be much longer before it decides to explode and make a charred Magical Girl out of its rider.

And you can't be having with that, can you?

Pulling yourself down low as much as you can, you brace against Schpeltiger before twisting the throttle all the way back - and it's with a deafening roar that the two-wheeled monster of a motorbike between your legs all but explodes forward. Aiming for the space between the punknaught's escorts and the punknaught itself.

...And it's here that you remember just how you loved this monster. Despite how temperamental it usually was, and how it guzzled petrol, it controlled like an absolute dream. Sure, Nicole had customized it a lot to her own preferences, but even then it always felt like the machine knew what you were about to ask of it moments before you actually do, and did it perfectly every time. This time is no exception - Schpeltiger's brutish bulk slipping in between the tank-like monstrosity and its side-riders with a silk smoothness that you swear it was possessed.

And you manage to do it so quickly that, in fact, you hear the gangers shouting at each other about 'some weedy git on a big white krumpy skoota' moments after you've shot past them.

And it's only mere moments after that they started to shoot - scattered gunfire that mostly missed except for a few, scoring Schpeltiger a few dings on its rear fender. You wince at that, but you can always just leave Nicole an address to send the repair bill to.

Kyuubey's Office would do just nicely.

With you gunning the throttle wide open, it's only a matter of seconds until you catch up with the beleaguered rider and her dying ride - the smoke coughing from its engine now thicker, denser, a sure sign that it was on its last legs. You pull up beside the bike, as close as you can manage, and offer one hand towards the girl who's only minutes away from becoming one with the road.

"Come with me if you want to live!" You bark at her, the vox completely ruining your Arnold impression.

The girl merely blinks at you for one long moment - as if unsure of trusting you or not - before nodding as she reaches out to your offered hand. Her fingers closing around your wrist in a cold, tight death grip.

You pull her off her stricken ride and onto the back seat - and just in time, too. Even before her ass had settled onto the spacious passenger seat of Schpeltiger, the motorcycle explodes in a brilliant display of detonating fuel and spare parts. Pelting Schpeltiger with bits and pieces, the shrapnel miserably pinging against the bike's reinforced chassis.

The girl lets out a saddened cry at this, clearly not at all pleased with the development...but hey, at least she didn't go down with it, right? That's always a positive in your book.

Just as you're about to ask her if she's alright, the guttural roar of ten engines straining to work together in concert behind you drown out all sound in a huge, deafening blast. You take a quick look back to see that the punknaught, despite its huge bulk and shit-all acceleration, it's actually catching up. Same goes for its escorts - and you could see them swinging their spiked chains in preparation.

What do you do?

[]Use the Nitro to get the fuck out of there.
[]Grenades? Grenades! Schpeltiger's got to have a few somewhere, or Nicole is a dildo.
[]Ask the girl you rescued if she has anything she could use to help lose the punknaught.

"I don't mean to sound presumptuous here," The girl currently riding bitch behind you says. "...but our pursuers are catching up. I don't suppose you have a plan?"

Well, of course you've got a plan. You've always got a plan for everything.

You just, you know, have to think of it first. And then you'll have it.

"..." The girl you just rescued falls silent, before nodding. "Understood. My life is in your hands, Miss. My thanks for rescuing me. " It's here that you feel both her arms worm their way around your waist, locking together there.

...Heh. Guess this means you owe Xiaomei lunch, then. There's no mistaking that accent, with that calm, knightly dignity.

Putting Schpeltiger on Autopilot, you glance down at the various buttons and toggles on the dash. ...Fuck, Nicole added a lot to this thing since the last time you saw it. Some of the switches you're not even sure what they're for - and is that a self destruct button right at the middle? Nah, couldn't be. Nicole isn't that crazy.

No, wait, she is. Nevermind.

It's only a few more moments of searching that you find it, one labeled 'Caltrop Bombs', just beside the button for 'Napalm', and just above the toggle for 'Beer'.

Nicole, you crazy son of a bitch.

You jab a finger down on the button, and it's here that you hear something open up underneath Schpeltiger with brief mechanical whirrs. A moment later, and the almost musical sound of a dozen spiked grenades dropping onto the asphalt and rolling away reaches your ears, making you grin behind your faceplate.

At the same time, you flick the metal covering of the Nitro Boost button to the side, before resting your thumb over the revealed crimson square.

"...What were those?" The girl behind you asks. "Wait, don't tell me--"

The grenades exploding behind you in quick succession - atomizing the escorts and severely hamstringing the punknaught barrelling after you - cuts her off, and you couldn't help but cackle here. God damn, Nicole. You were expecting a cache of grenades, maybe, but not grenades like that. If anything, it reminded you of the girl's resourcefulness as an assassin - and the bloody-minded brutality she colored every project of hers with.

"Just something to get them off our tail," You tell the girl. "Hold on tight, because I'm about to do something even more stupid."

"...Very well." You hear her grumbling underneath her breath. ...No, no, she's not grumbling. She's praying. To someone called Lady Octavia Seckendorff, the First Knight?

Ah. One of them religious types. Figures.

You shake your head, and press down hard on the Nitro Boost button.

A shrill, mechanical whine, Schpeltiger letting out a digitized lion's roar - and you barely manage to let out a scream as the entire thing blasts forward, the world disappearing into one blur.

NO. WAIT. IT WASN'T SUPPOSED TO BE THIS FAST.

JESUS CHRIST WHAT

NICOLE GOD DAMMIT WHAT THE FUCK DID YOU DO

Five minutes of the most intense, ass-clenching motorcycle riding you've ever experienced in your life later - the girl you rescued silent as a grave throughout the entire thing, even when you shouted that you didn't know how to stop - and you see a sign telling you that you're almost at Asian Town. A few minutes more, and you see the city loom up, the gawdy dragons at the gate and the pagoda-style roofs a dead giveaway.

You drive into the city more or less in one piece. Schpeltiger seems to be none the worse for wear as well, but the fuel gauge's nearing empty, so you'll need to refuel before setting out. The Nitro gauge's reading much more favorably - you have two out of three charges left, at least.

Thankfully, there's a petrol station by Asian Town's entrance, so you make for that. The station's attendants don't seem to particularly care what kind of customers ride in, just the money they pay with. That suits you just fine, and you tip generously for a full tank.

It's here, while you wait for Schpeltiger to get refueled, that you finally get a look at the girl you rescued. She's...a bit casually dressed, wearing a black leather jacket with the sleeves rolled up, and black denim short shorts. Her black hair, cut short in a rather masculine bob cut, is held out of her eyes with a pair of goggles serving as a hair band of sorts. She's got boots, too - tough, steel-toed ones you usually use for construction work.

But what you notice now - and you're not sure how you didn't notice it before - is how her right arm, from her fingers up to halfway her shoulder, is mechanical. Literally robotic, out of polished steel. And it's not made to look like anything human, either - it seems to be deliberately oversized from the rest of her, out of proportion enough to be intimidating.

...Certainly nothing like the knight you imagined. You were expecting something more...grand, you suppose. More suit-of-armor like.

You make to place a hand on the girl's shoulder, but stop yourself in time - and you run back to where Schpeltiger is getting refueled. A jab of the 'BEER' button, and a small section behind the passenger seat slides open - revealing what looks like a minifridge. One stocked with what looks like a six-pack of beer. All six of them ice cold to the point of sweating condensation.

...Dammit, Nicole. Sometimes you make it really hard to stay mad at you.

You pluck two cans from the minifridge and close it carefully, before running back towards the sullen girl. It's here that you hold out one of the cans to her, and she blinks at you with her own black eyes - before nodding again and taking the offered alcohol with murmured thanks.

You open yours immediately - the can hissing as you pull back on the tab - and it's with a thirsty, parched gusto that you drain the can of half its contents. When you look back down, you see that she hasn't even opened hers. Merely looking at the can and turning it around in her hands - or rather, with her brutish mechanical hand and her normal flesh one.

This is gonna be awkward, but...well. You should try, at least. Can't hurt if you try.

Taking another sip of your beer, it's here that you apologize for her loss. Of her bike, of course. Did it have a name?

"A...a name?" The girl repeats, turning to you, the can still in her hands. ...It's unnerving how her mechanical hand moves just like her real one, as if it was made of flesh and bone instead of spare motorcycle parts. "Yes. Yes, it did have a name," she murmurs, looking down. "I called it Stranger. It was I who put it together as well. He was my first."

Ah. That's rough.

"He served me well, and kept going even while he was being gutted from within. I can't really ask any more of him." The girl lets out a sigh, before pulling open the tab on her beer can, too.

"I...don't really drink, as a rule. But perhaps to Stranger's memory?" She looks up again and holds out the can to you. You clink your can against hers, and she all but quaffs her drink, downing it greedily. ...It's also here that you realize that she's crying.

You allow her to take her time to compose herself. You'd like to ask her what she was doing, getting chased by road gangers like that, but there's always time for tears.

After a few moments, it's here that she seems to remember somthing. "...Oh. Forgive me, I very nearly forgot." It's here that she holds out her hand - her real one, after passing her beer can to her mechanical punchfist. "Please accept my thanks for you coming to my aid, earlier. My bike was set to send out a distress call if catastrophic damage is inflicted upon it - and I have no doubt I would not be here talking to you if it that wasn't the case." She nods her head a fraction of an inch, a curt bow. You mirror her gesture to free up your right hand, and take hers in a single, firm handshake.

She's not much for asking for help, then? That's kind of a dangerous flaw to have, right?

"...Where I'm from, we are the ones who are asked of help, not the other way around." The girl frowns. "It's...not to our nature. Or our training." She shakes her head. "But yes, I see where you're coming from. It should not be held as a weakness, to ask for assistance when it's required." It's here that she makes a fist of her metal punch hand and presses it against her chest, where her heart should be. "If you are ever in need of help, Miss, then I, Karasawa Enyo, will come to your aid just as quikly as you did to mine."

Karasawa Enyo, huh? That's...hmm. That's a pretty famous family name, there.

"Just a branch family. Nothing too prestigious." She shakes her head, although you could tell she's secretly pleased you know. "And you are, Miss...?"

Malal, you tell her.

"Malal...?" Enyo echoes, waiting for you to fill in the silence with your last name. You don't give it. It's just Malal, you tell her.

"Ah. I see. Very well, Miss Malal." The girl nods again. "...of the Ninth, I suppose?" She smiles, a rather cute smile from a face generally not used to smiling much at all.

Huh. Very astute of her. How did she figure that? You're pretty sure you took off any insignias of the Ninth from your suit.

"Your accent, Miss Malal. Has a touch of the country to it." Enyo smiles wider. "I mean no offense, but I do adore that accent. It reminds me of home."

Ahh. Well. That makes sense. Probably not a lot of Japanese in the Second.

"It's very regrettable, yes, and--" It's here that she blinks at you, incredulously. "W-wait. How did YOU know--"

Her accent, of course. Has a touch of the high born to it. You grin behind your faceplate, and shake your head. What's she doing out so far from her second home, anyway? Pretty sure she's not supposed to be here.

"I would say the same thing to you, Miss Malal," Enyo says, a small pout on her lips, before frowning. "And I thought dressing like this would be enough..."

Oh, it was. Very nearly was. But her cool way of talking gives it away.

"Ah. I see." She nods. "I will take that to heart."

Right. Yeah. Okay.

"As for my reason for being here, I..." Enyo shakes her head. "I was issued a challenge to one-on-one melee combat. Sanguis Extremis. The declared location was here, in Varrigan City."

Sanguis Extremis?

"To the death," The girl volunteers. "The challenge said that I would need to get into the City on my own, and then find Asian Town. The exact location of where the duel will take place will be given to me here, through a messenger." She smiles, here. "I consider it a blessing that the one who rescued me was also heading in the same way."

Well, that is pretty lucky. But...isn't it a bit dangerous, to accept challenges like that? And in a place like this?

"I am the Blessed Lady's Champion, Miss Malal, of the Second's Black Templars." Enyo shrugs. "I must answer all challenges I receive and win, or die trying."

...Even if it's a trap? A complete set up?

"It's a hard rule to follow, yes. But we must. Otherwise the rank loses its significance and symbolism. Win or lose, it is always an honor to fight for the Blessed Lady. And the First Knight always lends her sword to those who fight with righteousness."

Hnh. Well.

Religious, yes, but you can't fault her conviction. There's not a lot of people left like her.

It's here that Enyo seems to blush a bit. "Well, um. I apologize, Miss Malal, but that is something that only the challenged and the challenger should be privy to. I mean no offense, but that is how it's always been done."

You shake your head. It's fine, you expected as such. And for a Knight of the Second, she sure does apologize a lot! Is she sure she's not from the Seventeenth, or something?

"The Seventeenth...? No, Miss Mala, I am from the Second." She seems to grow a bit flustered. "...Would that I had my armor, I could prove it, but--"

No, no, it's okay. It was just a joke. You believe her.

Anyway, does she have a way out after the challenge? Stranger's gone, and she'll need some way to get out of this shithole once she wins her duel. Does she have that settled or what?

"...I admit, I was not expecting to lose Stranger here." Enyo frowns. "But I do have a failsafe, if I am desperate enough to use it. Other than that, I will find some way to return home." She smiles. "Please do not worry about me, Miss Malal."

Well, alright. If she's sure. Just that she remember that she can owe you another favor, right? She can ask you for help.

"I will keep it in mind." Enyo says solemnly, before holding out her can again, for another toast. You clink your own now empty can against hers - and she blinks at the sound.

"...You finished your beer? Already?" Enyo gapes. "But I didn't even see you drink! Or even pull up your helmet's visor!"

Oh, that? Well. She knows how Culexus are, right? About what happens when they take their helmets off?

The girl nods. "It's a last ditch weapon for the Culexus, yes, to take off their helmets. Not only does it discharge their power in one big blast, but it also kills them outright."

Right! And you're not going to waste that on just one ice cold can of Pabst Blue Ribbon!

That's why you learn some Culexus Tricks(TM)!

"Ah. I...I see, Miss Malal." Enyo mutters. "Truly, we live in remarkable times."

You talk more with Enyo after that. You find out that she's actually the second child in a family of four daughters - and her family's not too pleased about her being in the Second, much more the Black Templars. She's all but disowned, stricken from inheritance, but even so you could tell how much she loves her family by seeing her talk about them. Her sisters, too - how she's worried about them, and how she hopes they're doing alright.

You also asked about her arm, after a fashion. She seemed to grow quiet at this, before telling you that she lost it in an accident, one that made it unrecoverable even with the use of magic. She became less talkative after that, and the both of you waited in silence for Schpeltiger to finish refueling.

Once that was done, you offered to drop her off to wherever she had to wait for the messenger - and she gladly accepted, the color coming back to her face. As if the earlier conversation hadn't happened at all. She even shook your hand again when you had to part ways, and promised that she would go through hell and high water to repay her debt to you.

Again, nice kid. A bit screwy with the religion thing, but everyone has to believe in something.

In any case, you reach Great Wall Street easily enough. It's a rather populated street, full of shops. Lots of civilians too, some dressed like tourists, and most looking like they want to mug the tourists. Suits you fine - there's less chance of something insane happening when civilians are around.

...Xiaomei didn't mention any place specifically, only this street. ...Fuck, are you going to have to look in every shop and every corner for your contract? Because that's going to take forever, and you only have...two and a half hours left.

It's here, then, that you see a white-haired young girl waving at you from the throng of tourists. Her costume's quite an eye-catcher - it resembles a typical Magical Girl costume, except with more armor bits here and there. Frills, too, accentuating the mainly-white color scheme. She's also wearing a rather long, black cloak like a cape - making her look reasonably competent, if not marking her out as someone to watch out for during combat. Eversor, by the looks of her.

"The good Professor is waiting," The girl says in perfect English. "Please, follow me. She is currently having lunch, and I am tasked to lead you to her." She smiles here, all nice and polite as young kids like her can get. ...You also see that she's got cookie crumbs on her lips, as if she'd just been snacking before you arrived.

How do you react?

[]Lead on. Oh, and you have something on your lips.
[]How do I know you're not going to lead me into a trap?

It's pretty old. The Second even before the Officio system, but only known as the Ordos. They and the Fourteenth are pretty much responsible for the religion of the Blessed Lady.

As for a split, yes. The Pinky cultists are a recent occurence, as the Blessed Lady was originally a benevolent figure that Magical Girl prayed to in times of need.

QC is something that I was wondering about as well, specifically in regards to the Saga of the 16th write-ups; the technology level seems more than a bit out-of-place with the Madoka setting. In PMMM we had implications that the series was near future, but not too far out, especially showing the tech-level through Homu's weaponry.

And even in MGNQ, while there is some high-tech equipment, its generally either experimental (an unstable) Incubator tech or external tech magic'd in, rather than mass production-level equip like cybernetically linked powered armor and a goddamned SHIELD Hovercarrier.

I think the tech-level needs to be clarified a bit.
Or maybe I just fucking hate the hovercarrier, I dont know.

The technology level was something I bumped up a bit. For the 16th, it's really incubator tech + the most advanced tech currently present. That brings us around to Metal Gear Solid levels of tech (but with hovercarriers).

And the power armor are just suits, certainly nothing to the level of actual Space Marine armor. Think of Old Snake's suit with the false muscles and such!

Still a weird path to pick compared to others, who are a knight, a Callidus, and.. spaghetti. Dunno what the remaining two do, but probably something similar.

For that matter, it'd be interesting to know what their parents think, since at least 2 of their girls are on a path that leads to a very short lifespan.

This still don't make any sense. The way they're described puts them at planetary-annihilation-level, like full power Kriemhild Gretchen only not witched out. I don't think an armored military strike force could stand against one from this description and that's a power cap you don't easily step over, even a normal officio would fall apart at the seams against a real army.

Just how deep does this rabbit hole go? Magical girls wouldn't hold this kind of ridiculous power and go easily unnoticed by the rest of the world, disregarded as some sort of fantasy. If this really has been going on since Cleopatra's times and before then I'd expect there to be at least a /pol/-like place out there somewhere decrying magical girls instead of jews as the bogeyman behind every sick corporate deal or shady government move.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/17/13(Sun)06:39 No.28335824

Well, she seems legitimate enough. But just to be safe - could she at least give you an idea of which Professor she's taking you to? Just to be sure that you've got the right person and everything.

The girl with the pale blond hair - so pale it's almost snow white - blinks her brilliant blue eyes at you, and nods. "I...well, the good Professor has...has these metal things sticking out from where her ears should be? Or rather, near them, at least?" She holds both her gloved hands over her ears, as if pantomiming earmuffs.

"She also has stitches here," She traces a line going down from her forehead to her left eye with a fingertip. "And here, as well..." Another line, this time tracing a line from cheek to cheek, going across the corners of her mouth. "And she has this accent where she elongates random syllables in words, and--"

Okay, okay. That should be Professor Madaraki. That's enough.

Yeah, if she can lead you to her, you'd really appreciate it.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/17/13(Sun)06:41 No.28335846

>>28335824

"Of course, Miss Malal." She curtseys, here. "But before that, may I introduce myself first? I am Odette Brighton, Eversor and Warmaster in Training of the Seventeenth. I am tasked to ensure the good Professor's safety in Varrigan City for the duration." A smile crosses her lips. "And it is a pleasure to make your acquaintance."

Ah. Um. Well. You're glad to meet her, too. You'd introduce yourself, but she already knows who you are, it looks like.

...Jesus Christ, are all the girls from the Seventeenth THIS polite? Not that it's bad or anything, but god damn if it isn't slightly unnerving. And you thought Enyo was goody-two-shoes incarnate earlier. This girl is like Peaches and Cream Personified.

"The good Professor told me about you, and tasked me to bring you to her." Odette nods. "She seems quite excited to meet you, and couldn't stop talking about it." She gestures with a hand towards the crowd. "If you'll follow me, then, Miss Malal?"

That's...hmm. You've had your doubts about the Thirteenth - their history's always been a bit murky, from what Kyuubey told you about them - but being able to hire the Seventeenth's budding Warmaster for a simple escort job? Either Madaraki's rolling in money or has some serious connections of her own, here.

You keep this in mind, while continuing to follow Odette through the crowd. The young girl easily slipping through the throng, while you find yourself being jostled.

...Oh, you almost forgot. You point out to the Eversor that there's some cookie bits on her lips, if she wants to know. And isn't it a bit too early for snacks? She'll ruin her appetite.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/17/13(Sun)06:42 No.28335859

>>28335846

"Hmm? I...oh. I see. Thank you, Miss Malal." The girl smiles again, and you see her take a napkin from her skirt pocket and carefully pat her lips clean. "And I suppose so, but I'm afraid I couldn't resist the temptation."

She holds out what looks like a small cloth bag full of candy and cookies tenderly wrapped in thin rice paper. "Mom

- um, I mean, my Warmaster made these for me, to take along for the mission. I've been trying to stop myself from having one ever since I left home, but..." She smiles somewhat bashfully at you. "Would you like some, Miss Malal?"

Well...sure, why not. A bit of sugar would help, you're feeling a bit worn down from that crazy motorcycle ride earlier. You take one of the plastic-wrapped maple candies from the bag and make to unwrap it, before popping it into your mouth via Culexus Trick #12: detaching the air filter plate really quickly and dropping whatever you wanted to snack on down the vent leading to your mouth before the suit depressurizes.

Hey, this is pretty good. Really sweet, but pretty tasty. You ask for another one, to have for later.

...Hah, wait. Did she just call the Seventeenth Warmaster 'Mom'?

"M-merely a bad habit, Miss Malal. Please pay it no mind." You hear the slightest tremble in Odette's calm, clear voice, and you're positive that she's blushing like crazy.

You let her lead you to the Professor in peace. There's no need to tease the girl about it - a lot of girls in the Ninth make that kind of connection with their tutors and squad leaders. Well, more of a big sister thing than anything else, but for the really younger recruits...

...It must be nice, though. Having someone as a maternal figure.

Everyone should have someone nice like that.

After what seemed to be a relative eternity squeezing past the crowd that no matter what you did, always walked in the opposite direction as you - Odette finally leads you into what looks like a typical Chinese restaurant. One that has rather strange creatures swimming in the wall of aquariums at front - the sort that have no place in any menu, Chinese or otherwise.

"Ah, Miss Malaaaal! Over heeeere, please!" A tremulous, sing-song voice comes at you from one corner of the otherwise unoccupied restaurant - and you turn to see a rather sickly-looking girl with long yellow-blonde hair wave at you, her dark amber eyes as wide as her smile. And there's really no mistaking her for anyone else other than Professor Madaraki - if the white labcoat wasn't a complete giveaway, then the steel bolt-things sticking out of her skull and the stitches on her face should be. "Miss Maaaalal!"

"That's the good Professor," Odette smiles as she nibbles on another cookie. "Take your time in talking with her, Miss Malal, as she seems to have a lot to say to you. As for this establishment's security, please do not worry - Xerxes and I will be guarding the only entrance and exit, here.

Xerxes? Who's that? Another magical girl you haven't met yet?

It's here that Odette seems to go pale. "Um, well, not exactly. I believe the good Professor calls him her pet, but she treats him more like a younger sibling than anything else." You see her shiver the slightest bit. "A-anyway, I'll go and stand guard outside, Miss Malal. Please don't hesitate to call out if there's anything you need!"

Right. Sure. You watch as the white-haired Eversor stations herself just outside the restaurant, a rather oversized spear materializing in her hands.

You turn towards Madaraki, and turn away immediately, covering your visor with a hand. ...Is she supposed to be this excited? Because you've never really met her before. It was Xiaomei who arranged this meeting, not you - and the Seventh's Spiritual Leader was adamant that she was trustworthy, despite your own suspicions.

You look back at the professor, and she's still waving. In fact, waving with both hands now, beaming happily.

...Nah. No one who's planning to stab anyone in the back should look THAT happy.

You tell Odette to take it easy on those cookies, before finally making your way towards Madaraki Fran.

"Oh, Miiiiss Malal! I've beeeen looking forward to meeeeeting you!" The sickly-looking Venenum stands up on rather shaky legs, holding both hands out toward you - and you hesitate for the slightest bit before reaching out in kind. She giggles here, shaking her head, before stepping forward slowly and...capturing you in a close, if rather awkward hug.

"Miiiiss Malal! I've looked forwaaaard to this day~!"

She's taller that you, but at the same time feels fragile. Like you could snap her in half easily.

...Smells like hospital antiseptic too. Not a bad smell, just slightly off-putting. But a clean smell nonetheless.

How do you react?

You try to return the hug as gently as you could, while letting the Professor take her time with you. You're not really much of a hugging person, moreso when it's a complete stranger initiating the hug - but you at least know enough not to counter the attempt with a headbutt or two.

She holds the embrace for a few moments more, before finally letting go and stepping back, the venenum smiling with a pink blush on her pale cheeks. "Ahahahaaaah...I apologize, Miss Malal, if that surprised you. I was hoping to hold myself back, but..." She giggles here, a slow, strange trill of laughter that would've sounded creepy if it had come out from the corner of a really dark room. "...well, aaaanyway~! Please, sit down, I realize we only have a short period of time together, so we might as well get riiiiight to it!"

Uh. Yeah. Okay. You make to take your seat, but you feel as if you should be helping her to hers - she's breathing a bit hard, here, with her knees clearly shaking as she lowers herself back onto her seat. ...She's not going to die on you here, is she?

"Huh? Oh, nooooo!" That strange, yet endearing giggle again, and she finally manages to seat herself. "I-it's just me getting used to my land legs again, that's a-all~!"

Oh. Ah, yeah, the Thirteenth's base is always at sea most of the time, so that makes sense.

It must be difficult, though, losing her sea legs every time she goes ashore?

"O-oh, not really! It's just a matter of making suuuuure they're well-packed in ice before I put them back in storage in my quarters!"

...Uh. Right. Okay.

You quickly abandon that topic, and go right to the meat of the matter. About Valnikov Ekaterina--

"Yes! Yes! We will get to that sooooon!" It's here that Madaraki pulls what looks like a large suitcase from underneath the dining table, placing it right in the middle of the half-empty dishes and opening it with two solid-sounding metal clicks.

[1/2]

You don't quite see what's in it, as she opened it facing away from you - but you spy her taking out what looks to be a large metal syringe from the suitcase and placing it on the table, along with several small stoppered test tubes. "We will talk of her while we do the saaaaample extraction~!"

...Sample extraction?

"Sample extraction...!" The Professor looks up at you, stars in her dull amber eyes. "Just like we agreed on! Four ampoules of Miss Malal's blood and plasma, in exchange for Ekaterina Valnikov!"

Wait. What.

Xiaomei didn't tell you anything about this!

"Eeeeeh~?" Madaraki blinks. "B-but Xiaomei-chaaaaan said that you were really loooooking forward to it, too! She said you were haaaaappy to do your part in the mighty, inexorable progress of SCIENCE!"

"Saaaaa~! Come on, Miss Malaaaal!" The blonde girl grins, her eyes wide and staring, the evil-looking metal syringe looking positively menacing perched between her fingers. "Close your eyes and show some skin~ This won't hurt a biiiiit!"

How do you react?

...For fuck's sake, what kind of syringe is that? It looks like the kind of needle you'd use to pump a horse full of drugs. And no you're not afraid of needles or anything but seriously they freak you out and can she point it somewhere else first? You just want to...you just want to check with Xiaomei first, and stuff. Yeah. You won't be a moment.

"Eh? Oh, ooookay..." Fran cants her head to the side quizzicaly, like a cat, but she seems to acquiesce. "Take your time, Miiiiss Malal, but remember we're on the clock heeeere~!"

You nod, before stepping away from the table and activating your codec. It's you doing the calling now, and when Xiaomei answers, you mute your outward-facing vox enough so you can speak without it being broadcasted out to everyone.

WHAT THE HELL, XIAOMEI? WHAT THE HELL? WHAT'S THIS ABOUT SAMPLES? WHY DIDN'T SHE TELL YOU ABOUT--

"Ayah, don't shout, lah." Xiaomei drawls. "Before you shout again, Malal, I will tell you story."

What?! You don't have time for stories--

"SHut up and listen, okay?" The brown-haired girl frowns at you. "Okay. Few months ago, there was this Culexus, who is sooooo ugly she never take off her helmet unless she going to shower."

Xiaomei--

"This ugly Culexus, she ask her beautiful and smart friend in Seventh Officio to help find way to rescue girl from asshole of world, Varrigan City. Even though both of them know that kind of thing impossible. And beautiful and smart friend remember what ugly Culexus say. Do you remember what that Culexus say too, Malal?"

"Well? I am not talking to wall here, right?"

...You told her to find a way, no matter what.

"Yes! Malal brain working still." Xiaomei lets out a sigh, before smiling tiredly at you from her HUD portrait. "This is that 'no matter what', Malal. Is what you asked for."

But did it have to be BLOOD of all things?! Why couldn't it have been money, or, or--

"Malal, you know I had to bargain her down, right? This is cheapest bargain I could get you. Did you know what she wanted, originally? Want to know?"

What was it?

"Living tissue sample. She want piece of your skin, muscle, hair, bone. All of those, for Valnikov Ekaterina. ...Oh, and one kidney, too. Because why not?"

Xiaomei grins at your silence, before shaking her head. "Now you know, and now, isn't as bad to give blood instead of those, eh?" She sighs. "Go on, stop being such big baby. Give blood. Just think of it as transfusion, to save someone's life. ...Well, isn't it something like that already?"

Yeah. Yeah, you guess it does.

You thank Xiaomei, before walking back to Madaraki. Sitting back down on your chair and activating your outward-facing vox once more, after a fashion.

"Ah, are we okay, theeeeeen, Miss Malaaaaaal?" The Professor beams at you, all smiles. "Can we continue with the extraction?"

Sure, you nod. ...It's not going to hurt, is it?

"Of course not!" The blonde blinks, looking as if you'd personally insulted her. "We are only drawing blood, Miss Malal, not extracting living tissue!" It's here that she smiles, hopefully. "Although, if you are volunteeering~"

NO. Er...no, thanks. Just the blood.

"Oh, well. It was worth a shot! But yes, let's begin the extraction~"

And so, you allowed Madaraki Fran to draw your blood. Four ampoules of it. You let her take it from your hand - right after you turned up your suit up to Maximum, to make sure that your anti-magic juju doesn't affect anyone even with you just exposing your hand. And it didn't really hurt all that much - she even gave you a lollipop for "being a veeeeeery good girl and not flinching at all!"

"Perfect!" The blonde professor squeals as she carefully slots in each ampoule of freshly-drawn blood - YOUR blood - in a rather expensive-looking metal case, before hugging it close to her chest. "Oh, happy days are heeere again!!"

You very nearly choke on the lollipop you're noisily crunching to pieces at that. ...Was your blood samples really that important?

"Oh, you haaave no idea, Miss Malal!" Stars shining in her eyes, the Venenum strokes the top of the specimen box. "You've practically funded my research for a century, maybe mooooore!"

...Right. Okay.

Um. About Valnikov, then...?

"Ah, yes!" Madaraki nods, placing the specimen box somewhere inside her coat, and then takes out what appears to be an envelope, which she passes over to you. Just by picking it up, you feel that some kind of coin is inside - and you take it out to give it a look.

It's a normal silver coin, but stamped with the roman numerals XIII.

"Valnikov Ekaterina is being held at Casino Town. It is heavily guarded and only those who hold that token can freely enter or leave it, as well as people rich enough to place bets in the Blood God's Arena. You will find her there, I think."

The Blood God's Arena?

"Magical Girl fighting circuit. It is...unofficial tournament scene, where rich people bet on which Magical Girl dies in combat first. Very violent, very...unsavory." The blonde Venenum shakes her head, a frown on her face. "I find such a place reprehensible and wroooong. It goes against everything I swore an oath for." She swallows audibly. "And Valnikov Ekaterina, she is one of the participants in today's card. Which is in one hour, I think..."

...Shit. Okay. That means you need to get a move on. Alright, can she give you directions to it? And possibly anything else she can give you to help stealing into that place?

"Of...of course. I will do anything I can..." Comes the faint reply, and you look back up at Madaraki. It's here, then, you realize that her upbeat mood has all but evaporated, leaving behind nothing but...melancholy, it looks like.

Or guilt.

And slowly, painfully, with all the catharsis of a long-postponed confession or the lancing of a boil left to fester - the Venenum known as Professor Madaraki began to tell you about what the Warmaster of the Thirteenth had been doing to Valnikov Ekaterina.

Experimentation, she called it. The worst kind - with the subject first restrained, to break her will; then tortured, to break her body; and finally sedated, to break her mind. Creating a blind, numb and soulless shell that could not even fight against what was to be done with her.

And that was the part that would hurt the least.

What came next...you couldn't even fathom how someone sane could have thought of it. From what you could understand from Madaraki's tearful account, the Thirteenth Warmaster had turned Ekaterina into a monster. Something about making specific parts of a Magical Girl's body turn into terrifying weapons by grafting corrupted witch-flesh onto them, as well as onto their Soul Gems.

The Thirteenth Warmaster was trying to create the perfect symbiosis between Witch and Magical Girl - a perfect union between the two eternally-warring states, of what is and what is to become. And somehow, she had decided that Ekaterina was the perfect candidate for this. A rookie Vindicare, barely out of basic training.

You asked her if it could be reversed, if what their Warmaster did to Ekaterina could be healed somehow. Madaraki mournfully shook her head. Perhaps her mind could be saved, and her Soul Gem purified - but to get Ekaterina back to what she was, before the procedure? Impossible. She had been changed irrevocably. Valnikov Ekaterina would have to live - and die - with what had been wrought upon her.

By the time she finished, the blonde Venenum's eyes were red from all the crying. You couldn't cry - you were much too angry to. Too angry about what had been done to Ekaterina - and you promised her dying mother that you would take care of her.

Ekaterina, you say quietly, hoarsely.

"M-Miss Malal...?"

Her name is Ekaterina, you growl at her. Not the subject, or the patient.

Ekaterina.

The blonde Venenum nods. "A-ah. Yes. I..." She shakes her head. "....Miss Malal, I have to tell you, she may not...recognize you when you rescue her. She may attack you if she sees you, or even try to kill you. My Warmaster has seen to that."

Ngh. You weren't expecting this. You didn't plan for this at all.

...Who is her Warmaster, anyway? Who's the chucklefuck who decided that experimenting on Magical Girls, especially those of other Officios, was a good idea in the first place?

"Strauss," Madaraki murmurs. "Herr Doktor Emma Strauss."

Jesus. Even her name sounds evil.

We're putting her in direct conflict with her Warmaster if we do this. Unless we plan on taking her with us when we leave, we can't leave her here if we take her along. And she's very unsteady on her feet right now.

That would make us worse than Strauss.

You'll worry about how to fix Ekaterina after you get her home. What you're worried about now is getting Ekaterina subdued long enough for you to get her out of the city. Does Madaraki have anything that can help do that?

The blonde Venenum nods, taking something from the inside of her coat again. It's a silver case, similar to the one that she kept your blood samples in. This she slides across the table to you. It's a compact hypogun, with four glass ampoules - each one full of gleaming silver liquid.

"I anticipated such a request, Miss Malal, and made my own personal formulation before our meeting today. One doses is enough to put three Witches to sleep. Two doses, they will be comatose for an entire year. Three will...make their sleep endless. They will never wake up."

...Yeah, okay. That's something to think about.

You slip the entire thing into your inventory, before standing up. Well, anyway. There's no time to dawdle. You should get going to Casino Town.

"Ah, I see...I...I wish I could be of more help, Miss Malal." The Professor stands up again, shakily and with obvious effort. "Please, take care--"

What? What's she talking about?

"E-eh? I'm..." Madaraki smiles, uncertainly. "I am wishing Miss Malaaaal...would take care on her rescue, and--"

No. You're not going alone. She's going with you.

If there was any way for the pale Venenum to grow paler, she would have at that moment. "N-no. No, Miss Malal. I...I cannot. Please, I know you are angry with me, but do not force me to go in that hell again." She shakes her head. "C-call me a coward, or a weakling if you wish, but I cannot go back there. I need to return to our ship, to..."

To what? You snarl at her, making her shrink back. To hide?

"N-no. To...to do what I should have done a long time agoooo, Miss Malal." The Venenum all too nearly collapses to the floor as she tries to move forward, but she is able to support herself with both hands on the table.

"I return to our ship to...lead the ousting of our Warmaster, Emma Strauss. While she is still here, I will show everyone in my Officio what she has been doing...and we will elect a new one in her stead. Someone who will never resort to this kind of butchery again." She looks up at you. "That is my aim, here. I know I have not given you any reason to believe me, but...please, that is what I need to do."

It's here, then, that she seems to get an idea. "I...I may be able to help you still, even if I am not around." She takes something again from her coat - it's her personal identification and keycard, this time, attached to a clip.

She pushes it into your gloved hand. "Use this to enter the Arena's lower levels. That is where Strauss will be holding the patient--er, Valnikov, in preparation for her fight. Look for a young man named Souji - brown hair, looks unreliable, and has his nose always in a porno book. He is my personal assistant, and he may be able to help you sneak Valnikov out before the card even starts."

Hnh. That's...that's handy.

Couldn't she have given it to you earlier, instead of the coin? This would have helped a lot.

"I..." Madaraki shakes her head. "I should have, shouldn't I...? B-but I suppose I was still not comfortable with the idea of...betraying my Warmaster." She lets out a tremulous sigh. "M-maybe they will start calling me the Betrayer when all is said and done, huh...?"

How do you react?

You blink at her, before shaking your head. ...If there's anyone who deserves that title, it's Strauss, not Madaraki. She was the one who betrayed the Thirteenth by going into something she wasn't supposed to.

"...I do not really know what my Warmaster was thinking. She was...brilliant, before. I still believe she is, now, but not in this way. Not like this." The blonde venenum shakes her head, before managing a smile.

"Thank you, Miss Malaaal. I am...I will remember this as a debt to you. The Thirteenth will always be in your debt, and I will make sure none of us will ever forget it."

It's here that she glances up towards the ceiling. "Xerxes! Come down from there, we are leaving! Bring Odette aaaand her things, we will need to be quick!"

...What? Xerxes was up on the ceiling all along? You look up as well, following Madaraki's gaze. What kind of bodyguard is that--

"SKREEEEEK." The THING that slowly unsticks itself from the ceiling chirps - almost melodically - as it lowers its appendages to the floor.

It's a...it's a giant fleshy starfish thing, that's the only way you can describe it. Big enough to devour a full-grown man, and harangue an entire dormitory full of schoolgirls.

"KREEEEK." It chirps again, this time at you, and slips a tentacle under the table to take the heavy suitcase placed there, along with what looks like a Hello Kitty backpack. Madaraki reaches out with a hand to pet the encumbered tentacle, before nodding at the creature itself, which then slithers past you to get to the entrance.

"DO not worry, Xerxes is harmless. He is a sweetheart." The Venenum smiles, just as Odette herself starts to shriek.

Before you can say anything else, though, she catches you in a hug once more. "I will pray to the Blessed Lady for your success," she murmurs into your ear, before letting go and limping away where Xerxes had gone.

You sink down on your chair and resist the idea of pulling off your helmet and just...ugh. You don't even know.

In pretty much the last hour or so, you found out that the girl you're supposed to save and bring back to base may not be herself anymore, and has a good chance of killing you before you could even touch her.

You wonder, then, if she's still worth saving. If she's still going to factor into the things you planned, in the things you dreamed about.

...Of course she is, you spit at yourself. It shouldn't even have to be asked. Whether or not she fits in the grand scheme of things, you are not leaving her here to die.

You're better than that.

You manage to reach Casino Town in perfect time after that, and with the coin's help, you score not only entry but a secure parking spot for Schpeltiger. And Casino Town looked just like what its name implied - it's the gambling part of the city, where neon lights shone blinding, electric colors as far as the eye can see. Strip clubs, motels, casinos...hell, the entire town is a fucking casino. The inhabitants look fit for the role, too - some of them eagle-eyed shysters looking for the next sucker, others looking broken and bankrupt, sunken eyes contemplating suicide.

You ignore all of these and head straight for the Blood God's Arena - and it's not exactly hard to find. Right in the very middle of the town, it looks like someone took Mitakihara Stadium and gave it horns. And skulls. And today's card - which is thirty minutes from now - is advertised quite prominently on its outward-facing walls.

The Blessed Lady's Champion versus The Butcher, the garish banner read.

...Shit. That means Enyo. Enyo's challenger is Valnikov. And she was hurt earlier, too. You don't like the chances of her surviving, nor are you in love with the idea of Valknikov being slaughtered by a Black Templar who has more honor than common sense.

What do you do now?

(Chapter 1: http://pastebin.com/xjkhycZG)

This operation had started out a mess. During the initial stages of the invasion plan, sneak through the confusion of the front lines. Proceed to kill or capture an unknown number of enemy magical girls, eliminate potential witnesses, and return as quietly as they came. There were countless uncertainties, but they had done the best they could.

It was lucky, then, that the enemy had no Culexus countermeasures. Were they inexperienced, or was their spy to thank for that? Either way, if they had allowed the Second to reinforce this position, things would have become difficult. As it was, it was entirely one-sided.

The Culexus designated as Paria was very effective at what she did, and what she did was subjugate enemy magical girls.

She finished checking the captured children. They were all terrified and hated her, as expected, but none of them started convulsing or lost consciousness. Not because of her, at least. None of the Seventh's girls had tried to blend in with the crowd.

It was unfortunate for the citizens of Lanehen that their orders were so thorough. The Hexenjaeger company, like everything to do with magic, was a state secret. Even rumors would cause Dieter no end of paperwork and headaches. For being in the wrong place at the wrong time, the people of Lanehen had no future.

Be that as it may, there was a silver lining to everything. If she hadn't come on this mission, she never would have found this lovely red dress. It was a mystery what such nice clothing was doing in a backwater town like this, displayed so prominently in the window of the town's tailor. It might have bothered her, once, to step over two corpses to get her spoils of war.

“All done here, you can start the fire anytime! Gonna go check out the rest of town!” The sergeant idly nodded, not looking away from his work. Their prisoners had been separated from their soul gems, and their vacant bodies piled ungracefully on the back of a truck. Not the ideal setup, but they were traveling light.

There wasn't much left to do here, really, but she could go help Dieter with whatever he was doing.

Strolling up the fenced path to the town proper, a soldier she didn't recognize turned around the bend, abruptly stopping in front of her. His fists were clenched- he must not be used to her presence yet. Being what she was, non-magical observers felt an instinctual hatred toward her. It was a testament to their training that a stray bullet hadn't taken her out long ago.

“M-ma'am! We're in battle with an enemy Eversor! The captain says to come at once!”

She focused, expanding her field of her power toward the town, probing. It didn't take long to find the target, wildly burning through her magical energy. Was she wounded, or struggling?

“Relax, it feels like they've already subdued her. There's no rush.” She beckoned for the young man to walk with her. She took a closer look at him.

“If I know my insignias, you're a new recruit? How did you end up with the Hexenjaegers?” She had few enough chances to socialize, so she tried to be friendly to the soldiers that would humor her.

“My little sister contracted. I found out, and the next day the captain showed up. He said I'd been drafted. I don't think I could have refused.”
“Sounds like he did you quite a favor. The Thirteenth doesn't mess around when it comes to leaks.”
“I think I'm starting to realize that, ma'am.” He dragged his foot to wipe blood off of his boot.
“You ever get another chance to talk to your sister?” A change of topic was in order.
“They haven't let me meet her since that night.” No luck with this topic, either.
“I see...” As far as she knew, there was no rule against it, now that he was in on the big secret. The sister must have felt guilty for getting him involved in all of this.

The path ended, and they reached the town. Captain Dieter Gris was waiting for them, cleaning his Walther P38 as he leaned against a wall. He was a sharp-looking man, especially in his black leather coat.

“Nice of you to join us.” He seemed annoyed. More than usual, that is.
The soldier snapped to a salute. “I brought her, sir.”
“Were you delayed?” He didn't seem that interested in the response. His attention was focused on her. She shifted uncomfortably under his gaze.
“Is this a problem?” Not seeing the prisoner, she guessed where this was going.
Dieter turned his attention to the soldier again. “Miss Paria is not your commanding officer. I am. Return to your squad.” The soldier saluted again and did so, eager to get away.

“She escaped, then?” She hated looking bad in front of him.
“Yeah. Another showed up, with a bow. Four dead, one wounded.”
“Ah, jeez, all my fault for being lazy. Sorry.” She was sorry, though perhaps not as sorry as she should be.
He ignored this. “I watched them meet up with a third girl. We'll have to pursue them.” He sounded tired. At this point, they just wanted the mission to be over.

Dieter had spoken about their losses in a clinical tone, but she knew he deep down, no matter how many terrible things he did, part of him was an idealist. Logic told him deaths were unavoidable with their swarm tactics, but he was never able to accept that. It worried her, but it was also what she liked most about him. She had failed him this time, but he would never blame her, only himself. Having non-magical friends like him made this curse bearable.

“It could be worse. Rolt could have come along.” The company's other captain would have enjoyed the slaughter too much. Her joke was in poor taste, but got a slight, sad smile out of him.

“I suppose we should start right away. Most of the men will head back with our prisoners and wounded. You, me, and a couple squads will pursue. I'll give the orders.” He made to leave, before turning back.

“And what's with the dress?”

“Oh! I found it here!” She smiled mischievously and did a dramatic twirl to show it off. “Don't I look great?”
“Yeah.” He turned away and kept walking. She had hoped he would sound more sincere...

Claire awkwardly kept pace behind Mireille and Amy, walking carefully on the uneven ground of the thick forest. Amy held a lantern out in front of them. They hadn't been walking for long, but the sounds of the fire in town were already distant.

Mireille's occasional reassuring grins in Claire's direction were the only acknowledgment they even remembered her presence. She had been swept up in a lot of events tonight, and had just gone along with the flow, but she had questions. Lots of questions. If her new companions wouldn't address the elephant in the room, she would.

“So, uh, what's going on?”

Amy let out a tired sigh, and Mireille turned around, managing to walk backwards on the difficult terrain.“I guess this is a little overwhelming to you, huh. How much did the Seventh tell you?”

Telling her what she knew about magical girls and witches, Mireille relaxed a little and gave a wry smile. “That makes this a little easier, then. Girls have contracted without knowing what witches really are. Always rough. The Seventh's too much of a softie, though!”

“As for what happened back there...” Folding her hands behind her back, she looked like a child preparing to be scolded. “It's kind of a long story. Um, so magical girls don't always get along...”

“That boarding house was a cover, wasn't it? And the Germans came looking for you?” She could put the pieces together. She should be furious, but she couldn't bring herself to be angry at the girl. There was too much she needed to learn from her.

“Yeah, they did.” Her constant cheerfulness was gone for a moment. “We could have put our base anywhere. We thought Lanehen would be overlooked. You all just had bad luck.”

The mood was heavy. In a way, Claire was surprised at her own resilience. Her parents were dead, and her only feelings were a simmering anger toward the culprits.

It was a minute before she could bring herself to ask her next question.

“And what was that thing in town? The Culexus?”
Amy answered. “Culexus are the chosen of the Blessed Lady. To find ourselves against one is an ill omen.” Very cryptic. Mireille looked at Claire and shrugged a little. Amy continued, being much more straightforward. “They control an anti-magic field. Bad news if you're magical.”

Mireille briefly explained the classifications.
“So you're a Vindicare, then?”
“Ehehe, everyone thinks that.” She stuck out her tongue a little. “I'm actually a Callidus. The bow isn't my magic.”

Claire could almost see the lightbulb go off in her head. “Oh! That reminds me! We still need to introduce ourselves!” At this, they all stopped walking. Amy turned around to face them, momentarily blinding Claire with the lantern.

“I'm Mireille Linois! I've been a magical girl for a while now, contracted to the Seventh, like you!” She started stretching her arms. “I was in Lanehen with Aveline's gang, but I've been out of town for a while, escorting Amy here. Just got home and saw the attack.”

Claire looked expectantly over at Amy, who lowered the lantern a bit. “My name is Amelia Brynn. Initiate of the Black Templars, and of the Eversor rank.” With a touch of annoyance, she quickly added “We're an order contracted to the Second Incubator in London. We're at war with the Thirteenth, and I was here as an envoy to formalize our alliance.” She looked at Claire expectantly.

“Claire Roux. I just made a contract back in the village. Where are we going? We do have a goal, right?”

They started walking again. Mireille grabbed a small apple off a tree as they passed by it. “Oh, that's easy. Amy hid her motorcycle around here somewhere. We caught wind of the attack as we approached town and wanted a stealthy approach.” She took a large bite, wrinkled her face in disgust, and threw it into the foliage.

“And then?”

Amy turned her head, looking back at her. “We're heading back to my order's temporary base in Dunkirk. I need to warn my sister about what happened here...” She jerked her head to indicate Mireille. “...she's tagging along, and you have nowhere else to go.”

“There it is. Behind those bushes.” Mireille pointed, and Claire squinted to make it out. It was painted black, and Claire was happy to see it had a sidecar.

Amy ran ahead and led the bike toward them. “We'll have to throw away the tea to make room for her.” She reached into the sidecar and pulled out a crate.
Mireille waved it away. “They don't need it anymore.” Setting it in the bushes, Amy straddled the bike, grumbling as Mireille hopped on and nuzzled up against her back.

(6/13)

It still looked like an uncomfortable fit. Much of the leg room was filled by a large metal box. Embossed letters on the side identified it as a radio receiver.

Sitting down, she saw Mireille's eyes grow wide. “Wait, wait, wait!” She pointed at the broach on Claire's collar. “Your soul gem is in pretty bad shape! Just how reckless were you back there?”

“What? I was-”

She was cut off as Amy whirled around and snatched it, holding it out and studying it warily. Having seen it for the first time since she transformed, Mireille was indeed right- a malignant darkness was swirling, clawing at what remained of the crimson light she had seen earlier.

Amy gave a grunt. “You're fine for now, but no magic until we can find you a grief seed.” She threw the broach back, and started fiddling with the bike as she talked to herself. “It's risky to wait until camp, we might need to find a witch along the way...”

Mireille looked ponderous as she spoke. “Margaret might help us. Her territory isn't too far from here. If she's not out hunting for witches, she has a home near Sedan.”
“That's where the town did most of its trading.”
Mireille nodded, but seemed uncertain about something.

Amy brought the engine sputtering to life, roughly riding across the terrain, and they set off southeast, no closer to safety in Dunkirk.

Until she was sitting down, she hadn't realized just how exhausted she was. She fell into a deep sleep in the cramped sidecar of Amy's Norton.

Claire had never seen Sedan quite like this. To call the atmosphere tense was an understatement. Most of the citizens had up and left. A few soldiers loitered around town, their main force not far away, apparently building up their defense along the Meuse river. They looked in even poorer spirits than the townsfolk.

Before getting to town, a feeling of self-consciousness had come over Claire, her costume caked with dried blood. Releasing the transformation, her original clothes returned, still torn and muddied. Mireille flipped her a few francs, and the three agreed to meet up later.

Familiar with the town, she made a beeline to buy new clothes, hoping the shop was open. The jolly old man who ran it was a family friend, and had always kept close business relations with her father. It wasn't until she saw the bearded man looking up from his book that she had second thoughts.

“Claire!? What happened to your clothes?” Time to think fast- this was going to make her feel guilty. She didn't have it in her to tell him the truth.
“I tripped and took a pretty bad fall on the way to town. I'm not hurt, but I'm afraid I need to buy new clothes.”
“Buy?” He gave a warm chuckle. “I wouldn't charge you for this! Is your father in town, too? It's been forever!” That tugged her heartstrings hard. She hoped it would be many years before he got a chance to catch up with him.
“I'm sorry to say that you may not see him for a long time. We're heading west, trying to avoid the fighting. They sent me to town for supplies.”
This hit him hard, and suddenly he looked his age. “And he didn't even come to say goodbye?” His voice dropped to a sad whisper, and his gaze fell away from her. “He was always afraid of this. It may be the right move, getting out of here. But I can't leave my shop... it's all I have left.”

She didn't have anything to say to that.

His eyes met hers again, and he gave a sad smile. “I'm glad you came by. I still have some of the clothes you made for me in return for that nice bolt of red silk.”

His last words to her echoed guiltily. “You take care of yourself, Claire.” Was that really what she was doing?

Thirty minutes later, she was the first of the three to reach the agreed meeting place. The riverbank north of town.

Leaning to look over the river, she thought about the last fifteen hours. Where would she be at this time next week? It sounded like Amy's order was the enemy or her enemy. Could Claire fight with them? She found herself thinking about battle with a frequency that would have disturbed her old self. Was that part of being a magical girl, or was revenge just a way of coping with loss?

Amy sauntered up in few minutes, having found fuel. After demanding to see her soul gem again, they stood in silence. With her hood down, she looked surprisingly unassuming. Her brown hair was slightly curly and stopped at her ears, while her face managed to be simultaneously haughty and miserable.

Maybe twenty minutes later, Mireille came back, scratching her head as she ran up. “Ha! Sorry for the wait! I was grilling some soldiers for info!”

Margaret lived about a mile north of town. As they made their way, Mireille filled them in on what she had learned. The Wehrmacht hadn't made a move on France, yet, but much of the French forces had moved to Belgium. This portion of the border was being held by one unsupported infantry regiment. Claire wasn't sure what that meant, but the way the two were talking about it, it didn't sound promising.

(9/13)

They arrived at a humble, comfortable-looking wooden cottage. “Margaret's a real traditionalist. Lives alone and hunts witches. Said we'd never be able to support so many girls in the same area, and that fighting other magical girls didn't earn us grief seeds. In the end, though, she was always willing to lend us a hand. Helped set us up here, actually!”

Their knock on the door was met by silence. Nothing was moving inside. Mireille knocked again, louder, but Amy moved to a window. Seeing the curtains drawn, she picked a good-sized rock off the ground.

“Don't! There's no need to-” Amy didn't seem to be listening, as she smashed the rock through a tall window, shattering the glass. As she stormed through the window frame, she tore the curtain out, along with its rod. Claire giggled a little at the thrill of it, following her inside.

The moment she did, a sickening scent assaulted her nostrils. Amy's eyes were focused on the far side of the room. Claire looked over, and started gagging. That must have been Margaret, decaying on a fluffy chair near the fireplace. Her dirty blonde hair looked like straw, and her clothes were eerily similar to Claire's own.

There was a click and the door opened. “So is-” Mireille entered and noticed. “Whoa!” Claire ran out past her, hoping to get outside before she emptied her stomach.

As she finished, she overheard the conversation inside.

“One bad thing after another, huh?”
“She has no injuries, no soul gem, and her body is decaying. She's a witch.”
“I can't find her spare grief seeds. We'll have to hurry back to Dunkirk, before-”
“Don't worry. We'll have one after we beat the witch.”

Mireille strolled out, with an uncharacteristic scowl. “You make it sound so easy. Its body has been decaying for days. It could be anywhere by now.” She crossed her arms.

Its body? Were fallen magical girls so easily forgotten?

Amy rapidly glanced around as she walked past them. All they could see was her back. “Finding it IS easy. Witches are drawn to negative emotions. Why would it want to leave this town?”

Mireille's fingers impatiently tapped the quiver at her waist. “So you want us to wander blindly around this powder keg until a war breaks out?”

Amy jerked her head back to face them. The huge smile on her face would have looked more at home on the other girl. In her cupped hand was a dark blue soul gem, pulsing wildly in a cyclical rhythm. “I don't think we'll need to!”

Mireille cursed and made to grab her bow, and Claire clambered to her feet.

Before they knew it, the forest, the cabin, and the sound of the river had disappeared. A new reality was swallowing them up, forming around them.

---

They were in a clearing, surrounded by an endless field of golden wheat that swayed gently in the wind. In the horizon, countless windmills turned wildly, framed by a blood red sky. In the center of the clearing was the witch- it could be nothing else. An enormous, bone white egg was surrounded by writhing vines, obsidian and covered in thorns.

Mireille readied an arrow, and Claire readied herself to transform, but Amy threw out her arm, as if to block them.

“You two conserve your magic. This is my duty. I may be an Initiate, but I am a Black Templar.” The tone of her voice didn't allow for much argument. Not waiting for a response she walked forward, a fierce look in her eyes. She was still in her faded black cloak, untransformed, and seemingly unarmed.

The vines abruptly stopped all movement. Starting at the center, a white shimmer ran down them, and the tip of each slowly turned toward Amy. They seemed to appraise her for a moment, before all shooting toward her. A split second later, there was an explosion of dirt where Amy had been standing, a dozen heavy vines having struck at the same time. Bits of them snapped off as they hit the ground, obsidian shrapnel spraying out.

But Amy was already in the air, her cloak fluttering. The stone tendrils retracted, and flew toward her. Claire was momentarily worried about how she would dodge in the air, but a large maul materialized in Amy's hands. It looked to be made of iron, and had deep blue sapphires socketed in its grip.

There was a sequence of loud metallic noises as Amy hit away each tendril, shattering them. She hit the ground with her legs bent, and dashed toward the giant egg. More vines surged her, but she dodged to the side each time. As she got near, one swept from the side at her feet, but she pushed off the ground and flew over it, high in the air.

At the height of her jump, the hammer in her hands glowed with a blinding blue light. As Claire looked again, the hammer had grown many times in size. The head was almost comically large, easily dwarfing Amy herself. It was a solid iron slab, perfectly rectangular, but the size of a small tank. She tilted the enormous socketed grip down, and gravity did its work.

The remaining vines quickly retracted and coiled into a shield. It was nowhere near enough to stop the immense power behind the ridiculous weapon. The barrier was pulverized, and the hammer's descent continued into the defenseless shell of the egg.

It didn't just crack, it was violently smashed open with a sickening squelching. A sea of thick, gooey blood poured out, quickly covering the field. A quivering mass of flesh rested where the egg was, spotted with bits of decay. A beak pointed out of it, near a wildly spinning bloodshot eye.

The wheat in the field joyfully danced in the wind as it drank heavily of the liquid on the ground. The windmills slowly came to a halt, all at once, as the remains of the embryo stopped its twitching, ending its death throes.

The world around them dissolved, returning them to the deserted cabin. Amy, not showing any sign that she cared about being drenched and covered in bits of what seemed like curdled blood, reached down to pick up a pitch black stone, surrounded by a cage of pointed metal.

“Here's your grief seed, Claire.” She carelessly tossed it at her, like an afterthought.

Was this the fate that awaited them all?

It was all so absurd. She couldn't help but burst out laughing. And once she started, it was hard to stop.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/18/13(Mon)06:12 No.28356109

You decide to go directly into the Blood God Arena's lower levels and find this Souji character that Madaraki told you about. You have a feeling that you wouldn't be able to dissuade Enyo no matter what you tried. It's always the same with her type - predictable to a fault, sure, but completely stubborn and unyielding once she's made her decision.

Nothing would make her change her mind - it's a matter of honor, she'd only say. Only death would change her mind, and probably not even then.

Honor. It's...you know how it operates, sure, but you're not a fan of its mailing list. It sounds righteous and sacred on paper, sure, but you've seen people die just because of it. People who didn't need to die, people who didn't WANT to die. But they did, all because of some self-perceived slight to pride, or to a rigorous moral code that never allowed for mercy, or forgiveness, or even swallowing your own fucking pride to do the right thing.

Honor's killed millions of people, and hasn't saved a single one.

You're not a fan, is what you're getting at.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/18/13(Mon)06:14 No.28356130

>>28356109

In any case, you make your way towards the gaudily-constructed Arena. ...They really took it seriously, this Blood God thing. The entire building's got gargoyles and spikes and pentagrams all over the place - as well as skulls out the ass. There's skull pillars, skull crenellations, even skull CHAIRS! No doubt if you'd look into the giftshop, you'd find all sorts of skull memorabilia.

Freaky stuff, but it actually looks pretty cool. You wish you found out about this kind of thing some other way. ...Maybe you'll visit after this mission. Get some photographs for your album, that'd be pretty neat, right?

It takes you a bit of walking, but you finally find the staff entrance. It's guarded by two appropriately-costumed security guards, wearing skull masks and papier-mache pauldrons. They don't look to be armed, and look bored about the entire thing. One's actually fiddling with his phone, and the other's flirting with a Magical Girl, her green hair done up in twintails.

Hmh. Well, you can try to slip past them, or use Madaraki's ID.

Alternatively, you can use the Magical Girl as a distraction.

What do you do?

[]Try and slip past them. They're not even paying attention, so it should be easy.
[]Use Madaraki Fran's identification. She did say it'd help you get in.
[]Vomit Power Time.

The word itself is written 'senpai', but when spoken it's 'sempai' due to pre-bilabial shift in the nasal phoneme to make it bilabial as well.

Or in more straightforward terms, in Japanese, whenever an 'n' comes directly before a 'p' or 'b' sound, it's spoken as 'm'.

All good, man. It's probably because Japanese doesn't actually have a character for sole-m; it's all 'ma'/'mi'/'mu'/'me'/'mo'. So even though in some cases the phonemic construction transposes to 'm' it's easier to just represent it in romanization as an 'n' anyway and trust that English speakers have the same tendency to carry out the phoneme shift.

>Chosen Tiebreaker!

Still staying in relative cover - by that, you're just standing around pretending to read one of the many posters pasted all over the streets here, promoting the next fight - you blink-click your suit's settings, and setting the SPREAD FACTOR from Wide-Spread to Tight-Spread. This would compress the wave you'll be sending towards the entrance into a narrow one, allowing you to target one unfortunate Magical Girl out of a group.

While you did that, you also reached back to turn the large ratcheting dial at the back of your helmet - your Limiter Field setting - and lower it from a healthy 80% to 50%. Any Magical Girl that gets the Wendy Special for you then would blow their chunks hard enough that they'd pass out.

...It's a bit of an overkill, here, but you don't exactly have enough time to be delicate about it. Your HUD is displaying the time still, at the very top of your visor - and it says that you have the better part of two hours to get this shit done and get your main objective to the extraction point. Whoever the green-haired Magical Girl is, well, it's just her unlucky day she decided to hang around here.

The lines of your suit briefly glowing blue, then red - and you turn to face your target fully, centering her on your sights. She's singing now, doing a little dance in front of the appreciative guards while singing some sort of annoying J-PoP song. Just as the targeting system of your suit paints her with a reticle over her head, it's here that you gesture casually towards her with a hand. Releasing the pent-up energy you'd been keeping back and throwing it like a dagger. A VOMIT dagger.

It hits, and the effect is immediate. Just as she's about to belt out the chorus, all the color drains in her face - and instead of a beautiful mezzo-soprano, a wave of today's breakfast erupts out of her mouth and splatters all over her chuckling audience.

Heh. It really never gets old.

The Magical Girl backpedals here, both hands clamping over her mouth in a desperate attempt to dam the flood - but she heaves once more and last night's dinner joins the meal after. She drops to the ground a moment later, unconscious, among the disgusted yells and cursing of the two guards.

As they're arguing on what to do while taking off their uniforms - one of them trying to lift the poor girl off of the ground and into your arms - you casually stride into the staff entrance, pushing the doors open and stepping inside.

You clip Madaraki's ID onto your suit's collar, but reversed - anyone who'd be looking casually would only see you with it, and dismiss you as someone who belongs there. That's the main thing about sneaking into areas - you have to look the part. You have to look like you own the place, or, failing that, look like you're too busy to be accosted.

But in any case, you're in. Not a lot of people around, and those you spot seem to be mostly mundane staff - janitors and technical staff, nothing too important. You also see some snack vendors taking their breaks here, their wares stashed all over the place. Khorne on the Cob, Candy Khorne, Khorne Dogs...there's an underlying theme here, and you're not just sure what.

It's here that you hear a growling sound - and you whip around, ready for the worst. Another growl, and this time you look downward - it's coming from your suit. More specifically, your stomach.

...Ugh. You forgot to eat earlier at the Restaurant. All you had was one of Odette's candies.

Anyway. A bit more of looking around, and you see the stairwell leading down to the lower levels. There's also an elevator here, too, but...you probably should avoid it, in case you meet anyone suspicious. Anyone important's going to be using the elevator, and you'd like to avoid them. Still, it'd be the quickest of the two.

What do you use to get downstairs?

You take the stairs, instead. Nothing against elevators, of course, but you don't trust yourself enough not to make too much of a scene if you needed to take someone down in that kind of closed space. Stairs at least gives you enough room to move in, and escape if you need to.

But of course, you appropriated a few snacks while the vendors weren't looking.

And so, with you taking a few bites out of a cold Khorne Dog with every few steps, you reach the first underground floor of the Blood God Arena. ...Ugh, it smells your dad's farm back in the country. You peek inside, and see the reason why - it's full of animals.

No, seriously, it's a fucking zoo. Wild animals, specifically - the sort that you can starve to turn into ravenous, man-eating monsters. You spot a couple of tigers pacing restlessly in their cages, and bears savaging what looks like the unfortunate remains of a maintenance guy. There's even a rhinoceros here, and from where you're standing it looks heavily sedated, by the way it's just lying there calmly. And all of them have what looks like a crest of wires and lights crowning their skulls, each wire glowing a rather menacing red. Some of the wires stretch out from their perch and connect into other parts of the body, like a distended vein, pumping god knows what into their musculature.

The three lower floors are the same, sporting different captive beasts. ...Probably more of Strauss' work, as you watch a heavyset gorilla with spikes welded onto its fists slam its forehead into its cage, denting the bars but not bending them entirely. Is this the kind of thing she does for a hobby? Is THIS what she did to Valnikov?

Your question is answered as you reach the last floor. There's only one cage here - and its lone occupant is your main objective.

No. No. It's...ugh. She didn't deserve this. No one deserves ANYTHING like this.

You force yourself to look. This is YOUR fault. You let her get captured. You have to look and see what you've done.

Valnikov Ekaterina is...she's in a bad way.

She is still in her magical girl uniform, but it's a filthy, bloody thing, mere rags instead of the uniform she wore with pride on her contract day. Her long hair, once the envy of everyone you'd introduced her to, is now matted and stringy, and clumped where blood had soaked there and dried. The same crest of wires jutting out from her skull, but this time topped by what appears to be a visor clamped onto her face, a black strip of solid steel that wrapped around her head and terminated into horns. Demon's horns.

Those could be easily removed, easily fixed. But what they did to her hands and legs...

...

They're going to pay. One way or another, they will.

Madaraki was wrong. Strauss didn't just turn Valnikov Ekaterina into a monster.

They turned her into an abomination.

Killing her would've been far less cruel than twisting her into this thing.

Okay. Deep breaths, Malal. Deep breaths. No use losing your temper now. You have a job to do.

Ekaterina seems to be asleep, too, most likely also sedated. She's also heavily chained down - a thick collar clasped around her neck, attached to three lengths of chain nailed down to her cell's floor. The bars of her cage seem to be electrically-charged too, from how the bars spark every so often, and the large sign warning everyone to keep clear, because shit is electrically charged.

A further peek inside yields you the sight of a brown-haired young man in a lab coat, leaning over his work desk, frantically typing into a laptop with an infuriated expression on his face. A shotgun is propped against his desk - a SAIGA if you're any judge. You're not too confident of his ability to use it in a pinch, but better safe than sorry.

How are you going to handle this?

You step across the threshold. If he noticed, he didn't show it - even typing harder into his laptop, mumbling all the while. ...Madaraki was right about one thing, anyway. He doesn't seem to be the reliable sort. But hopefully he'll be reliable enough to help you get Ekaterina out of here - or else you'll be feeding him to the rhino.

Clenching your hand into a fist, you give the door beside you a sudden, solid bang - the sound from it loud enough to echo around the room like a gunshot. Sounded like one, too, and enough that it made the young man on his laptop jump right out of his seat and dive for his shotgun. It's a clumsy dive, however, and he ends up smacking his face right into the side of his desk instead, the firearm clattering loudly on the floor.

"Who's...who's there? Who the fuck is there? I-I've got a gun, don't fuck with me--!" He's stuttering and nervous - moreso than anyone would be in this kind of situation. You glance at his table again, and see his rather impressive collection of empty power drink bottles. ...Caffeine addict, looks like, and suffering the jitters because of it.

"Yo." You breathe out into your vox, the speakers spitting the greeting out as a snarl. "You're Souji, right? Madaraki sent me to pick her up." You gesture towards Ekaterina dozing in her cage. "She's not going to be fighting any more. Doctor's orders."

You hear a click, and you turn to see the brown-haired young man aiming his saiga at you. With ONE HAND.

"...B-bullshit," He spits at you, or at least tries to - he's too busy trying to stop his nose from having a period. "Professor never t-told me anything about anything like that before she left, and she sure as hell didn't talk about anyone wearing a dirty biker costume coming over and suddenly acting like she owns the place." He shakes his head.

You nod, here. You're the last person who'll argue with him - Ekaterina has gone through a lot. And now you're taking her out of here and bringing her back home, where she belongs.

"What?" Souji's eyes go wide, here. "Y-you are? Because, if that's true, then..." He glances back at the filthy, chained-up girl in the electrified cage.

He looks back at you again, a hopeful look crossing his features - before suddenly being wiped away with a hardened look of suspicion. "N-no. No, I don't believe you. Miss Strauss warned me that somebody might come along and try to take her away with that story. Fat chance, lady, now get out before--"

Jesus Christ. Enough.

You nod towards his gun, and the entire thing disassembles itself in a sudden explosion of parts. Souji shrieks an almost womanly shriek at this, falling back on his ass as the cloud of metal, bolts and screws that had been his shotgun fly toward you in a swarm - and assembling itself back into its original form in your hands, now.

He's staring at you now, jaw agape in both fear and awe, as you check the gun. ...Well, it IS loaded, but the safety's still on. So he's not a TOTAL idiot, just half a one.

Look, you spit at him. Yes, of course, this sounds like a ploy to steal Ekaterina away. But that's what you ARE trying to do - steal her away from the Thirteenth, before any more experiments are done on her. Does he really think that it could get any worse for her than this? Getting cut apart and having pointy metal shit shoved into your hands and feet, and turned into a rampaging monster? Compared to that, killing her would be a fucking blessing.

So yes, you're going to steal her. And you're taking her home, to where she was kidnapped from in the first place. And he can either help you or you can kill him, which you have no problem of doing.

He's silent at this, and it's here that you realize that you're now the one pointing the gun at someone, here. You chuckle at yourself. ...Getting a bit too rustled, here. Got to calm down.

You take a deep breath, before lowering the weapon and glancing towards him. He seems just about ready to cry, here. Maybe you overdid it. Got to scale back.

"You know you could have ripped your arm off with this, right?" You wave the gun at him. "Not that Madaraki would mind. Seems like she enjoys fixing that sort of thing."

It takes him a moment to reply. "How...how did you..." He stutters, clearly trying to put together a sentence but seemingly unable to. "That...uh..."

He's talking again, at least. "Magic." You reply as you toss him back his shotgun. He very nearly recoils from it, until he realizes at the last second that you're giving it back to him, not flinging it at him - and catches it with a desperate grab. "What, haven't you ever seen a Magical Girl before?"

He shakes his head. "N-not...not up close. Not like you. With the...uh...helmet and spikes and stuff."

You laugh at this. Well, you're not an ordinary magical girl anyway.

He's silent at that, still sitting on the floor, making no move to get up. "...You're not lying, are you? If you were lying, then you'd have shot me instead. You did say you didn't have any problem killing me, so..."

And he's not as stupid as you thought he was! Brilliant!

"No, I'm not. Although my baby sister makes me feel stupid a whole lot, so." Souji smiles here, a grudging one, but one all the same. "...Alright. I still don't believe you with some stuff, but...I'll help you for now. I want to get her out of here, too." He gestures at the girl in the cage. "She keeps on repeating one single word when she's asleep, you know? Just before the sedatives wear off."

that's exactly what she's been doing. Drip feeding the information as Chiaki needs it.

The passwords are trigger phrases on information she may need if she's encountering that person or thing.

Which lends credence to the idea that Malal MAY have mindwiped her. And the thing about that is, for all Chiaki knows it was perfectly justified. Still frustrating, though, to be 20 steps behind.

No, you tell him. Nothing's wrong.

Now get this fucking cage out of your way.

"A-ah. Right. Okay." Souji runs over to what looks like a control panel set on the wall near his desk. "...You have a vehicle or something, yeah? A way out of here? Because once they find out she's gone, they'll be hunting. Miss Strauss'll have every thug here on her payroll searching for her."

You'll worry about that, you tell him.

"Right." The brown-haired young man says again. A click of a button, and it's here that the crackling cage bars suddenly spark before going silent - and then the entire cage starts to lift up, disappearing into the ceiling. Leaving the chains as the only obstacle left to freeing Ekaterina.

...She looks peaceful, here, even after everything they've done to her.

You make to step forward, but suddenly stop. Wait. If Strauss has turned her into a berserker, then--

"It's okay," Souji nods. "The implants aren't activated yet. Strauss has the controls to that, and she only activates it when it's time for her to fight. She's harmless at the moment, and you can probably talk to her. I mean..." He looks down. "I tried, but she never listened to me. I don't know if she couldn't understand me, or just didn't want to listen..."

...Wait. Wouldn't that mean that Strauss could make her go berserk at any time, then? Which is pretty bad news if you're trying to smuggle her out of here.

Souji nods. "That's why we're going to sedate her as much as we can. Render her medically comatose. It's...not going to be pretty, but at least the implants won't be able to take control of her then. Can't make something that's half-dead go berserk."

That should work, you suppose.

No chance of taking the implants out here, huh?

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 11/18/13(Mon)11:23 No.28358663

>>28358644

Souji shakes his head. "See a sterile and well-equipped operating room on your way here? Because that's what we need to take them out. Taking them out here...you risk not only killing her but also that...jewel thing that all Magical Girls have. They're both linked. You need to take them both out at the same time. Try and take one out, both of them self-destruct." He points towards the black metal collar clasped around Ekaterina's neck - and true enough, you see a crimson soul gem set there, at the very center, also surrounded by wires. "See?"

Yeah, you don't want that.

Does he know how to do that, then? Take out the implants?

Souji nods. "I was there when they put them in, so...yeah, I suppose I could. Professor Madaraki taught me enough, at least." He takes out what looks like a hypo-gun from from the depths of his coat, here, an ampoule of green liquid loaded into it. "Alright. This dose should be enough for twenty-four hours." He walks towards Ekaterina, before stopping. "Is...do you want to talk to her first, or something?"

What? No. No, not now. You need to get this thing going before too long. ...Ten minutes till the match starts, too.

Souji's eyes go wide, and nods. "Oh, shit. I almost forgot about that." It's here that he moves towards Ekaterina's sleeping form, kneeling down beside her and pressing the hypogun against her neck. "Alright, Kat. You're finally going home." His finger curls on the trigger. "I'll miss you--"

Suddenly, you feel...something. A sudden heaviness in the air, a buzzing that fills your head, an itching at the back of your neck. Your heartbeat fills your ears - a slow, monotonous thudding that suddenly beats harder and faster than ever before. A sense of dread quickening your breath, your pulse. Time slowing down to a literal crawl as adrenalin floods your system.

No, no. This...this isn't supposed to happen. Everything's going according to plan, nothing should go wrong--

Her claws, so long and impossibly sharp, moving closer to Souji from behind, the tips very nearly at the back of his neck.

Shit. SHIT.

Contrary to popular belief - you DID make two girls vomit today, and laughed about it - you hate using what you've been given to fuck around with other Magical Girls. Specifically, when you shut them down by temporarily nullifying the connection between their body and their Soul Gem. It's...well, you know what they're going through. And it's pretty much like dying, except they get trapped in the darkness of their Soul Gem, alone and unable to communicate with the rest of the outside world.

But you do it, of course. Just because you don't like it doesn't mean you raise a stink whenever you have to use it. Sometimes, you need to do the wrong thing to do the right thing.

And while you're loathe to pile on yet another horrifying experience on top of what Ekaterina has already suffered through - you're not going to stand here and watch Souji get torn apart by someone who doesn't even know what she's doing.

The lines of your suit glow a bright red as it senses your intent - and you lower your limiter as far as it safely can be lowered. 30%. Enough to take out an entire building of Magical Girls - or even erase a Witch from existence.

Sorry, Ekaterina.

You throw your hand towards her, and you watch as the bolt of nothing flies from your palm and smashes into her with monumental force.

It flings her back, an invisible sledgehammer's impact that would have flung her across the room had it not for the chains arresting her sudden flight. Her claws and bladed feet make sparks as they rake the floor, carving deep furrows into it - and it's then that she falls to the floor, unconscious, her visor blanking out.

The entire thing had taken no more than three heartbeats. Maybe less. You're not sure.

All you know is that YOU feel sick, now.

That had all the feeling of putting down a pet that's gone rabid.

"...Eh?" Souji blinks as he fires the hypogun into...nothing. "Wait, where did Kat--" He looks back at her now-sprawled form on the floor, before suddenly jumping back. "W-what happened? What's going on, what--"

Didn't...didn't he see her visor thing light up? You just saved him from having claws shoved right into his neck, there.

"Her visor? I..." It's here that all the color drains from his face, before turning to you. "Look, you have to get out of here. O-or hide. If they turned her on, that means that they're getting ready to send her up, and--"

Suddenly, voices. Coming from the stairwell.

"Shit. Shit. SHIT! They're here!" Souji hisses. "Miss Strauss' goons! Quick! Hide!"

What? Where?

"Uh..." Souji desperately looks around, before pointing towards a row of lockers at the other end of the room. "One of those! The last one at the left's empty and unlocked!

...What? No. NO. Is he telling you to hide in a fucking locker? That's going to be just like back in middle school!

"You don't understand! They're Miss Strauss' private army! If they find out that you're here, both of us are fucked! K-Kat, too!"

This has not been a pleasant experience. Time to share the pain with Strauss a little.

Know you did the right thing with Ekaterina there, though Malal. If she's going to have any kind of life on the other side of this experience, you're probably going to need Souji to put her back together again.

The air in the room was heavy and warm, and it was thick with a heady smell that clouded my senses. I couldn't quite place what it was…a little bit of spice, I think, and something else. Passion, maybe; the underlying musk of piles and piles of conquests, consummated in the very bed I was sitting on. A certain sort of coppery scent, too…blood? I wouldn't be surprised. Actually, I'd be surprised if it weren't.

The lights dimmed as she entered the room – I wondered if that was by design, or if it was just the…effect she had. She was a monster of a woman, stretching higher than just about anybody I'd seen in my life, with sweeping black hair and a vicious, predatory gleam in her eyes. Her arms and legs were…deformed, I guess, wrapped in black metal and wicked claws, but she moved with an animal grace. It felt like she'd barely entered the room before she was on me, just inches away, her hand on my shoulder, easing me back onto the bed.

Take deep breaths. …Ugh, that smell was strong. Maybe don't take deep breaths. But try to relax. This is routine. You're trained for this. It's just…a little more intense than usual.

I stopped her, squeezed her steely wrist gently as I held myself up, answering her momentarily puzzled look with a smile.

"Warmaster, please." I forced out a giggle and moved to brush my bangs out of my eyes – a brilliant yellow-blonde, just for this mission. Not usually part of my image. Her claws dug into my shoulder as my back hit the blanket behind me, and panic flashed through my mind.

"Warmaster…!" My voice squeaked as I tried to push her away, but she was too heavy, too strong. And too forward; my hands seemed to slide off her shoulders and around her neck as she leaned in, lips pressed softly against my skin.

"Is first of many times you will cry out tonight, little Callidus," she muttered, her breath tickling my neck, then trailing up my cheek and to my ear as I tried to sputter out a real response. "But I think I am preferring something more…personal. Yes."

"Kharn…" It slipped out before I could stop it. It was a plea, a pathetic, weak cry for mercy as I tried again to push her away. But her lips against my ear, her breath, the way her claws stroked my cheek…they drained the energy from me effortlessly, and I found myself pulling her closer instead.

Our lips met, and I surrendered as she conquered my mouth with her tongue. Fireworks exploded across my vision as her claws glided across my chest, leaving electric lines of tingling pain in their wake. I barely noticed as she sliced through the top of my gown, not until she pulled away, a thin string of saliva connecting us, and started to trail down my body.

I thought it would be strange at first; her tongue was long, kind of unsettlingly long, and more flexible than anyone's ought to be. It was probably stranger than I realized, but I barely noticed as it left cool, wet trails on the most sensitive parts of my chest. Two more slices, one on each thigh, flashes of pain that blended in seamlessly with the confusing, unwelcome pleasure.

I couldn't stop her. I couldn't even make myself want to, as I held her close to my shivering body, as I pushed her further down. It was like I had totally lost control of myself. She mumbled out something in Russian, something I couldn't even parse at the time, as she finally yanked my gown up above my waist, her head sinking down between my-

-LOVE IS OVER-

The words burned into my retinas, replacing silky, picturesque black hair traveling down my- no, nevermind. Don't get hung up on it. One by one the scents, sounds, and sensations from the Warmaster's chamber faded away, and the blinking message that swallowed my entire field of vision gave way to the VR trainer's menu. As it restored each of my senses in turn, I could feel someone pinching my cheek, calling my name.

"Rin-chaaaan." A firm but playful voice, and a familiar one. My helmet slid away – rather, it was raised away from my head – and I was left staring into clear, crystal-blue eyes framed by yellow-blonde bangs. Her nails were painted the same blue color, and she was digging them into my cheek a little, like it would wake me up faster.

"…Spymashter." I snuck my hand in front of my forehead for a salute, something that only made her laugh. …At least she let go of my cheek, once she backed off.

Satou Yuri, 01, the Spymaster of the Twentieth. The world's best-kept secret, she liked to say. The Callidus that every girl in the world would give anything to be, and a self-proclaimed hidden treasure that only a handful of fortunate souls were allowed to know.

I was one of the lucky few that did, though, as part of the scant few hundred magical girls worldwide that made up the Twentieth Officio Assassinorum. The Shadow of the Moon, we liked to call ourselves. It was our job to fill this dark world with light. ...Well, alright, that was a little dramatic, but Satou-sama liked to say it anyway, and whenever she did, it looked like all the stars in the sky were in her eyes.

Although that didn't really make it make any more sense, thinking about it.

"You're going to wear yourself out if you keep pushing yourself so hard. Didn't you just get back from an assignment?" Her mouth twitched downward a little. Satou-sama was usually pretty easygoing, so it hurt a bit to see her upset. "You didn't really think you were ready for that one, did you?"

"No. Maybe. Sorry." An awkward smile grew on my face. I slouched down and scratched at the back of my neck a little bit, where the helmet dug into my skin. "I…wanted to prove I'm serious about becoming one of the best."

It was a half-lie. There was no way I was going to make it, and I guess I knew that. Escape from Sex Gulag was supposed to be impossible for even the most elite Callidus; it was designed with the Spymaster in mind. She wanted something that'd stump even her, and someone – tech officer Kobayashi-chan, I think – came up with the idea of, er.

Of trying to get out of Kharn the Betrayer's bedroom with your maidenhood intact. As a blonde, even; the Spymaster's physical data was the model and everything.

It was really popular for a lot of weird reasons, and as of a few minutes ago I kind of understood why. They'd started monitoring who was running what simulation a little more carefully since one of the other girls…ruined the chair…pretty badly, but I really didn't think Satou-sama would come to pull me out of it personally. She grinned at me again, and my heart leapt as she reached in to ruffle my hair.

"You need to pace yourself a little better, Shibuya. Even I didn't become the Spymaster in just one day," she huffed.

"It took me almost a week," we said at the same time. It wasn't the first time we'd had this conversation, and it wasn't the first time she'd made the same joke.

"Okay, okay, smartass. You're on tonight, yeah? If you prep right now, we can squeeze in an ice cream trip before you go."

It took a second to sink in, and once it did I beamed at her. Almost everyone else that usually hung around HQ was busy with a big, ugly mission creeping up on us, one that we projected would require dealing with a ton of magical girls on top of the usual array of dangerous thugs. We'd kind of become a big family as we bonded over our passions and our one huge secret. She was lonely without the others here, and to be honest, I kind of was too. So I accepted.

For her sake.

"I told you not to wear yourself out, Rin-chan," the Spymaster pouted at me over her ice cream cone. Cookie dough, with a million colorful sprinkles in it. "Seriously, we don't have to talk about work all the time."

"I was just hoping to pick your brain a little." I nibbled at my own – chocolate, just chocolate. "I mean, you've met the real thing, right? And you two… …y'know." It was pretty convenient, having something sweet to just…focus on, when I didn't want to elaborate. I'd keep that in mind.

We were both out in our day-to-day disguises, partly so we didn't get chewed out (as much) later for skiving off to get ice cream on a workday. Dirty red hair for her, pulled into a sidetail, along with the standard facial and physical changes. She really liked to show off, even when she was trying not to show off.

I just tried to look more normal, which wasn't really a stretch for me. Looking pretty normal was one of my strong points.

"…Mmm…So you want to hear about Kharn, huh." Satou-sama's eyes drifted half-closed, as if describing the Betrayer was kind of hard for her. "You own a dog, right, Shibuya? How'd you train it?" She took a big bite of ice cream as she waited for me to answer.

"Well…I show him what I want him to do, and if he does it, I give him treats. Or when I want to show him I love him. And when he's a naughty doggie, I whap him on the nose." I emphasized it with an invisible whap on an invisible Koromaru's nose.

"That was pretty cute…could you do it again? Let me get my phone out…" She started to dig in her purse with her free hand, but I cut her off with an emphatic 'no'. "…You're such a fuddy-duddy. I command you as your sempai!"

"Weren't we talking about Kharn…?" I forcibly pushed the train back on track before she had a chance to sulk.

"Fiiine. Well, anyway, Kharn was…is, I guess, but she's retired now anyway…Kharn's basically a big, adorable, bloody dog. She likes to eat and kill and fuck. The trick to dealing with Kharn was pretty much the same – give her a little push toward what you needed her to do, then give her a little treat. I mean, the real trick was getting it past Malal, back when she was active, but…y'know. Then she died."

…So that was the kind of person that led the Ninth? My question must have shown on my face, because Satou-sama started to laugh.

"It's pretty easy, right? But in the sim...it's like giving your dog a piece of bacon and then trying to get it away from him. You probably can, because you're his master, but he'd just growl at someone else, even if it was someone he knew."

"And that's what Malal could do? Take the…bacon away?" …Something about being compared to a meat product was kind of unnerving.

"Yep. She had Kharn on a tight leash. That's not THAT uncommon, though, I'm pretty sure the new Warmaster is kind of the same way." I bit into my cone with a little crunch, and the Spymaster did the same. She chewed it in a hurry, though, and swallowed. "I mean, I'm not sure yet. It's probably easier to get Matsuda angry first, if you want to make her do something. That's what Mari-chan's working on right now…"

We chatted for a little while longer, mostly about the new sim that Kobayashi-chan was trying to set up with compiled data on the new Warmaster. She said it'd be just as hard as Escape from Sex Gulag – the whole point was to get Warmaster Matsuda to sleep with you.

I guess without shooting you in the morning, or something.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/22/13(Fri)05:49 No.28430432

No, you reply. No hiding. You've had enough of this stealth espionage bullshit. You have what you came here for - the next step, obviously, is blowing this popsicle stand.

Souji can come along too, of course. If he doesn't feel like dying, that is.

"...What?" Souji's eyes are wide now. "You...look, let me get this straight really quick. You're asking me to go with you to try and escape Varrigan City - a city filled with thugs and rapists and psycho-murderers, some of which are Magical Girls themselves, and all of them working for Strauss. Strauss, who you're currently stealing her most favorite experiment from. There's a huge chance we may not make it out of here alive, or even get to where you want to go. Am I getting things right so far?"

Faintly, you hear the voices coming closer, their footsteps louder.

You turn to Souji and nod, impatient. Is this a thing with him? You don't see the point in talking it over--

"I just want to make sure you realize how crazy all of this sounds," Souji snaps. "Right? There's no guarantee we'll make it?"

You look at him long enough for the ensuing silence to make your point, and it's here he sighs.

"Figured. Well...I'm fucked if I stay anyway."

He turns to Ekaterina, leaning down briefly to brush some of her stringy, filth-matted hair away from her face. Murmuring something underneath his breath, he pushes the hypogun against the side of her neck and administers the tranquilizer, a quiet hiss sounding from the device. Ekaterina's entire form trembles weakly at this, before letting out a feeble whimper - sounding that much more vulnerable, seemingly afraid to sink back into the nightmares that the chemicals drowned her in.

Souji stands up with a muttered oath, before tossing you his shotgun. "I'll distract them for you, then. Try not to hit me, alright?"

You catch the shotgun easily with one hand. ...You're no Vindicare, but you're a good shot when you need to be.

"No guarantees still, right?" The brown-haired young man laughs hollowly, before shaking his head. "Right. Okay. Let's do this." And then... "God forgive me."

...Well. Nothing wrong with asking for forgiveness, you think.

Just that it may take more than just saying sorry.

But at least he's starting. Square one isn't much, but it's a start.

You feel another smile tug at the corner of your lips.

...She'll probably be at the very first square, too. But at the very least, she'll be using the loaded dice you'll be palming into her hand very soon.

You take cover behind the wall just adjacent to the entrance the moment they step through - the ajar door hiding you from immediate view. You kill your vox speakers and hold your breath as you allow for them to enter - both your gloved hands gripping your borrowed SAIGA tighter, your index finger placing a feather-light touch on the trigger.

Five. No, six of them in all. Hired goons, alright, thickly-muscled and sporting enough tattoos to make any decent public bath close for the night. Lots of hardware, too, unnecessarily-large firearms worn more to intimidate than for actual use. ...One of them is actually waving around a diamond-encrusted Desert Eagle. That's...you'd have laughed if you weren't so focused at the moment.

"Hey, dickweed!" One of them roars at Souji, who's doing a very commendable job looking like an angry nerd that's just been told that his internet time is up. "It's time. Ma'am Strauss wants this bitch up in the arena. Time for her to do her thing with the claws and shit."

"I figured as much," Souji spits, here. "She activated her damn implants again, by remote. Almost took my head off when I was just checking for her wounds. Didn't you tell her how fucking dangerous that is?"

The first goon laughs, and his fellows are quick to join in. "Check out dickweed here, thinks he can give ME orders!" He shakes his scarred face, the grin turning his features even more unsightly. "Look, kid, so long as Ma'am Strauss pays us, we don't give a shit what else she does. Now prep her for action." It's here that he growls. "Wait a minute, is she supposed to still be sleeping like that? She's usually tryin' to rip those chains apart right now, isn't she?"

"I had to tranquilize her, of course! She wasn't chained down at the time, for fuck's sake." Souji shakes his head. "Give me a moment, let me get the adrenaline..."

He glances at you for the slightest fraction of a second, before nodding.

The both of you move in tandem - you, kicking the door shut and locking it with a moment's thought, while Souji dives into cover, pulling a remote from the inside of his coat. There's a defeaning metal crash as Ekaterina's cage slams back down around her - and another snap as the lights go off.

"WHAT THE FUCK? WHAT THE FUCK IS GOING ON?!" The goon is shouting now, evidently the leader, while his mates panic all the same. "DICKWEED, WHAT THE HELL ARE YOU DOING?"

"Something I should've done a long time ago, fuckface," The young man snarls in the darkness. "Now! Kill them now!"

Right. People need to die.

"Preysight," You breathe into your vox-speakers. Your visor immediately blanking out, before coming alive again as a vision of grainy blue smeared with clumps of red, yellow and greens standing around, panicking, aiming their firearms at nothing.

How do you kill them?

[]Shotgun. It'll be loud and give your position away, but at least it'll be quick.
[]Crowbar. A bit slower and definitely messier, but there's little more chance for them to pinpoint your position.

Here's a question, what else does Malal use her crowbar for, apart from breaking people? It's not a great ranged item (unless you can throw it pretty decently, and then only once).

Mind you, a crowbar could probably be handy in quite a few scenarios, opening doors, crates, people...

Plus Malal is like, 14. And we WANT them to know where we are. I figure at least two clean shots, and anywhere between 2-3 casualties per blast.

If we step into the middle of them, we stand a decent chance of causing friendly fire incidents, while drawing their fire away from Ekaterina and Souji

Does not equate to being able to aim worth a damn with a high-recoil weapon meant to be fired with two hands using night-vision goggles in the dark where everyone's a blob and you're also wielding a crowbar trying to hit people while lining up your shots.

There's a time and place to be showing off, and Malal isn't the showy girl, is she? She's all about the efficiency in fighting.

You disengage the shotgun's safety and rack the slide, before stepping forward out of your cover.

Seven rounds, six idiots. More than enough, and you've got the element of surprise, here.

Your first shot is an instant kill. The discharge flare blooms in your vision, an angry white-hot blast fringed with angry reds and yellows, briefly lighting up the dark blue world replacing the darkness around you - and the first goon takes it directly in the face. He topples on his back bonelessly, the upper half of his skull sheared away, the firearm gripped in his hands falling to the floor in a useless clatter.

"One down," You bark into the room, your helmet's vox-speakers amplifying it into a deafening bellow. "Let's dance, motherfuckers."

"What the...KILL THE FUCKER! WHOEVER THE FUCK IT IS, KILL 'EM!" The leader roars, and gunfire, loud and blinding, is sent screaming at your direction. Each muzzle flare lighting up the room, strobing in the harshest way - and you take advantage of the split-second intervals of darkness to move away, take cover, and get into another vantage point. Get into another prime killing position.

And once you do, you pull the trigger. Again, and again, and again.

Announcing every kill you make through your vox - making the leader spit curses at you, and his lackeys beg for mercy.

Killing. You've never relished it. Oh, you have the knack for it, you're not going to deny that - but you like fighting more. You like brawling better, a contest of imposing your own will against someone else's. You've made great friends by meeting people and beating the living shit out of them. Win or lose, there'd be a closeness to the both of you now that not even sex probably could emulate. ...Well, no, you're not too sure. You've never done that before anyway.

...You don't like killing, is what you're getting at here. You know you have to do it and you're good at it, but it's not something you take too much joy from in doing.

These idiots, however... Maybe you're having much more fun than you admit right now.

Or maybe you just needed to vent, after you saw what they did to Ekaterina.

Hnh. It's not like anyone will care in the end, anyway.

All that matters is the main objective.

She still needs to live for you to put her through much more pain, after all.

You save the leader for the last. With his goons all dead - and him trying desperately to find his way back to the exit - you send him crumpling to the ground with a contemptuous kick to the back of his knees. Preventing him from getting up with a booted foot to his chest.

"Who the fuck are you? WHO THE FUCK ARE YOU?!" The leader's face, a ruddy smear of red and yellow in your preysight, is screaming up at you in a frothing, impotent rage. He doesn't even stop as you press the smoking mouth of your gun against his forehead. "YOU KILLED MY FUCKING TEAM, WHO THE FUCK ARE YOU--"

"No one," You murmur into your vox, before pulling the trigger one last time. The struggling body underneath your foot growing still and slack even before the resultant stain of muzzle flash had faded from your vision.

There's a sharp silence, one that always follows after murder - and it's Souji's voice, hesitant and wary, that breaks it.

"Lady?" He ventures, here. "Is...is everything okay? Are those guys--"

"Get the lights." You cut him off. "We won't have much time before they're missed."

Souji does so, light flooding back into the darkened room. Your visor resetting back into its normal mode just in time to see the young man throw up at the sight of a corpse that's missing most of its face.

You glance around the room, looking at your handiwork.

...It's like another person did it. Not the pink-haired girl hiding inside her black biker getup, but something else entirely.

A monster, maybe. One that doesn't have sharp metal shit for hands and legs, but just a complete and utter disregard for others' lives, much less her own.

The horrifying thing about that is you're not sure which one is worse.

"Jesus. They're..." Souji chokes, here. "Just like that...? They were fine just a few minutes ago, even that asshole who keeps calling me like a dickweed, and now they're just..." He turns a deeper shade of green before heaving again. Emptying his stomach in loud, wet slaps on the floor.

"Is this what you do? Is this what Magical Girls like you do?" He spits at you in between heaves.

How do you respond?

For someone who works with Magical Girls, he's surprisingly naive, you tell him. There's nothing more inhumane than Magical Girls.

"Y-yeah, but I thought..." Souji averts his eyes away from the corpse, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand. "I mean, I--"

You point towards Ekaterina in her cage. Look, you tell him. Look at the bundle of steel and hate and psychosis that he himself helped augment. Does that look like the face of mercy, of rainbows and sparkles and everything nice? Does that give him any right to judge you?

"No, I wasn't--" The young man tries, but you shake your head and toss him back his shotgun. Whatever he wanted to say, you didn't want to hear it. Not right now. You all need to get ready to get out of here as soon as possible. Like you said, there's not much time before the people you've just killed are missed.

"Ah. Y-yeah. Right. I'll go and get Kat ready, then." He moves away before you could reply, very nearly tripping over one of the corpses. You shake your head again, before glancing down at the leader you've just killed.

You make to reach for his diamond-encrusted Desert Eagle. It's gaudy as hell, but you might need a gun later. Something you can use with one hand, or at least try to.

Just as you slip it into your inventory, it's here that your codec rings again. Xiaomei. You immediately answer it.

"Malal!" Xiaomei all but screams your name the moment the connection is established, and you wince, here. "Malal, have to hurry! You cannot dilly-dally like this any more, cannot move so slow! Must need to go right now!"

What? Okay, she needs to slow down, you don't understand--

"Evacuation site is compromised! Fulton extraction is not possible now! Varrigan City Tower crawling with hostiles, evac plane cannot get close to it!"

...Shit. Well, what now, then? Do you have any other options? You can't fight an entire city. Well, you can, but there's no real guarantee you'll get out alive, much less Ekaterina and Souji.

"Only one! Go back down Red Line Highway, go straight to the docks!

The docks? That's...that's on the other end of the fucking city. What's there?

"Thirteenth Officio flagship, the Rafflesia! Fran is already there, and she says she will be your evac instead!"

What? Fran? But isn't the Thirteenth part of all this? Aren't they the reason why you had to rescue Ekaterina in the first place--

"Just trust Fran! I know her, she is good person deep inside!" The brown-haired girl glares at you. "Well, maybe a bit crazy, but in funny way at least!"

How do you react?

The girl that showed up in the flashback is the same girl we were bodyguarding.

Now whether this means that she killed the real Ruri and took her place, or if the dead 'Ruri' is just a red herring? Not enough information. If the cosplayer was dead five years ago, then it'd be 100% spyswitch. But since it was two years ago, things get murky...

"Already ahead of you. Have Fran already waiting on other frequency - patching her through now, okay?"

Right. But just in case this also ends ass-upwards, you want Xiaomei to look for an alternative. Doesn't matter if it's a long shot, just that there's one if you need it.

"Hah, even in situations like this, you like to make sure, huh? Okay, okay. No guarantees, but will try best." Her portrait winks out, replaced with a grainier one of the strange doctor you chastised earlier during her lunch.

Madaraki Fran looks nervous, but at the same time relieved. "Aaaaahhh, Miss Malal!" She beams, here. "T-thank goodness! I waaas worried when Xiaomei-chan asked me to hold, I thought you were going to refuse..."

Well, you're not in the business of refusing a helping hand when it's offered, so no.

"Ahh, that's a very good attitude to have, Miss Malal!" The blonde doctor clasps both her hands in front of her, clearly pleased. "Now, um, just really quickly, we're docked near Pier 4 of the Varrigan City docks, just at the tail end of the Red Line Highway. We already have staff who are ready to raise the ganggramp and raise anchor at the last minute, and we've loaded the cannons to fire on anyone who may come chasing, and there will be--"

Wait. What? Cannons?

"Of couuuurse, Miss Malal," Fran blinks at you. "Our Rafflesia is still a battleship, of course. A fully functioning one! The difference is what we load into the cannons, hee-heeeee!"

Ugh. That giggle. It's cute, but it's also scary.

How do you respond?

Well, knowing Fran it probably wouldn't be lethal, just a bit messed up.
Take jellyfish with burning lashes, cross it with spider with paralysing venom, so it moves at good speed both in sea and on land and can punish&disable people without killing them. Give it long enough fangs to pierce even tough clothes and either wings or way of spreading it's body like a parachute for landing from air. It doesn't have central nervous system, so it can keep moving even after getting cut in half. Load them in membrane by about three hundreds a shell so they can effectivelly spread over half a square mile on landing. They are really tiny and pretty much transparent.

...Well. What do they load into the cannons, then? And there won't be any friendly fire, will there?

"Oh, nothing tooooo damaging, I assure you, Miss Malal! Just something to dissuade pursuers! We are a peaceful Officio, research and experimentation are our weapons!"

Like experimenting on kidnapped Magical Girls?

"...Miss Malal." The blonde doctor looks and sounds hurt. "Yes, I deserve that, but please, I'm tryiiiing my best to fix my mistakes. Isn't that what the Blessed Lady teaches? It's not our sins that define us, but what we doooo to make amends?"

That Blessed Lady junk again. That kind of shit doesn't really fly in this kind of situation--

"Miss Malal, I assure you that once you arrive here you will be treated with the utmost respect. We will protect you from Doktor Strauss' and her goons, and deliver you back to your Officio. And we will do our best to heal the damage our former Warmaster has inflicted on Ekaterina - I'll even do the operation personally, with all our resources on hand. And to make sure there is no deceit, you can oversee the operation yourself."

You're silent for a moment, before finally nodding. Fine. That's all you needed to hear.

Madaraki manages another smile, this time, and she reaches up with a hand to wipe the sweat from her forehead. "H-hee. Xiaomei-chan was right, Miss Malaaal. You're a hard customer to please!"

Only with the people you need to trust with your life, you tell her.

And she didn't answer your question. What about friendly fire?

"Our ship engineer is a very good one, Miss Malal! She calibrated all our targeting systems perfectly! We won't miss!"

Alright. Well, not like you have any choice - you'll just have to find out later. You thank her, and sign off.

You turn to Souji, to check up on him - and you see him carrying Katerina, the girl all wrapped up in what looks like a long, waterproof poncho. The black metal blades of her feet poking out from where the material ended at her ankles. The long sleeves and the hood do a good job concealing everything else, though.

"Alright, we're as ready as we can be," The young man replies, breathless but eager. "The tranquilizer dose I gave her should be good enough for the rest of the day, but in case it isn't, I brought enough for another."

You nod at this, before giving the entire room a look again. The ruined bodies still steaming in the cold air, flies already starting to gather over each corpse.

It's with a sick feeling that you realize that this isn't even the start of it. Of how many more will die for your plan to be carried out to complete fruition.

...They'll remember you for what you managed to do, you promise to yourself. They'll remember you for doing everything you could to help, and they'll forgive you for everything you've done.

Even she will, when she finds out about everything.

Hah. Well. At least you know one thing for sure.

Lying to yourself is easy once you accept the fact that the truth is too horrible to even think about.

It's with haste, then, that you lead Souji up the stairs again, quickly as you can. There doesn't seem to be anyone around the entire way up to the staff entrance - from what you can see, nearly everyone's back in the stadium proper, and the combined shouting of the audience is loud enough to make even the walls vibrate.

"That's weird," Souji says from behind you. "Kat's the one scheduled to fight right now, but it sounds like the match just started? They're cheering for someone..."

Huh? Well, maybe a substitute matchup, then? Which is fine with you, considering you're stealing Kat right out from under them, and the more people preoccupied with the match, the better.

"Nicole...Nicole Touchdown? They're cheering for Nicole Touchdown?"

What? Nicole?

...SHIT THAT'S WHAT SHE WAS TALKING ABOUT EARLIER.

And true enough, one of the TV displays near the staff exit is indeed showing a grinning Nicole Touchdown, a cleaver in both hands, facing off against Karasawa Enyo. Using kitchen cutlery to block a fucking chainsaw blade sprouting from the Black Templar's mechanical hand.

Jesus Christ. Fucking crazy Americans!

"Wait, you know that girl? The one with the scars?" Souji blinks at you. "That's...wow. Is she a Magical Girl too?"

No, you shake your head. Nicole would kill herself first before signing the Incubator's Contract.

Somehow, that makes her even scarier. And crazier.

You shake your head, here, and finally make for the exit.

"Wait! What about your friend? She's going to die there--"

No, she won't, you bark at him. Nicole just loves to fight, and doing it in public makes her fight better. You'd be more worried for the other person, but Enyo seems to be doing fine. You'd bet on them cutting each other enough that they'd wear themselves out instead of killing each other.

"W-well, if you say so..."

"Fuckface." She greets you, her dead eyes of dull copper turns toward you.

"What?" Souji bursts out before you can reply. "Of course we're not, I...uh..." His voice trails off as you turn to regard him silently. "Well, we're not, right? I just wanted to make it clear--"

What did he want to make clear? That you're not good enough for him? Is that it?

"B-but I don't even know you!" The brown-haired young man seems to almost whine here. "I can't even see your face, your helmet's too heavily tinted!"

You shake your head and chuckle here, before pointing him towards Schpeltiger. He should get himself and Ekaterina strapped into the passenger seat.

"Y-yeah. Okay." Fuming, Souji acquiesces, and you chuckle as he trundles past you, grumbling, the poncho-wrapped Ekaterina still in his arms. You turn back to Wendy, who has her arms crossed over her chest, now.

"HER boyfriend. Not mine."

"..." The Eversor nods after a moment, seemingly satisfied. "Looks like it, anyway." It's here that she glares at you. "You're Kaneda, right? Kaneda Madoka?"

You nod. You go by Malal now, but...well. Maybe Nicole's told her about you. So sure, yeah, you still answer to that.

"I thought I heard that name before." Wendy nods again. "I had a dream about you."

...What? She's delaying your evac because of a fucking dream? Get out of here. You don't have time to talk about dreams, you have an entire island to fucking outrun. Crazy americans, always want to talk about their feelings and shit.

As you make to move towards Schpeltiger, your upper arm is suddenly grabbed by a cold, hard hand, the grip painfully palpable even through your ruggedized suit. You turn back, only to come face to face with Wendy again.

"Don't turn your back on me while I'm still talking." She says in her dull monotone, made all the more threatening with her sullen eyes. I had a dream about you, and I need to ask you something."

...Okay. She'll get her question, but only after she takes her fucking hand off you. Or you'll rip it off.

More than me, you could almost hear her say, leaving that last sentence unspoken. Jealousy clearly tingeing her voice. "In my dream, I saw you die, and you were smiling just before it. Like you planned it all along."

...That's her dream?

"Are you?" Wendy blurts out finally, her voice creaking with emotion the tiniest bit. "Are you actually planning on fucking offing yourself? Because Nicole..." She glances towards the Arena, where the fight still seems to be going on, from how hard the crowd is screaming. "...Nicole won't like that, you know."

No, she wouldn't. She'd probably fucking snap.

You don't have a say in the matter, you tell her, as you throw your leg over Schpeltiger. It's not something you have any control over. Not by a long shot.

But you're not planning on actually dying, no.

Dying comes afterwards. It's the side effect of what you had planned, not the aim of it.

And you're going to make damn sure it counts.

"..." Wendy nods here, silent as always. "...Nicole still won't like it, but she'll be okay when she hears what you mean by it."

Yeah? Well, can she Nicole AFTER the fact, not before? That way it actually works, and Nicole doesn't do anything stupid.

"I'll...I'll try." The brown-haired girl frowns. "But you know how she never listens, sometimes--"

"THERE SHE IS! AFTER HER!"

Wendy's sentence is broken by a hoarse yell coming from the Arena - and the both of you turn to look at the gangers and the hired guns and other sorts of disagreeable folk pour out of the place, firearms and other fun stuff in hand. "TEN MILLION WHOEVER BRINGS THE BUTCHER BACK! TWENTY FOR THE HEAD OF THE SKULL BITCH!"

"Go," The Eversor tells you, just as she reaches for her knives, both arms crossing over her chest to draw all six of them at once, three in one hand, each one gripped between knuckles. "Sorry. I had to ask. Had to...learn how deep the rabbit hole goes."

...What? Is...is she trying to sound cool?

It's here that Wendy turns red, momentarily taken off-guard. "JUST GO!" She snarls at you, and you chuckle as you gun Schpeltiger away. The beastly motorcycle roaring deafeningly loud as you open up the throttle, the tires biting hard into the road and hurtling you and your precious cargo forward.

Well. All things considered, she seemed like a nice girl.

It's a pity. You also dreamed of her dying, too.

E-explosion ending?!

There's only really one issue I've got with the flashback, and that Malal hasn't really differentiated on how she stands out from other magical girls; she's used her vomit once, and the crowbar, but honestly she could just be Murderface with a different power and no-one would notice the difference. As opposed to Kharne's side issue and Midori's one, where both of those were characterised a bit differently.

Are Malal and Chiaki not so different after all?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/24/13(Sun)06:36 No.28467491

Five years ago, you were still a Magical Girl.

And you were on the run, then. On a motorcycle so haphazardly borrowed you might as well have stolen it, with an unreliable nerd riding bitch behind you. Said nerd holding your main objective tight in his arms - another magical girl, currently comatose from you shutting her Soul Gem down as well as having a cocktail of tranquilizers shot directly into her neck. Excessive, sure, but with what her captors did to her, you don't quite trust her to be able to tell friend from foe just yet.

Maybe she'll be ablet to again, after you rip out the berserker implants stabbed into the back of her skull - or after you put what little left of her still remained. And there's little left as it is - you knew after you personally pulled the plug on her. Nothing else but the barest scraps. Strauss left her broken, left her used, little more than a killing machine with strings around her limbs.

Listen to yourself. Put her back together? Hah. Not like you to be that fucking optimistic.

Who are you kidding? Even if by some miracle you manage to do that...well. It's like trying to put together a vase with only a few intact pieces left, and the rest ground to powder. She probably wouldn't even be the same person after. Wholly unrecognizable from her previous self.

...

No, That'll be enough. Yeah, it'll be alright. So long as she's functional. So long as she's still in the game as your one ace. The one up your sleeve, along with all the others. Some already in play, others you've yet to palm into your hand.

Heh. There was once a time when you felt uncomfortable thinking about people that way, wasn't there?

Yeah, well. Back then you weren't even in the game. You were another just another card in the pile, until you realized that you were in fact a player yourself. Not only that, but you're also the one player who has to cheat to win.

Because all the other players are cheating fuckheads themselves.

And you're playing for all the fucking marbles. All the marbles there are, was, and ever will be.

In any case. You're now blasting through Red Line Highway. You left Casino Town back there in a hurry, with Nicole gleefully giving Enyo her long-promised duel and Wendy Cooldown staying back to give you a head start.

And it seems to be working - a look back reveals that your tail is relatively clear, with the gangers you pass on the road seemingly unconcerned with a party of three riding upon a white beast of a motorcycle, blindingly obvious that they're running from something.

But that's not going to stay that way for long - not only did Strauss take your stealing her most prized experiment personally by sending Varrigan City after you, but she did it by putting a bounty on your head. And if there's anything the Varrigan City citizen likes, it's money being made from killing someone.

Well, whatever. You'll deal with it when it comes. Right now you're just pushing Schpeltiger as far as it could go, down the eight-line Red Line Highway - making a direct line for the docks that lay at the very end of it. And where salvation came in the form of an Officio battleship named from a really ugly and stinky flower from somewhere. You don't remember.

It's here that your codec starts to beep for attention again. You growl here and make to drop the call - you need to drive here, for fuck's sake - but for some reason the connection establishes itself by its own, as if you've allowed it yourself.

"Ah, vonderful. Und here I vas beginnink to think that you had ze same lack of manners as little Ekaterina did." A female voice, lilting yet tightly controlled, cackles into your ears. The accent coloring its words bordering on the impenetrable, but allowed you to comprehend what she said - and what she said tinted your vision crimson. Making your gloved hands tighten on the Schpeltiger's handlebars.

"Emma Strauss?" You spit into your vox speakers.

"Ze one und only." You could hear the toothy grin in her voice. "Und may I say, zat was masterful, stealing not only my experiment but also my assistant. You vill unfortunately find him utterly useless in experiments, sough. Vorse still as a hostage - I do not care vhat happens to him. Unless, of course, you are planning on keeping him as a pet?"

She cackles here, a strange kind of clicking laugh that sounds as if each exhalation seems to catch in her throat every time. "Sen, maybe for just that, he could be of use..."

You grit your teeth at this. No. Don't rise to it, god dammit. You're Malal now. Kaneda can get angry at that kind of thing, but not you.

"Ah, ze silent treatment? Very amusink, but I did call just for zat. No, I am here to negotiate."

Negotiate?

"Yes, of course. Negotiate." There's anger there, in her voice, but held back carefully behind a wall of calm, collected insanity. "Turn your little bike around und give me back my experiment, and I vill call off Varrigan City. Refuse, und I vill make sure SHE eats you after ze rest of ze city passes you around like a masturbatory aid."

How do you react?

Very little, really, brain doesn't feel damage done upon it. The victim might lose some functions depending on parts you damaged (sight, balance, parts of memory, etc.) but given how Magical Girls work this shouldn't be that much of an issued, since they can regenerate.

Wounds are a big weird for MG's. Generally they can be healed, but it's not a sure thing. They can scar, and certain wounds persist.

It's a fair bet that whatever Strauss did to Ekatarina, it's not something that you can solve by amputation. One the Witch flesh fuses, it's part of the recipient and any attempt to regenate that limb would restore the witch flesh infused limb.

Chiaki's Soul Gem resembles a Grief Seed.

Obviously, it's not the same, which is why I want to experiment on the Prophet's cronies, before they're executed. Not the full brainstab thing, just a scratch here and there.
But wouldn't it be wonderful if we take from Strauss that which she values most, her intellect, and ensure that it can never be returned?

"Get fucked." You spit across the unauthorized connection that she seemed to have brute-forced into making with your own frequency. ...Ugh, you'll have to get its systems scrubbed when you get back home.

"Oh, zat hurt. Zat really, really hurt." Strauss clicks her tongue. "Really, now. You should realize by now zat you have no chance of gettingk out of zis city, MY CITY, alive. All exit points are by now blocked off, und any place that you may pop your little balloon to go up, up, up into the air have all been squared away." Another one of her gasping, clicking cackles here. "So, you have everything to lose here, Culexus, while I have everything to gain." A pause, here. "Ah, that reminds me, I've never had a Culexus as a test subject before. It shall be very interestingk--"

"Really?" You cut her off this time. "If the city's locked down like you say, then why bother negotiating in the first fucking place?" The rubber of Schpeltiger's handlebars creak as you grip them tighter. "Tell you what, now that you've had your saturday morning cartoon villain gloating, what are you really calling me for?"

Another pause, a break in the communication, before she responds. And when she does, it comes as a flood of harshly-hissed words, jagged and sharp, hateful and fanged. Her accent growing thicker as anger overrides it.

"Liszen to me you little shit. I am Doktor Emma Strauss, ze Warmaster of ze Thirteenth. I have performed more zan a souzand experiments on Magical Girls, of vhich breadth and scope your little brain could not possibly comprehend. Und I am giving you one last chance to surrender."

Incubators do what incubators do.

They form contracts, they farm entropy, they hire out magical girls as killers.

Thats is what they do, that is what we expect of them.

BUT compared with other incubators, there are lines QB will not cross.

He refuses to assume direct control of his contractees, he absolutely abhors the idea of forcefully witching out the girls under him. They even have an option of retirement without a bullet.

A happy magical girl is a much more productive magical girl, QB said so himself. Imagine the impact on morale if news gets out that the boss is sanctioning experiments on the rank and file magical girls forcefully. It quickens their inching towards the despair threshold since they can't do anything. It's counter-productive to keeping the workforce at high efficiency and increases the rate of turnover. All for the increased capabilities of a handful of magical girls.

The potential losses outway any benefits, even if the augmented magical girls are not stark raving mad. From a business standpoint, QB will choose not to allow such operations to take place.

To be fair, that's because he's fucking Witch Farming in Siberia. He's got a certain largesse with his grief seeds because he can afford to.

By comparison, I think Joobs has been battery farming his contractees using his own Callidus's illusions to try and compete, but even so he can't really match Kyubeys output.

Whatever drugs she's peddling may not actually be tailored to boosting her Venenum abilities, so they just might not be that useful to her. At least, that is the assumption that some could make about the reason she doesn't take them, the truth being a different matter.

Well, now. You like this particular Strauss more - someone who has the decency to talk straight with you, someone who doesn't need to wax on forever about shit you don't need to hear. You'll consider her terms, and give your answer posthaste. But before you do - can she just tell you something you've been itching to find out?

"Eh? Vhat is it?" Strauss' voice is still tight with anger, but with a decidedly marked decrease in crazy. "Ah, you vant to find out about Ekaterina, eh? Curious about Doktor Strauss' brilliant experiment?"

Well, she can say that, yes.

"Hmm. Maybe I am mistaken about you, little Culexus." The Warmaster's anger seems to quickly give way to a grudging interest. "Very well. You are familiar with the life cycle of a Magical girl, yes? The fate that awaits us if we neglect our Soul Gems?"

Yeah. Yeah, everyone knows that. Any Incubator makes it a point to mention it when they present the contract, and it's always in big, bold print.

"Yes. The Gift of Truth." Strauss cackles. "Zen, humor me here a bit. Magical Girls and Vitches - zey are different, very different from each other, yes? Vun is a stalwart defender of good against evil-" She snorts here. "...und the other is a mindless monster who is reduced to their baser instincts. But zey are two sides of the same coin, are zey not?"

It's a bit of a stretch, but you suppose so. Still, you don't see how that connects to hacking up Ekaterina's limbs and welding crazy shit onto them--

"Ah! So impatient! Just like Americans!" The thickly-accented Warmaster tuts here, loudly. "See, zat is vhat I am trying to do. Two disparate zides, two evolutionary extremes. I vant to create a link between the two - Magical Girls who retain conscious thought and personality, vith all ze strength of a Witch! SYNTHESIS!"

...What. So, the things on Ekaterina's arms and legs really are--

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 11/24/13(Sun)09:12 No.28468400

>>28468378

"Are only vhat you see!" Strauss is positively laughing now. "Her claws and legs are merely vhat is presented on ze outside! Her body, her mind, her biological makeup, her DNA, even her SOUL...I have managed to do it! Ze first ever synthesis of a Magical Girl and a Witch!"

Her cackling is drowned out by the sound of what sounds like a thousand hot-wired engines being gunned to their limits behind you - and you turn to see a thousand-wheeled monster eating up the road. A collective of nitro-injected punknaughts, motorcycles, and junker beasts of cars with all sorts of weaponry lashed onto them. You make to spit out an epithet, before Strauss' voice shrieks a single word into your ear.

"MAERORUS!"

More cackling, here, and you grit your teeth at this. Jesus, to do something like that...

You're no longer dealing with saturday morning villain crazy here. You're dealing with advanced crazy.

"Yes, my dear Culexus, what you have zere with you is the first Maerorus in existence." It's here that Strauss lets out a satisfied sigh. "Und I need her back to show to my...generous benefactors zat my experiment, after so many failed attempts, finally vorked. So you see, she is very important to me, und I vould like to have her back."

A chuckle. "Ah, ze first bounty hunter force should be making zere appearance now, yes? So, you vill agree zat ve do not need to pursue zis to its final stupidity, ja? Pull over, lay down your weapons, und tell their leader - he will be a particularly ugly-looking fellow with a pink mohawk - that you are submitting yourself to Strauss' mercy. He vill know, und he vill deliver you three unharmed to me. I vill take my assistant and Ekaterina back, und you vill be allowed to return to wherever you came from."

How do you respond?

You grit your teeth and force yourself, for what seems to be like the fourth or fifth moment, to calm down and think rationally. It's much too easy to get angry with someone like Strauss - someone who believes that she's in the right no matter how wrong she is. She's even proud of it, reveling in what she's done like it's some sort of goddamn achievement.

Well. If there's one thing you learned about her type - it's that they're never worth dealing with. Never worth trusting. They'll turn on you on a drop of the hat, and justify it as the right decision at the time. The right decision for themselves, with no regard for anyone else.

You turn to Souji and signal to him to hold on.

"You drive a hard bargain, Strauss," You finally reply as you flick the open cover of the second nitro charge open with your right thumb. At the same time, you press gently on the 'GRENADES' button with your other thumb - the compartments at the back once more clicking with their deadly payload, but not yet releasing. "And I'm really glad you shared that information with me. Any other day I'd have done what you asked. But there's something I know that you don't."

"Hmmmm? Zat is impossible, you know. I am Doktor Emma Strauss, and zere is nothing I do not know!"
You press both buttons hard, at the same time.

"I don't die in Varrigan City."

"Eh? Vhat are you talking about--" Strauss starts, before the deafening whine and the searing heat of the engine overcharging itself begins to make itself known. "No. NO! YOU VILL REGRET ZIS, YOU FOOL, I--"

The second charge doesn't feel like a shove in the back like the first one did - rather, this time it feels like a solid, massive kick slamming hard against you and sending you screaming into the follow-through. A deep, bassy explosion of force that once more turns the entire scenery into nothing but a blur, making wind resistance feel like knives tearing at your suit, hooking into your flesh and then pulling back.

>>28469219

You dimly hear Souji shout something, but it's lost in the guttural, roaring protest of reality on how fast you're actually going. Schpeltiger itself is shaking, shaking hard enough to nearly buck you off of your seat, but you hang on as hard as you can. Forcing the monstrous bike to your will. To your will.

Images and scenery whip by, too fast too see, but you focus your attention forward enough that you can catch glimpses of it. Other hordes of gangers and bikes, joining the chase from streets and towns the Red Line is cutting across - but being thrown to the side at the resulting turbulence at your passing.

One particular punknaught seemed to have the idea of ramming into you the moment you came into a particular T-junction had its entire front sheared off - simply by being too close the moment you shot past. The rest of it ended up rolling through five ramshackle buildings, bouncing a couple of times before smashing through a wall.

It's here, once the second charge had finally petered out - and the horde earlier all but a memory, left behind in your dust - that something else makes its presence felt above you. One whose engine roar managed to drown out that of Schpeltiger's.

...It's a plane. A big one. It's a fucking C-130, flying low enough that you can almost see the rivets on its hull. With another deafening roar, it soars ahead of you, presenting a rear door already in the process of opening.

And it's here that you see a...something. A deformed form, clearly seven feet tall, rippling with bulging, veined muscles and ridged with bony spikes. Some sort of device, embedded deep in the middle of its wide frame, glowing a bright, blinding yellow. Its hulking arms terminating not in hands, but in long metal cylinders, each one brutally spiked and edged.

And beside it is a hunched form, with wild scraggly hair, a top hat and the most crazed grin you've ever seen.

Strauss.

Very good ruse QB, nobody will suspect that an alien that can live for hundreds of years acts nice now and will turn utterly evil a couple hundred years down the line. I thought this was /tg/, do you even Tzeentch?

And practically speaking, he's still getting all he could ever want for a nebulous purpose that might as well not exist for us. He's not saving anybody, he's selling hired guns, hitmen and mass murderers for the highest bidder. That's what he does to Humanity, the Entropy stuff might as well be a pretty lie to lull the magical girls (and you) into thinking he follows a higher goal. Not like you'll ever see the end use oif it anyway when Madoka witches out and destroys planet Earth, only because of him and his ilk.

You suck in a breath between your teeth - waiting for just the right moment to make your move. Strauss' monster - this thing of meat and metal and god knows what else - seems to hang in the air in freefall, and as it plummets ever closer, it's here that you see its eyes. Wide, glaring, and completely and utterly white. Black-veined and bloodshot, but no pupil whatsoever.

The moment comes, and you take it. Shifting your weight to the side just as you turn the handlebars deftly, carefully, minutely. Compensating for the added weight of your passengers as you swerve around the falling creature - just enough to avoid it, and at the same time maintain the clean line of acceleration you're making.

You could feel the Schpeltiger protesting here, at the kind of maneuvers you're forcing it to do in such a speed. There's a reason why Nicole loved this thing - it was a nightmare to control in the corners, but completely murderous in a straight line. Still, making it artful was something you could do with enough disregard for safety, and it's with a sigh of relief that you realize that you've succeeded in doing such - with the falling abomination whipping past you, its arms flailing desperately.

You make to gun the throttle, to let the Schpeltiger pull away to safety when--

CRASH.

Two sounds. The first a frustrated scream of rage coming from the ragged slit of flesh that Strauss' creation had for a mouth - followed immediately by the second, the ear-splitting crunch of metal smashing into metal and something tearing away at the impact.

Immediately Schpeltiger bucks under you, the handlebars trying to twist themselves out of your grip as you lose control - causing Souji to yell, to scream from behind you. You grit your teeth as you fight the wounded beast you're riding for control - before it finally dies, and all three of you are thrown into the air as it crashes.

The world starts to spin here, wildly, the sky and the ground alternating places, the sound of Schpeltiger's wreckage rolling end over end lending a tragic backbeat to your sudden flight. You catch the briefest glimpse of Souji about to crack his skull all over the pavement, the limp form of Kharn in his arms - and you throw your arm at him, along with what strength you can desperately tear from your reserves at the time.

You have a moment's respite - to see Souji's motion arrest itself in midair, cancelling out his momentum in one split second - before you yourself fall mercy to physics, hitting the ground hard enough and fast enough that you feel several bones in several places crunch. Your ribs, certainly, and probably a wrist and an ankle - but your spine being twisted nearly to the point of breaking is new.

Tasting pain and blood on your tongue, it's with a curse that you finally roll to a stop, five feet away from where Schpeltiger's ruined form lies on its side. Souji and Ekaterina landed a bit farther, but the young man is standing up even now, looking unscathed, along with the limp bundle in his arms.

He's pointing behind you. You can't make it out - the impact's fried your sound receptors, probably, it's nothing but static at the moment - but the guttural roar that suddenly erupts from behind you is loud enough to even penetrate your soundprooofed helm.

You manage to pull yourself up to your knees - a motion that makes every single nerve ending in your body stab you to your very core, and your head to swim in a wave of nausea - and look.

"I'M...GONNA FIX YOU," The monster screeches, the words falling like a guttural avalanche. Half of its flayed face has been ground away, revealing bone - most probably from its fall, and being dragged by Schpeltiger before it tore the motorcycle's back wheel out. It slams its pillared hands together, metal sparking off of the impact. The glowing yellow light deep in its chest cavity pulsating, seemingly in time with its own heartbeat.

"Like him, little Culexus?" Strauss cackles into your ear, her voice broken up by intermittent bursts of static. You shake your head and get up onto your feet, willing your own Magical Girl physiology to start healing itself, to start knitting itself together - despite it not really working that way. "He is one of my little children. I have named him Butterfingers! It is very cute, don't you zhink?"

That's...haah. Fuck. That's so funny she should kill herself.

"Ah, suicide! I have alvays sought it vould be such a vaste to do such a thing. But I guess you can call yourself doing zat too, since you did not accept my offer in ze first place."

She cackles again, just as the C-130 flies overhead, back to where it came from. "Goodbye, little Culexus. I vill make sure to treat your corpse vid ze respect it deserves: NONE! Hakhakhakhakhakhhhh!"

The Warmaster's laugh dwindles into static, and then silence. You shake your head again, before reaching over to pull your crowbar off of its maglock.

Bitch. You fucking crazy bitch, Strauss.

Seems you'll have to put down this Butterfingers dude, then. Whatever it is.

You look up at it. It's breathing hard, towering over you, what's left of its face twitching from facial tics. Most probably brought about by the jagged, painful-looking implants jutting out from its skull.

...Jesus. And you were close to the docks, already. The sign at the side of the road, a few meters away from where you crashed, said the docks were less than a few kilometers away.

True.
Decu did say that if we had skipped this fight, that another likely would have been prepared at the docks.
By fighting the FP here, we got Strauss to go away, secure in her victory, rather than seeding our escape route with more surprises.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/25/13(Mon)07:41 No.28487620

"Souji? You alright?" You call out to the young man, keeping your eyes trained at the grinning, hulking monstrosity in front of you, the spiked metal pillars serving as its arms resembling huge goremauls than anything else. Its massive, scarred chest heaving up and down as it sucked in air from between its rotting teeth. "Can you walk?"

"Y-yeah," Souji takes a moment to reply, here, his voice a small, shriveled thing. "T-that thing, I didn't...I didn't know about that--"

"Yeah?" You risk a glance at him - he's gone completely white, as white as the coat he's wearing. "Listen, take Kat and run to the docks. You know where the Rafflesia's docked, right? Go there, get Kat into the ship and have Fran start on fixing her. I'll catch up after I let off a little stress with Butterfingers here."

Jesus Christ. Listen to yourself. It's like you're in some sort of third-rate anime, or something.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/25/13(Mon)07:43 No.28487621

>>28487620

"N-no, I can't," The young man says much too quickly, and despite the tremor in his voice, you know he's serious. "I can't just leave you, that thing--"

"...will kill you," You finish for him, bluntly. Your vox speakers robbing your voice of all warmth. "Come on, Souji. You're Fran's assistant, that means you're smart. What can you do in this situation, huh? Talk him to death?" You turn towards him again, just for a second. "Run, dammit. RUN."

"But--"

"RUN!" You scream at him, just as Strauss' pet begins to roar - the glowing glass vial jutting out of its abdoment, welded and held there by jagged pieces of metal, beginning to shine a bright, blinding red. Washing out every other color around it, its contents churning. "I TOLD YOU TO FUCKING RUN!"

Whether he was actually cowed by you screaming at him or by Butterfingers suddenly exploding into a bestial charge - the ground trembling with every step the monstrous giant took - you let out a sigh of relief as Souji finally takes off, carrying Ekaterina's limp form in his arms, legs desperately pumping up and down as he sprinted away. ...Kid's a fast runner for someone who looked like they spent the entire day on the internet.

That's one less thing to worry about. Now, to worry about the other thing, here--

Throwing yourself to the side - the roll you tuck yourself into making several of your already-bruised ribs stab more painfully in protest - and you barely avoid being reduced to a smear on the ground by Butterfingers' first charge.

Forcing yourself back on your feet - despite every cell in your body screaming for you to just lie down and rest - you dodge a brutish swing from its spiked arms, and another, and another. The last one missing you by bare millimeters, with one of the spikes actually managing to scratch a deep furrow across the top of your helmet.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/25/13(Mon)07:44 No.28487628

>>28487621

...Shit, you'll have to use 'that', won't you? This thing doesn't look like it'll even flinch if you hit it full force in the face with a crowbar.

You take the opportunity to try it out a second after you think it, ducking underneath a swing that would have torn you neatly in half had you been a split-second slower. You bring the crowbar into its face in a double-handed, overhead axe cleave - and all you managed to do, despite the impact feeling like you just broke both your arms in the process, was make it even more angry.

Well. Fuck that, then.

You toss the crowbar aside - your favorite wetwork tool now bent into L-shaped uselessness - and it's here that you break into a run. A full-out run back up the Red Line Highway, your booted feet kicking up loose asphalt. Butterfingers letting out another earth-shaking roar behind you, before giving chase.

"Running?" Strauss' voice crackles into life in your ear. "Zat is vhat you're doing? Phahahaha! Look at zis! You are actually thinking you can escape him!" Another bout of cackling. "No one runs from Butterfingers, my dear Culexus!"

"No doubt," You reply. "But I'm not running, you lunatic."

"Oh?" Strauss chuckles. "Zen vhat are you--"

"Getting into range."

You hold out your hand to your side, gloved fingers spreading momentarily, before you curl them around a slender rose stalk, easily as long as you are tall.

Why does it have to be a rose? Why the fuck does it have to be a bow?

A flash of bright, painfully-pink light, and a giant rose blossom unfurls at its tip, blazing with pink flame.

Why pink? WHY did it have to be pink?

[2/3]

>> ☐ Deculture 11/25/13(Mon)07:45 No.28487638

>>28487628

At the same time, a solid beam of pure crimson light materializes in your other hand, crackling eagerly in your grip. Energy manifested and compressed into a single, streamlined shaft, literally shaking with restrained explosive force.

You skid to a halt the moment you hear Strauss' monster give another roar - and you spin neatly on your heel just as you nock arrow to bow and pull back. Despite having no visible drawstring, you feel the teeth-gritting resistance of one pushing back against your hand, the rose stalk tensing as you strain for every inch.

And as you aim - forcing your shaking arms still as you find your center - you see the hulking form of Butterfingers closing the distance between you with every moment. You managed to put twenty paces between you - now he was rapidly eating it up in a loping run. Both spiked arms spread on either side of him.

Fifteen paces. Now ten.

Ten paces. That's...that's fine. You can hit something at that range.

Where do you shoot him?

I dont think murdeehoboism really fits with MG life.

Granted, the QBs are a lot more upfront about the nature of their faustian deal, but even so, its one wish.

And there are as many reasons to be an MG as there are MGs.

Really its a distasteful business, but theres always some poor schmuck who'll trade everything they ever had and everything they might ever be for a golden ticket.

Depends. Not really. Read Oriko Magica or Kazumi Magica instead since some of those characters show up in MGNQ.

Kazumi Magica has an interesting premise and Theme of "Teenage girls are all backstabbing cunts" is alsodecent, its just that the Story gets batshit-retarded after the first few chapters.

Orico Magica is just more suffering like in the animus and could be considered one of the timelines Homuhomu lands in before saving Madoka ~~and by that I mean fucking the Universe sideways.~~
It als features the second cutest Meguca off all.

Yeah, not too far from how I'd sum up the mangoes.
Official series manga: Crap retelling. Just watch the anime.
Kazumi: A ton of potential and some interesting bits, but too many characters with zero development and most of them have some really weird designs and yet are somehow still forgettable, and the entire plot goes insane and arbitrarily ass-upwards and is just groan-inducing.
Oriko: Potential in the other direction, since it manages to not have a billion characters, and better designs too. Gives Homura a foil which is interesting. But still not all that great, and the art is kind of shitty.
Overall my opinion would be to just read Oriko and maybe try Kazumi if you have a free day and just want to power through it for some free dumb mindfuck.

All your life you've applied one simple philosophy to fighting - aim for the head, and any fight you're in would end quickly and easily. It's served you well, whether you had a gun or a crowbar in your hands, or whether you were aiming to just put them down or kill them. And it worked on everything you've had to tangle with so far - yakuza, witches, and Magical Girls.

Butterfingers doesn't seem to apply to any of them, so you're forced, for now, to consider an alternative. And from what you can see...well, you're not going to let such an obvious target go, aren't you?

It's with this in mind that you lower your aim just by a few inches - and, struggling to keep your grip on the furiously-vibrating shaft of violent crimson energy - you let the arrow of light fly.

Like no arrow you've ever loosed in the practice ranges, the shaft of light seems to pause a few moments in mid-flight. Hovering there, mere feet away from you, mere feet away from the rampaging berserker with fucking goremauls for arms seeking to tear you limb from limb.

Then - in the space of two of your own heartbeats - it grows bigger. Brighter. Until it's flooding everything with its harsh searing light, a crimson star going supernova right in front of you.

Hot enough that your helmet beeps in alarm, detecting temperatures hotter than the surface of the fucking sun.

Hot enough that you see what little left of Butterfingers' face there is shrivel up into blackened, charred flesh.

And only then does it continue on its flight. Faster - much faster than you've ever seen anything fly. Fast enough that it actually roars itself in passing - a sonic boom that your helmet hastily tries to dampen, so it doesn't shatter your eardrums. It barely manages to.

It hits Butterfingers, right where you aimed it, and keeps on going. It seems to just pass right through the rampaging behemoth - no noise, no blood, and certainly no explosion. As if you simply shot it into empty air, rather at something made out of flesh and bone and hate.

And as you watch the arrow disappear into the horizon as a single point of light - almost a star - it's here that you find yourself looking through the perfect hole in Butterfingers' midsection, exactly one foot in diameter. The edges blackened, the flesh inside perfectly cauterized. Cored right fucking through.

Butterfingers falls. Just before it completes its charge, it pitches forward, its massively-muscled legs buckling underneath it, suddenly nerveless. There's a dull crack as its face slams into the asphalt, but no cry of pain issues from its many-toothed mouth. The rest of it follow afterward, the typical boneless thud of a corpse surrendering to gravity.

Jesus. That's...you should probably use the bow more often, huh?

"No...NO!" Strauss is screaming in your ear as you fall to the ground yourself, the rose-stalk bow disappearing in your grasp. "BUTTERFINGERS! MY CHILD! YOU...YOU VEREN'T SUPPOSED TO KILL HIM! YOU HORRIBLE LITTLE VHORE, I WILL MURDER YOU--"

You'd have replied, if it weren't for the fact that you needed to throw up, a sudden wave of crippling nausea crashing hard into you.

Something hot and scalding and sour crawling up your throat and filling your mouth. You fall to your knees here as both your hands come up to claw at your throat, at the pressure seals securing your helmet in place. No, no, you're not going to throw up in your helmet again, no--

I've been thinking about the kind of wish that would create a culexus ever since that time in the silent room with Omegon.
If a normal wish that causes someone happiness gives a magical girl regular magic powers, to get a magical girl that is instead a sort of void that swallows magical power, wouldn't it make sense that it was a wish that directly caused despair?

Your helmet hits the asphalt with a crack and rolls away from you as you retch hot, black, stinking blood into the asphalt. The gory vomit falling too fast and too thick, creating a filthy puddle between your hands, too copious for the ground to drink with any speed.

Another heave sends more blood into the road, some of it splashing on Butterfinger's ruined face.

...Oh. Right. This is why you don't use the fucking bow at all.

BECAUSE IT MAKES YOU THROW UP FUCKING BLOOD.

"Do you see?" A voice suddenly speaks up behind you. A cold voice, one brimming with hate and venom and just a touch of premeditated murder. And all too familiar. "Do you see what's going on here, Madoka? Do you see what the contract's done to you?"

You turn to look at her, squinting. Your eyes aren't all that used to unfiltered light. Too much time looking at everything from behind a visor.

You don't have any more blood puke left in you, it feels like, but you spit what's left in your mouth at her in reply instead. It lands by her stockinged feet, depressingly far from the mark you've aimed the gob of sour spit and clotting blood at - you were aiming at her face = but it seems to do the job in making her angrier.

Blood puke. ...Hey, that's a good song title--oh, wait. Somebody already wrote that. Good song, though, one of your party favorites.

"Oh, very mature. Cuts right to the quick." Her mouth twisting into a snarl, she steps forward, bright purple eyes flashing. "I told you not to take the contract, right? I can't save you if your soul's trapped inside a Soul Gem. Why didn't you listen? WHY DIDN'T YOU LISTEN, MADOKA?!"

She screams your first name in a harsh, keening wail, loud enough to echo across the empty landscape that the Red Line Highway cuts through to the docks.

You shake your head here, keeping silent as you retrieve your helmet. Checking it for damage, frowning as you see the cut that Butterfingers made on its surface. ...He's ruined the cool skull thing you had custom-printed, too! You'll have to get this one repaired when you get back.

"You're ignoring me?" Her tone is incredulous now. "You're ACTUALLY ignoring me? After all I've done for you, after I've gone through for you - to SAVE you - you're giving the cold shoulder?" It's here that you feel a cold hand grasp your upper arm, cold enough for you to feel through the thick padded leather of your suit. "Madoka, you can't do this to me. I love you. I LOVE YOU. Don't do this to me, I'm the only one who loves you this much--"

You pull your arm free from her grip. No. You don't talk back to crazy. You never talk back to crazy.

"Ma..Madoka?" She sounds hurt, now, and seems to choke before grabbing your arm. "N-no. No, Madoka, look at me. PLEASE! Please, I've sacrificed so much for you!" She's crying now, loud helpless sobs, angry tears tinged with bitter despair and anguish. "I've killed so many people, so many timelines, just so we can be together again! Please, at least look at me! MADOKA!"

You crunch your helmet back down onto your head, the pressure seals hissing and clicking to place. Your HUD notifying you of the fact that your suit's limiter settings had been on EMERGENCY MODE the entire time, and was now just going back to NORMAL, now that your helmet's back on.

You let out a breath, and it's here that you turn to check.

Gone. No one there, only Butterfingers' lifeless corpse.

Just like it should be.

Right. Anyway.

You should call in, probably. Have Fran send a motorized transport to pick up Souji and Ekaterina, and then you. Before Strauss' goons - or Strauss herself - decides to come back and send more surprises your way.

It's here, then, that the familiar rumble of a punknaught interrupts your thoughts - and you see a very familiar one thunder down the road toward you, its brutally-spiked front fender blackened and warped with grenade explosion damage.

Oh. Well. Just what you needed, then.

Jesus, no one deserves your luck--

"Miss Malal!" A megaphone-amplified voice erupts from inside the idling punknaught, and the hatch at the very top pops open to reveal a young, familiar face with long white hair. She waves at you, all smiles. "Need a lift?"

...Hey! It's that Canadian Magical Girl! Odette...something! You already forgot!

"Odette Brighton, Miss Malal," The girl says, pouting.

How do you respond?

I think because Malal invested so much time in to Chiaki, Homura sees her as the main reason why Madoka contracted.

so she blames Chiaki for Malal's death and wants to ruin her.

Difficult to say. Malal DOES know Madoka, so its a fair bet she knows OF Ribbon Homu, at least.

Kind of ironic, really. Malal is haunted by Ribbon Homu just like Chiaki is by Faust.

Which throws up a few questions. I REALLY want to ask Kyubey what he knows about our contract.

You know, Chamberlain really gets a bad rap for that.
Yes, it was appeasement on the outside, but what he was really doing was buying England time to arm up for what he saw as the inevitable conflict with the Reich. If they had gone to war then, they would have been stomped into the ground hard, since the Empire wasn't on a war footing.
As soon as Chamberlain had secured the extra time he needed, he immediately started building up the military and opening factories for weapons and ammunition.

You grin sheepishly from behind your helmet's faceplate and apologize. You'll remember this time, you promise. But hey, perfect timing! You do in fact need a lift, after Big, Dead and Ugly over there wrecked Schpeltiger.

"Eh?" She turns to follow your pointing finger, only to pale at the sight of Butterfingers' corpse. "T-that thing? You killed that yourself, Miss Malal?"

Yep. Took a bit of doing, but there it is, you reply, as you walk over to your borrowed bike's wreckage. ...Urgh, Nicole's going to get so pissed. It looks like it can be fixed, sure, but not without extensive repair.

"You'd better pay me back in full, Ash Ketchum," you could almost hear her growl at you.

Might as well take it with you back to the ship, you think. You call to Odette, who's poking at Butterfingers' burnt skull with the tip of her spear, if she could help you tie Schpeltiger onto the roof of the punknaught.

"Oh, sure, Miss Malal! It'll be my pleasure!"

And does she have any more of her candies? You kind of want to get the taste of something out of your mouth.

"Oh, of course! I have more than enough to last me the entire duration of my service!"

Hah, well. She IS still a kid, after all.

Makes you wish you had time to enjoy your being a kid, too.

With her help, you manage to chain Schpeltiger's ruined wreck onto the back of the punknaught, and soon you're rolling down Red Line Highway - you on the wheel and Odette carefully feeding you a candy every now and then, doing it the way you showed her. A few minutes into the drive and you see Souji limping along, wheezing deep, ragged breaths as he continued to carry Ekaterina to the docks. ...Well, he didn't get THAT far, but not for lack of trying.

After briefly making the young man piss his pants by pretending to be a ganger over the megaphone, you had Odette usher him into the punknaught, along with his precious cargo. Souji was so exhausted that the moment he managed to sit down, he fell dead asleep - his arms still around the comatose Ekaterina. This suit you just fine - you're not exactly up to answering his inevitable question of how you survived your encounter with Butterfingers.

Instead, you asked Odette about...well, how she managed to get the punknaught. You were expecting her to be back at the Rafflesia with Madaraki!

"Well, I was on my way to escort her there, Miss Malal, but she changed her mind about halfway there, and asked me to get back to the city and try to assist you in any way that I can."

Odette says as she unwraps another piece of candy. "By the time I got there, all the gangers were scrambling out of their dens and into their vehicles, screaming about getting the bounty on your head, Miss Malal. So I stole into the nearest punknaught I could find, started it up and smashed my way through anyone who wanted to stop me."

Hah! Good girl. That's a very good girl.

Hah! Good girl. That's a very good girl.

"T-thank you," The white-haired girl murmurs bashfully, blushing. "It wasn't as if it was anything difficult, though, really. I was expecting something like a tank's control scheme, but it's really just a huge truck thing with a lot of stuff bolted on." She sniffs here contemptuously, before deftly removing your helmet's air filter plate and dropping the candy through. "There you go, Miss Malal. That's the last one."

Eh? But what about her?

"Oh, it's fine, Miss Malal! I'm happy to let you have the rest, I've never met anyone who likes them as much as you do!" She smiles again, brightly. "Besides, it's actually cute, the way you eat them in such a funny way - through your helmet, I mean." Odette giggles here, before blinking. "Um, I mean no offense, of course, Miss Malal."

Hah. None taken.

Really cute kid. Hopefully being a Warmaster doesn't make her lose this kind of feeling.

You reach the docks - and the Rafflesia - soon after that, with you radioing in to notify Fran that you are in fact in a punknaught, and no, they shouldn't shoot you.

...Fuck's sake, Fran wasn't kidding. It IS actually a fucking battleship, but modified enough that it kind of looks like a cruise ship at first glance. For one, it's painted completely white, with its name written on its side with golden cursive.

The control tower thing at the center also seems to be redecorated, sporting less of the armaments that you'd see bristling from it and more...well, you don't know what those are, but they definitely look less like navy tech and more science-y. Yeah. Science-y.

But still it's a fucking battleship. Iowa-class if you're any judge. How the fuck did they get their hands on something like that?

"Ahh, Miss Malaaaal!" Madaraki Fran greets you as you and your party finally make it on board, Schpeltiger included. "I was so worried you wouldn't make it! So worrieeeed that I even sent Odette-chan here to help any way she could!" Her eyes light up at the sight of the Canadian. "You helped Miss Malal heeeere, didn't you? Didn't she, Malal?"

Yeah. Yeah, she did.

"Hahaha~ Good, that's good! Very good, Odette-chan!" She pats the white-haired girl on the head, making her blush redder. "Mmm, well, that makes us a full ship, then! Have the gangway and anchor raised, we're leaving this hellish city and setting sail for Japan!"

She turns towards the other staff waiting behind her. "Medicae! Get the patient on a gurney and have her prepped for surgery in theater one, quickly!" She gestures towards Ekaterina, still held tightly in Souji's arms.

"Miss Madaraki?" Souji hesitates here, as the crew takes Ekaterina from his grasp and gently places her on the gurney. "M-May I assist in the procedure? I...I helped bring her here, and--"

"Oh?" Fran blinks at him, before turning to you. "He did this? For sure?"

You nod again. ...Why's that suddenly so hard to believe?

"Oh." The blonde scientist blinks again, before nodding. "Ah, sure. Just make sure you are cleaned up, okay? Have the Medicae sanitize you first for the operation before you step into the theater!"

Souji grins at this. "T-thank you, Miss Madaraki!"

"...What did you do to him?" Fran whispers to you as Souji follows the medicae crew deeper into the ship. "He does not even leave his computer of his, much less actually step outside." It's here that her eyes go wide. "You...you did not do any Culexus Tricks on him, did you? Or..." Her surprised expression turns into a sly one. "...did you seduce him?"

How do you respond?

You snort as you fall in step with Fran, Odette following close behind. Yeah, of course. Seduced him like a motherfucker. Your girlish charms counterbalanced with your rough, delinquent exterior proved way too much for Souji to resist, along with your silky-smooth voice and perfect figure. You had him eating out of your hand.

...No, of course you didn't. She does realize the Culexus suit isn't made to be flattering, right? It isn't conducive to Callidus-type things - hell, the vox makes you sound like an irritated robot most of the time!

"Are you sure? Maybe some guys actually like that, you knoooow. Like, a tough girl exterior but actually sweet and kind inside...hahaha~!"

Yeah, yeah. Well, anyway. It wasn't you, it was Ekaterina all along. Somewhere along the line he started liking her, enough that he actually trusted you to take her somewhere safe.

"Hnnn...I see. Well, maybe he's not as unreliable as I said he was, Miss Malaaaal." She taps her chin with a finger, thoughtfully.

Well, he did help out a lot, so maybe.

"I will think about this further. Maybe it's time to promote him a bit, in light of this." It's here that she claps both hands. "But ah, besides that! Today, Miss Malal, a new day dawns upon us, the Thirteenth! With the blessing of our Incubator, we have successfully ousted our now-former Warmaster, the Doktor Emma Strauss, and have elected a new one in her stead!"

Oh? Who is it, then?

It's here that Fran flushes pink, but with her skin being so pale, bordering on translucent, that the blush looks more red than anything else. "Well, um, my colleagues agreed that I should be the new Warmaster, Miss Malal." She smiles sheepishly.

"A-ah, but I promise not to make the same mistakes as she did! Furthermore, I formally replace the Warmaster title with a more fitting role for our Officio - Chief Director!"

Ahh. Well...she'd be the choice you'd pick too, if it were up to you. Chief Director sounds like a...calmer title than Warmaster. It's a good choice.

"A-ah, you think so too?" Fran grins, here, clearly relieved and pleased with your approval. "Oh, and also, because of your assistance, Miss Malal, I'd like you to have the pleasure of breaking it to Strauss herself!"

Hah, what? That...well, you guess that'd be great, but...you don't need to go back into Varrigan City again, do you?

"Oh, no! Of course not, Miss Malal! We have technology!" Fran takes what looks like a smartphone from the inside of her coat - and from how it looks, it's been ringing for quite a while. This she hands to you. "The person calling should be Miss Strauss herself, most likely calling to warn us that you're headed our waaay. I've been dropping her calls since this morning, so..." She smiles at you, cheekily again.

Heh. Well. Don't mind if you do, then.

You patch the call to your helmet, and answer it through your own comms. There's a click as the connection is finally established, and when Strauss' voice finally comes through...well. Suffice to say she's pretty fucking pissed.

"Fran? Fran, you stupid girl!" Strauss all but snarls at you. "Vhy haven't you been answering your verdammt phone?! Ugh, I vill have you sanctioned for it later. But listen, zat Culexus from earlier, she is headed towards the docks now! Most probably towards your position! Have za guns ready to shoot her out of existence - I don't care if you reduce ze docks to a smoking ruin! Make her pay for killing Butterfingers!"

...Wow. Okay. She's really bent about you killing her dude, huh.

How do you break it to her?

"Fran? Fran! Fran, come on, get your head out of ze clouds for vonce--" Strauss tries again, before you interrupt her with a chuckle.

"Vhat? Who...who is this? Who are you? What are you doing on this line?"

You let her stew for a moment before replying. Oh, man. You wish you could just take this moment, bottle it, and savor it for eternity.

Not every day you can tell a Warmaster that she'd just been shitcanned.

"It's zat Culexus, Emma." You say loudly, clearly, making damn well sure she can hear the smile on your face. "I'm already here on the Rafflesia and killed everyone. And you're fired."

"...YOU!" Strauss all but roars into your speakers, making you wince. "Thief! Liar! Murderer! I do not know how you got Madaraki's phone, but I svear you will make you pay for all of your sins--"

"Really? Well. I was just kidding. About the killing thing." You chuckle here again. "But you're still totally fired."

"Fired?" Strauss stops her cursing and raving long enough to spit that at you. "Vhat nonsense are you spouting now? I cannot be fired by you--"

"You can, Ma'am Strauss," Fran says, taking her phone from you and speaking into its receiver. "For your unethical research and experimentation methods, as well as using Officio resources for unsanctioned procedures, we have unanimously decided that you are no longer fit for the role of Warmaster." The blonde scientist smiles at you. "As Miss Malal had so succinctly put it, Ma'am Emma Strauss, you are fired. I am the Warmaster now, and therefore Captain of the Rafflesia"

Silence. Utter silence at the end of the line.

"VHAT?!" Strauss shrieks again. "No! NO! ZE THIRTEENTH IS MINE!" Something shatters in the background, something made of glass. "IT VAS I WHO CAME UP WITH EVERYTHING! All ze procedures, all the experiments, all ze research! FRAN! FRAN, SHE KILLED BUTTERFINGERS, FRAN!"

"...Then she treated him more humanely than you ever did." Fran murmurs into the line, her voice shaking slightly. "And while I should ask Misaka-chan to have the Rafflesia shell Varrigan City into smithereens, I will not. I will let you live out your life, Ma'am Strauss, despite the fact that you never let your subjects live out theirs. Because I am not you."

"Madaraki!" Strauss tries, desperate now. "Do not...I have done so much for ze Officio! Please, have mercy--"

"And you have mine, Ma'am Strauss." Fran's reply is smooth and cold. "You're still alive, aren't you?"

Silence, and then Fran ends the call there.

"And that horrible business is done!" The Thirteenth's new Warmaster manages to work up a smile as she slips her phone back into her coat. "Now, will you join me in helping clean up our past mistakes, Miss Malal? Starting with the patie--er, young Ekaterina, of course!"

You nod. Yeah, of course you'll join her. Wouldn't miss it for the world.

"Perfect! Oh, and I must introduce you to Misaka-chan, she's been wanting to meet a Culexus since ever! She thinks the suits are very cool!"

Heh. Well, they are, kind of.

...She wasn't really serious about shelling Varrigan City, was she? Into smithereens?

"Oh, we don't have the proper ammunition for that! Not nearly enough!" Fran waves her hand.

Ah. So it was a bluff, then.

"Well, I suppose! But then again, Misaka-chan had just finished this new batch of ammunition to use with our main turrets, though. Something called White Phosphorus? I haven't really heard of it before. Ah, this way to the operating theatre, Miss Malal!"

...Well, at the very least, the Thirteenth seems to be in good hands. Madaraki seems to be more interested in science than trying to become another superpower.

You have a feeling you'll need her help soon. Or at least she would, after you're gone.

You should probably put this all in a notebook. Or a tablet.

Yeah. Yeah, you'll get one of those when you get back.

In hindsight I think we could have gone with a more business approach. Something like,
"Miss Strauss, I was going through your files and I have found several discrepancies. Because of this, your current position is now under review," whisper to Fran, "What do you call a Warmaster without an officio again?"

Then maybe tack on, "Also, you're fired," at the end just to be classy like that.

Red sighed as she finally managed to escape into the back of the Tearoom, it was too early for this shit, it always was. She wasn’t what most people would expect in an upscale Japanese Tearoom, being 175cm tall and having bright red hair. But her place of employment wasn’t exactly a normal Tearoom either.

Situated in the heart of Downtown Mitakihara, it was a place frequented by only very high level management of the cities many corporations, their guests and people with sufficient “alternate” forms of power and respectability to get on the list. Yes there was a list, Red had it memorized and it had only changed a very few times in the near year and a half she had been working there.

It was funny, she thought as she went about her business behind the scenes, placing the orders for the light snacks the early arrivals wanted and heading for the tea-prep area, as a born and bred American she preferred coffee over tea. But the benefits of working at the Tearoom with no name were manifold, especially for someone of her status. For one, it paid well and had a generous amount of vacation days, all of which she needed. Secondly, neither the management nor the clientele asked questions about her past, something she was very grateful for. The third and most important reason however, was that it let her pick up on the pulse of the cities high level movers and shakers.

That was her real job, to listen and gather information. While it was a place of quiet and relaxation for the big bosses, they also occasionally held important, unofficial gatherings where many of the real deals were made. While they were generally quiet enough to not be overheard and the place was regularly swept for bugs, Red had one major advantage over any other potential spy. She was a Magical Girl, with all the enhanced senses that went along with that.

As a Vindicare, it really wasn’t what she should be doing, a task like this would normally be assigned to a Callidus or Vanus, possibly even a more composed Eversor. But her officio didn’t have the luxury of assigning the right person to every task, they had to make do.

She chuckled as she quickly but efficiently prepared the natural tea that had been ordered. The small group of girls that she worked with directly and the various other groups that they were connected with weren’t really an Officio. For one, they didn’t have an incubator at the helm and all of them liked it just fine that way.

Finishing the tea, she looked at the small amount remaining after she poured. That was what they were; the dregs of the Magical Girl World, the ones who had slipped through the cracks either on purpose or because nobody cared to look for them. That was why they called themselves the “Lost Officio”, because nobody knew about them.

Grabbing the tea and snacks she headed out, the polite smile expected of her easily finding its way back on her face. Technically that wasn't true; there were people who knew about them. But those people didn't talk about them, just like they didn't talk about places like this Tearoom. They were a secret that was kept to dark corners and people with enough power and money to need completely anonymous help, help that was at the same time competent, discrete and ultimately expendable.

Gently placing their orders in front of the CFO's of two of Japan's largest corporations, Red idly wondered if she had ever done a job for them. Probably, she decided as she bowed politely and turned toward the door. At a high enough level of business it was inevitable that certain things needed to be done, whether to advance or halt someone or something else. That was just how it went.

Normally the real Officio's would take care of things like that; retrieving lost property or people was something they did on a regular basis. But there were certain thing they didn't do, things that were bad for business or their image, things that didn't pay enough for them to care. That was where the Lost came in; they whatever work they could get, nothing was too small or too dark for them, no hole too deep for them as long as they could be found or paid to care.

Taking her place against the wall, Red felt her grin slip into something more real for just a second as she straightened out the formal outfit she was wearing. If the girls in Santa Destroy ever saw her in a getup like this they would have laughed their heads off at the ridiculousness of it, none of them could have held this job for longer than an hour and that was being generous. But that was why she had left, she had never fit in, wasn't quite crazy enough. She had run, desperate to get out of that place, to forget what she had done. She would never have made it except for…

It was then that the girl Red was thinking of walked through the front door, immediately drawing a smile to her face, one that she had to fight hard to suppress despite the fact she was early. No matter how many times Red saw her Mom's golden curls, gentle smile and motherly attitude always made her feel better. Mom wasn't her real name of course; nobody in the Lost used their real name anymore, too easy to track. But they were there, in the back of your mind or given quietly to a person you felt you could trust, just so that you wouldn't be completely forgotten when the inevitable happened.

But Mom didn't have a name, at least not that anyone was sure of. There were theories and rumors, some Red even believed. But in the end it didn't matter who Mom really was, not to Red, not to any of the girls in the Lost. All that mattered was that she was the one who had saved them, let them leave whatever hells they had been in and gave them a chance at a new life, one that let them start over and forget the past, at least for the most part.

As Mom sat down at her usual table, Red moved towards her professionally even though what she really wanted to do was run and give her a hug. Despite being in a position that was basically Warmaster and Incubator all in one, there wasn't a girl in the Lost who wouldn't bleed their last drop of blood or give the last light in their Soul-Gem for her. Mom was the one who arranged and gave out most of the big jobs, organized the various cells and managed to find Grief Seeds for them. She did near everything and the Lost Girls would give her everything they had right back.

Stepping up next to Mom, Red received a smile that made everything better, every worry go away, at least for a bit.

"Your usual Ma'am?" Red asked, staying in character.

“Yes please,” came Mom’s warm voice, playing the part of a customer.

Red nodded politely and head back to prepare Mom’s usual. She knew it by heart, everyone in the Mitakihara cell did since Mom took turns visiting their workplaces.

Stepping back outside, Red placed Mom’s tea in front of her with real respect, not the applied respect she used for most of her clients.

“Will that be all?” Red asked, wondering if the light smell of pancakes had anything to do with Mom being early.

Mom took a sip of her tea before speaking quietly. “I need you to get your girls together,” she said quietly, her warm voice taking a turn for the serious even as her face betrayed nothing, “Something’s come up and I need you to deal with it. The normal time and place will work.”

Red nodded at this, “Yes ma’am,” she said a little louder than Mom, in case someone was attempting to listen in, “One morning special coming right up.”

Moving to the back to place the order, Red briefly wondered what Mom had planned for them. The Mitakihara cell was the one closest to Mom, they usually took turns making deliveries to the other cells and picking up anything they had for to give to her. She only called them together when something big was up.

Shaking her head, Red let the loose thread drop. It didn’t matter what Mom needed them to do, she and the other four girls in her cell would get the job done, even if it meant taking on the Blessed Lady herself.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/30/13(Sat)07:30 No.28576486

"...We got back to Mitakihara a few weeks after that. Kharn, well...we tried our best to get her back, to undo what Strauss did to her. We did what we could, but it wasn't enough. I had to make do with what was left of her psyche, too...and what I had to work with, well, that's what you know and love as Kharn today. Rather proud of it myself, even though I created a blonde-destroying monster."

A laugh, one that sounds forced more than anything else. Forced and tired and...defeated.

"Look. I...I know it seems like you're going around in circles, searching for every single nugget of information that I managed to hide before...well, you know." A rustle of leather, most probably from her shrugging.

"But just keep at it. I've tried to plan for everything you may come across, every eventuality that I can think of. I've tried to make sure that you'll have the same resources I had when the shit hits the fan. You're free to ignore what I came up with, of course - what the fuck do I know, right? - but it's there if you need it. Because if there's anything I kept dreaming about, it's that what we're playing against are sneaky cheating bastards, and we need to play as dirty as them."

A cough, sticky and wet. "...Anyway, I don't have much longer. I think I shouldn't need to say it, but in case I do, let's keep everything we talked about earlier between just the two of us. Don't let anyone know, not Kyuubey, not Mami, certainly not Kharn. Don't worry about Omegon, I've left her specific instructions not to access anything I've recorded on Remov as she's repairing it."

More coughing. "Khh. 'Scuse me. Ngh...anyway. Just like your Diary App, I've set Remov to have time-release locks on everything, just in case the person listening to this isn't the one it's meant for. Just let him fly around in your office in Passive Mode, he'll alert you when one's ready for playing."

A few clicking sounds, metal in nature, followed by the hiss of something pressurizing. "Right. Got to run. No rest for the wicked, things like that. Good luck, Murderface, and..." A slight pause. "...whatever happens, don't be too hard on yourself. Even if everything goes to shit...well, we can at least say we tried, right?"

A crackle of static, and another click.

[RECORDED JOURNAL ENTRY ENDS] The servitor skull drones at you, the various machinery and electronics inside its hollow brain case clicking and whirring, lights flickering from its eye sockets. [FURTHER PLAYBACK OF JOURNAL ENTRIES DISABLED, SWITCHING TO PASSIVE MODE]

Right. Perfect.

You're a Magical Girl, and you just finished listening to a dead Magical Girl's recorded thoughts. Telling you about how she rescued the former Warmaster of your Officio from a veritable shithole of a city, with said former Warmaster having already been turned into the monster she was now. ...Well, that's a bit uncharitable, you think. Monsters don't exactly go out to hunt blondes, or have tongues right out of a fetish video.

You glance down at your desk. You sat down in front, took some paper from inside a drawer and a pen. You'd scrawled a few names down, right underneath the impressive printed header that proclaimed that piece of paper as 'From The Desk of the Ninth Warmaster Upon Her Throne Of Skulls'. Nicole Touchdown, Wendy Cooldown, and Karasawa Enyo are some of those names. Odette Brighton and Madaraki Fran are some others, the latter with an underline. And encircled several times, just for emphasis - Emma Strauss.

You breathe out smoke, glowering on your list, before plucking out the filter from your lips and grinding it out on the already-full ashtray beside it.

Of all the names Malal had given you, it's evident which is the most important. The person who changed Kharn so irrevocably that she turned out that way, black metal shit on her arms and legs and rapey powers.

What was she trying to do, the fucking crazy german? Combine a Witch and a Magical Girl? Mad scientist stuff if you've ever heard it. But looking at Kharn...well, you can't not think that the Russian Magical Girl had more than just a bit of Witch in her, moreso when you saw her in action. A monster roaring in berserk fury, twinned with the gleeful cackling of a Magical Girl reveling in bloodshed.

You take your glasses off and massage the bridge of your nose. Nnnh. First you find out about Oriko, now it's this. ...Well, at least you're not wanting for any details, with Malal's little plan revealing itself, piece by piece.

...You should probably ask Wendy about Malal, too, if you ever dream about her again.

You glance out the window of your office. Mitakihara's skyline lighting up the darkening night sky.

Quiet night out.

...Wait, you were supposed to go somewhere, right? Meet someone for something special. That's why you got dressed up by Mami in the first place.

Your eyes go wide as you remember.

Shit! Your dinner with Midori! And you promised you wouldn't be late--!

JESUS FUCKING CHRIST, YOUR FIRST DATE SINCE EVER AND YOU LOST TRACK OF TIME?

You lost. Track. Of Time. Listening to something that you could've probably put off till later. But noo, you had to get that stupid fucking skull up and talking then, did you? For fuck's sake, you promised yourself you'd stop disappointing people, and Midori's one of them and FUCK YOU'RE LATE FOR THE GODDAMN DATE YOUR PROMISED HER--

Wait. Wait. No. Calm down. Stop. Don't...don't transform just yet. Think for a second.

She never really gave you a time, right? Not even a place. She just said something about it being tonight, a-and you never got anything else past that. Nothing from her on your phone, too, so...that means that's okay, right? That means you haven't fucked things up yet, right?

Right. Right. Yeah. Calm down. It's...it's going to be fine. Somehow.

You shake your head as you sink back down on your chair, slamming your forehead into the polished mahogany surface of your desk. The brief flash of pain preceded by the hollow-sounding (hah) impact.

Calm down. It's...alright. It's probably not your FIRST date, since you don't remember a bunch of stuff. And from what Wendy's told you, you did just fine then, so...yeah. It'll turn out okay. You hope.

Another wooden thunk suddenly erupts inside your room, and you very nearly jump out of your chair at the sound of it. The Golden Desert Eagle already at your hand and aimed towards its source - just as none other than Kyoko Sakura, in civilian clothes, peeks from behind the freshly-opened door to your Office.

"Hey Murderface! I'm here to pick you up for your date with destiny, and--" Kyoko's words trail off as she stares down at the barrel of the oversized handcannon aimed at her. "WHOA! Hey, point that thing somewhere else!" She immediately raises both hands in surrender, her one eye wide. "I just came here to pick you up, Murderface, Chrissakes!"

How do you react?

I take issue with "the most calm motherfucker" on the planet, but you are right that I think people are projecting a little too much anxiety, yeah.

At the very least, Chiaki's spaghetti is the calmer, deadpan kind anyway. Where it'd take some perceptiveness to not mistake her spaghettiness for just being generally quiet and unsocioable and possibly douchey.

Oh, I'm sure she'll have pulled herself together by the time they actually get there.

I just think it'd be appealing for Kyouko to see Chiaki rattled in a way that basically nothing else - including things far more justified - has ever managed.

Dealing with things that want to kill you - easy.
Dealing with things that you might have to live with - hard.

For me this is more situation based. I don't think we should go out of our way to save her. But if we somehow get the chance we might want to take it.

Otherwise just chop her head off. Preferably with the golden katana for added irony.

You keep the Golden Desert Eagle trained at Kyoko for a few more moments, before shoving it back into your holster and securing it there. For fuck's sake, couldn't she have at least KNOCKED? Is barging in like that something she grew up with in the sticks or what? Because knocking before entering is it's done in the city, by fine, upstanding cityfolk--

"Eh? But I did knock! I made it really loud and everything, just in case you didn't hear me!" Kyoko blinks her one good eye as she strides into the room, long red hair flowing behind her in that topknot ponytail of hers. "Hah, but I know what's gotten you wound up tight an' all."

She sidles up beside you, the widest grin baring her teeth - and it's then that she throws an arm around your shoulders. "It's this date thing with Midori, right? Right?" She gives your ribs a poke or two, making you twitch. "Aww, Murderface, you're going red! Who'da thunk it! HAHAHA!"

Gnh...it's...it's not, alright? You shrug her arm off and slap her poking hand away, before making a show of rearranging your desk. Tearing off the list of names from your notepad and shoving it into your blazer pocket. It's just...you just thought you were going to be late, that's all--

"Aww, you don't hafta lie to yer best friend forever, Kyoko, you know!" Kyoko guffaws, her one eye closed by the gleeful, shit-eating grin threatening to reach her ears. "I know all about datin' and stuff! I take Sayaka out every weekend if our schedules match, so feel free to ask me anything! Anythin' at all!"

Bear in mind Mami was acting Warmaster post Kharn, so she probably still wasn't directly under the vindicate chain of command.

Infact, given the phone message we got when we first woke up as Matsuda, and it seems very unlikely - No Vindicare rank leaders in the phone, so were were probably directly attached to Mami and Kyouko (she does, after all, have a track record of setting us on fire as a distraction)

I imagine Sayaka could also have called on our services, but I imagine neither would have been particuarly thrilled with that setup, and it probably only happened if Mami insisted.

I dunno. I can see this happening:

Right. Okay. So Kyoko's the Dating Guru in this parts, you get that. Sure, you'll ask her a question.

"Sure! Ask away, and I'll answer!" The red-haired Eversor crows, completely confident in herself.

Alright, Dating Guru. What the fuck happened to her neck? Is that a normal part of dating, or what?

"Eh? What about my neck? I don't--" Kyoko blinks her one good eye at you, brow furrowing as she places her fingers on her neck - before suddenly going red and clamping her hand over her skin. "I, uh, hahaha! It's...it's probably just an insect bite! Y-yeah! Flies and such are biting in this kinda weather, you know! It's been really chilly!"

Insect, huh? Must have been a really big, blue-haired insect. You could still see the teeth marks, there.

"K-kh....N-Knock it off, Murderface, geez! Take this seriously, I'm tryin' to help you here!" She pokes you in the ribs again before you could slap her hand away. "You're my Warmaster and everythin', but don't think I'll keep bailing you out if ya jerk me around like this!"

What happened to being Best Friends Forever? You shake your head here, managing a smile of your own. Fine, fine. Something...something about the date, then.

Namely, how do you talk? What do YOU talk about during the date? You're pretty sure you shouldn't talk about work, because you're practically her boss and everything. And what are you not supposed to do during a date?

"Oh, huh." Kyoko blinks again, seemingly genuinely surprised. "Weird."

What's weird?

"Nah, I just..." She laughs, here. "I was thinking that I was gonna hafta spell that one out for ya, Murderface! Hahaha--OW!"

Now she's the one getting her ribs poked. Is that any kind of way to talk to her Warmaster?

Oh. Uh, right. Sorry. Your bad.

"S'alright." Kyoko grumbles, rubbing her side. "Anyhow! For that kind of stuff, ya should always follow the H.A.D. formula!"

H.A.D. formula?

"Hobbies, Ambitions, Dreams! Guaranteed panty-peeler!" Kyoko cackles. "Always make her feel like she's the center of your universe, and never steer the conversation towards work or yourself unless she does it in the first place!" It's here that she suddenly grows serious. "Oh, and you gotta make sure not to murder somebody during the date."

And we still should talk to her about it, Im pretty sure she is bottling up a lot. Depending on how the date goes and how the mood is it might be a good idea to ask her about that since.. well.. its an important part of our live and unfortunatley she will have to deal with our baggage if Midorin wants to date us because its not the kind of baggage you can leave at the door.

That said, I find it interesting that Malal pointed out again to not trust Kharn and Mumi. Malal was probably ware of Kharns infatuation with the BlessedLady-Shit so this is why she warned us.

With Mami it might be a lot more complicated. Either because Mumi was playing Chiaki liek a fiddle the whole time since it also is in line with the foreshadowing of how stuff works inside of Mumi`s Head and her mortivation we got in her flashback.

Or because Malal was wary of mumi because while she is veteran and one of the most powerful megucas around she also has a liable psyche and is susceptible to emotional breakdowns like shown in the Animus ~~and again pointed out by Homura in the Movie with how she dislikes Mami and never really got along with her.~~

Right. Okay. Hobbies, ambitions, dreams. You can handle that.

Not murdering anyone during the date...well, come on. Be reasonable. Surely she can't expect you to--

"No. No murdering anyone, Murderface! Not on the date! You'd think that'd impress 'em and such, or beating up anyone who looks at 'em the wrong way, but they'll hate that! They'll say that you ruined the evening and everything! I'm serious here!"

Kyoko's actually tearing up a bit here as she says this to you, both hands on your shoulders.

Yeah...yeah, okay. You'll...you'll try. You'll really, really, really try.

"I know ya would, but I gotta make sure." She wipes her eyes with the back of her hands. "We'll be stoppin' by your vault to put your gun there."

Kyoko frowns here. "Aw, don't give me that look like I just pissed all over your cornflakes there, Murderface! I promised Midori I'll make this the one night you don't carry that junk around. Gold-free date."

But...but what if you need to murder--

"I told you--"

Er, you mean, defend yourself and Midori. What about then?

"Well, that's why I'll be there, of course! Chaffeur and lookout!" The red-haired Eversor points at herself. "Anybody tries to get their hands on you or on Midori, I'll drop 'em like an elk! Hahaha! Like a freakin' elk!"

...Right. Well. That certainly makes you feel safer.

Any other tips the Dating Guru can share, then?

It's here that Kyoko grins. "Seriously? Well...besides the no-murderin' thing, I guess just act like yourself, then? I mean, Midori really seems to like you and everything, and I don't think it's just because of that porn thing she draws." She gives you a stinging slap on your lower back that forces your breath out between your teeth in a hiss. "Just remember, no murdering and you're set!"

No murdering. Okay.

"You ready, then?"

[]Yeah. Let's go.
[]Hold on. Let me just do something first. (Write-in)

Yeah. You're pretty much set, anyway.

"I can see that!" Kyoko looks you up and down, seemingly just noticing your new clothes for the first time. "Hahaha, Mami-chan really knows how to pick out stuff when it comes to fashion, eh? She can even make slobs like you an' me clean up alright! Hahaha!"

...Yeah. You guess so. You miss your costume, though.

"Well, of course ya do, you even sleep in the damn thing." Kyoko shrugs. "Then again, I also did a bit of that. Until Sayaka made me stop, anyway."

It's just so convenient, you tell her. So comfortable. Yeah, you'll complain about some bits of it, but it always feel so familiar, like a second skin.

"Yeah. Yeah, I getcha. Like wearin' a really tailor-made suit. Fits you just right and everything." She lets out a wistful sigh. "Anyway...! Let's get cracking, before Midori-chan starts worrying!"

And so you do. After a brief detour of your Golden Weapon Vault - Muramasa all but rattling against its plexiglass case as you placed both the Desert Eagle and the Bangles into their own respective cases - you finally set out into the city in the usual black company car, with Kyoko as your driver. She did say you could take Kharn's Marauder to the date, but it's not exactly discreet, is it?

"I don't see it," Kyoko frowned then, clearly not minding the fact that even the car's grill had skulls engraved on them. "I mean, it's a pretty nice car! The windows're heavily tinted, too, how can you get more discreet than that?"

You waved off her objections and got into the NORMAL company car, a 2014 Chrysler 300 painted black and with NO SKULLS anywhere. Yes. Perfect.

"These things are usually driven by Sicilian drug lords, though?"

It's normal enough!

[1/2]

Anyway. With Kyoko on the wheel, you find yourself being driven out of the city, out of Mitakihara. ...Huh, did Kyoko get lost or something? Maybe she missed a turn or somewhat?

"What? 'Course I didn't! I know where to go!" Kyoko frowns at you from the rear view mirror as she turns into what looks like the freeway out of Mitakihara. "What, were you expecting some kinda dinner in some fancy restaurant or something?"

...Well, isn't that how it usually goes? Going into some posh place where the prices're unlisted and the dish names unpronounceable?

"Actually, you're not that far off!" The red-haired girl laughs at this. "Midori-chan was lookin' for that kinda place for reservations, until she asked Mami-chan for advice. And she knows how you HATE that kinda place. So this is sorta special. Not your typical kinda date."

It's here that she chuckles. "Mami-chan wanted to make sure that you get a bit of alone time, too. Away from the city, away from work, all that stuff." Kyoko sniggers here, before checking the rear view mirror again. "Hah. Gotta try harder if you wanna tail me, cat..." She murmurs under her breath, a fang poking through her grin.

How do you react?

The phone clattered to the ground, shattering into a dozen pieces. Strauss could see her hand shaking, stiff and frozen in position, but her grip gone. Her breath roared through her nostrils.

Betrayed.

It was the one thing that she had never factored into her calculations. All of her life's work, gone in the blink of an eye. Every sacrifice - every ounce of blood, sweat and tears - wasted. For what? One worthless, quivering girl? The wretch could barely muster enough nerve to form a complete sentence when she arrived. Strauss had made her strong. Physically, mentally, every part of her had been molded into the perfect killing machine.

An assistant had once referred to the procedure as 'deus ex machina' - god from a machine. She wasn't quite a god, the Doctor had to admit. She still bled, as mortals did. She could still be killed. But it was a start. Now, that cowardly, idiotic failed experiment that called herself a 'doctor' had her. The imbecile that could barely even speak German after all their years together. Strauss closed her eyes and took a moment to compose herself.

"Na schön," she muttered under her breath as she clasped her hands together. "Zen I dearly hope zat you vill be able to live vis ze conseqvences of your actions, Oberhaupt Direktorin."

The Doctor took a deep breath as she sat down at her desk. It was a nice desk. Big and mahogany, with her name plate on the front and everything. She would miss that desk. Her office was as big as she'd always wanted. There were book shelves filled with medical science books, filing cabinets filled with her own research papers, even a few potted plants that she'd taken a liking to. Every doctor's office needed a fern, and maybe one of those little waterfall fountains with the tiny fishing men. Display cases along the walls showed off her collection of antique surgical equipment. Her favourite was the hand-cranked skull saw. She'd even let Valnikov play with it on the odd occassion. After she... opened up more, the girl would cackle madly as she spun the crank as fast as she could, making "BRANANANANA!" noises like a chainsaw. Strauss was somewhat disappointed that she'd never gotten around to letting the child try it out for real.

"Sorne, get in here!" The Doctor called out to her Head of Security over her intercom.

After a hurried, nervous "Jawohl, Doktorin." from the other end, Strauss leaned back in her chair, then took off her glasses to rub her tired eyes. A heavenly, comfortably leather chair with a headrest at just the right height. She'd never found another quite like it, no matter how hard she'd looked. It would probably have to go, too. As she waited for her security officer to arrive, Strauss bent under her desk, grunting and straining as she pulled her computer onto her lap. She disassembled it with nimble fingers - a well-practiced skill - and had the hard drive removed and placed in her cape's pocket by the time she heard the first knock on her door.

"Herein!" Strauss shouted, shoving the computer back in its place.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Exile of Doctor Strauss archivalfag 11/30/13(Sat)12:28 No.28579683

A thin girl wearing a green padded vest of a security officer stepped into the room, thumping a fist over her chest as she stood at attention. The entire right side of her body was scarred, mangled and burned, her right eye a solid sphere of white. Long, jet black hair grew from only one side of her disfigured head. Her name was Captain Eliza Thorne, one of the Doctor's very first test subjects - with the scars to show for it. Strauss replaced her glasses and leaned over her desk, rhythmically tapping a pen as her gaze fixed on the Head of Security.

"Ekaterina Valnikov has been kidnapped," she said, dead-pan. "How vas ze Culexus able to infiltrate ze buildink? I find it hard to believe zat she had proper ausorization, hm?"

"Er, Doktorin," the girl stammered, struggling to keep her composure. At least this one knew how to properly address her superior in German. That managed to set her on a level above Madaraki on the competence scale. "It seems that the Culexus, Malal, was in posession of an ID badge. The guards didn't believe it was suspicious."

Strauss tapped the pen at an ever so slightly quicker pace. "An ID badge," the Doctor's face twitched subtly as she repeated the phrase. "Und did zis ID badge belonk to her?"

"N-no, Doktorin," Thorne responded, now visibly shaking as she stood at attention. "We were unable to find out who it belonged to. It, erm, was worn backward, Doktorin."

"Vorn... BACKVARD?!" Strauss shouted as she slammed a fist into the desk. "YOU HAVE ALLOWED MY LIFE'S VORK TO BE STOLEN FROM UNDER OUR NOSES BECAUSE ZE CULEXUS VORE A BACKVARD ID BADGE?! VHAT IS ZE POINT OF AN ID BADGE IF YOU DUMMKOPFS NEVER CHECK ZEM?! YOUR MEN ARE AVARE ZAT VE DO NOT EVEN HAVE ANY CULEXUS ON STAFF, JA?!"

The Doctor held her head in her hands, nearly ripping out her hair as she fumed. The security officer was close to tears as she apologized over and over, still at attention. It had never been wise to upset the Doctor. Captain Thorne knew that better than anyone else. Which was why it surprised her immensely - and terrified her on an entirely new level - when Strauss finally looked up, looking calm and composed as ever.

"Tell your best men to pack my sinks," Strauss instructed as she rose from her seat. She slapped her pen against her hand as she circled the security officer, dictating her orders. "I vant everysink in mein office on a plane to storage facility six-two-six visin two hours - write zis down if you must. Vunce zis is done, I vant all lines of communication vis ze outside vorld severed. Everysink. Phone lines, cell towers, internet, post office, carrier pigeon, ze vorks. Find me vhen all of zis is complete. In ze mean time... I have cleanink to do."

"D-Doktorin, but that would mean-"

Strauss stared at the shivering girl over the tops of her round glasses.

"Protocol Ten vill commence in six hours."

Strauss stared over a crowd of a dozen nervous men and women in sterile, white labcoats in the dank, green-tinged observatory lab. The Doctor was flanked by a pair of stone-faced men with assault rifles casually slung over their shoulders. The scientists were the best and brightest that Strauss could find - or at least those smart enough to abide by proper security protocols. Each and every one of them looked utterly terrified as the Doctor stepped up to a makeshift podium made from an up-ended examination table and cleared her throat.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Exile of Doctor Strauss archivalfag 11/30/13(Sat)12:30 No.28579714

"Good afternoon, ladies und gentlemen," Strauss began, as if no different from a routine meeting. "As many of you have no doubt heard, zere have been some changes in ze management of ze Sirteens. Naturally, zis means zat many of you vill, unfortunately, be out of vork. It has been an immense pleasure to vork vis each and every vun of you, und I can say from ze bottom of mein heart, it vill be sad to see you all go-"

"D-Doctor, please--!"

A bang rang out as the man's body crumpled to the floor.

"VOULD ANYVUN ELSE CARE TO INTERRUPT MEIN HEARTFELT FAREVELL SPEECH?!"

Strauss' glare swept over the room, along with the smoking barrel of her pistol. Satisfied that no one else would dare interject again, she holstered the weapon and continued.

"AS I VAS SAYINK. I vill alvays look back fondly at ze many memories ve have made togezer. Like ze time ve accidentally locked Annabelle in ze rhinoceros cage over night!" The Doctor laughed with a twinkle in her eyes. "Or- Or who could ever forget ze first time zat Doktor Cheong forgot to disengage Butterfingers' stimulant injector ven ze interns vere cleaning his cell! Or ze second time! Or ze sird time! It alvays makes me laugh! Vhat fun ve had!"

"I sink... Vhat I am tryink to say here is... Each of you has a very special place in mein heart zat no vun else could ever replace," Strauss said as she placed both hands over heart in an uncharacteristically delicate gesture. She then turned around to address her guards, waving a finger in the air in a circular motion.

"Kill zem."

Half an hour left. Strauss snapped her golden pocket watch shut and grinned. It wasn't her usual maddened, shark-toothed smile; it was closer to a snarl than anything else. She had been taught a valuable lesson regarding her own fallibility. She had been blinded by her own success. Everything had gone far too well for her plans to continue unchallenged. But, there would be plenty of time for revenge. Emma Strauss was a creature of patience.

All that was left of her office now was a barren desk, empty shelves and single red rotary phone sitting on the Doctor's lap. In just a few more hours, someone would charge into the building, hoping to capture the legendary Doctor Strauss. Instead, all they would find would be the broken husk of what was once Varrigan City and a cruel reminder of what had been allowed to pass there.

A sharp knock at the door caught Strauss' attention just as she was about to doze off in her chair. A moment later, Thorne stepped into the office, saluting with a scarred, mangled hand before standing at attention.

"Doktorin, the preparations are complete," she stated. "Your helicopter is fueled and ready to take off. The men stand ready to carry out Protocol Ten."

Strauss nodded solemnly. There was only one final order of business that remained.

"I vill be alonk shortly," the Doctor responded, waving the girl off. "If you vouldn't mind, I vould like a few minutes alone to... say good bye."

Thorne nodded, amazed at the uncharacteristically sentimental display, then stepped back out of the room.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Exile of Doctor Strauss archivalfag 11/30/13(Sat)12:33 No.28579758

The Doctor took a final, deep breath as she lifted the bright red phone off of its reciever. Long ago, before Strauss herself had taken up residence in the city, a hotline had been built. It led from the Horzine Biotech headquarters directly to the Warmaster's office onboard the Rafflesia, in case some emergency required her attention while she was away. Now, with preparations for Protocol Ten underway, it was the sole means of communicating with the outside world from within Varrigan City.

Everything had to be timed perfectly. Strauss had waited until the Rafflesia was far enough away that they could not possibly reach the city in time to stop the coming purgation. With any luck, Chief Director Madaraki would still be busy celebrating the fall of Doctor Emma Strauss. It seemed unlikely that anyone had even set foot in her office yet. It was perfect.

The phone rang once. Twice. Three times, before Strauss' own pre-recorded message greeted her, followed by a long beep.

"Good evening, Oberhaupt Direkt-" Strauss stopped to compose herself, snickering. "Entschuldigung, CHIEF DIRECTOR Madaraki. I vould first like to congratulate you on your ill-gotten promotion, you disgutink abomination. Very vell done, bravo, I couldn't have done it better myself. Secondly - und I do hope you are still listenink, because zis is important - I vould like to pass on my sincerest regrets for vhat vill soon come to pass. By ze time you hear zis message, Protocol Ten vill have been carried out, und every man, voman, und child in ze city of Varrigan vill likely be dead. I believe ze city has a population of... seven hundred sousand? I sink zat is right, check mein computer if you vould like to know ze exact number. I'm sure zat you have ze passvord by now."

"Zeir blood vill be on your hands, Madaraki," she continued, twirling the phoneline around her finger. "Every night you vill lie avake in bed, sinking of ze mistakes you made zis day, sinking of every life lost because you just had to steal vun, measly little fraulein. You vill tell yourself zat zey vere just ze dregs of society, zat of all zem vere nosink more zan punks und gangsters. Nein, zose vill probably be ze vuns zat survive. It is ze innocents, ze weak und ze children zat vill die first."

"Hundreds of sousands for vun life. Zis is ze price of your 'mercy'," Strauss hissed. "Auf Wiedersehen, you vile creature. I hope it vas vorse it."

With her grim message delivered, the Doctor hung up the phone and placed it on her desk. Taking up her cane, Strauss hobbled to the doorway and looked back into the office one final time. She remembered how excited she was the first time she saw it. Finally, after all her hard work, getting a big, new office. For once, there was actually enough room to put things on display, to show off a little. Now it was gone.

Strauss stepped into the hall, flanked by Thorne as she slowly hobbled down the green-tinged halls of the Horzine Biotech headquarters. It felt so recent that she'd gotten upset at the builders for mistakenly ordering green-tinted fluorescent bulbs. As time went on, she'd come to enjoy it, however. Coupled with the ever-present sterile scents of sanitizer and cleaning products, it gave the building a certain sinister air that made it so endearing.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Exile of Doctor Strauss Part 1 archivalfag 11/30/13(Sat)12:36 No.28579800

The ceiling tiles had been converted to transparent grates ever since one of the Doctor's failed experiments had escaped and taken up residence the vents and ceiling spaces. For months, staff would occasionally disappear when left alone in the halls for too long and complain about a scratching sound behind the walls. In the end, they found a heap of skeletons stashed in a forgotten maintence corridor, once the creature had finally accumulated enough grief to turn into a witch. Much of the staff would find themselves having panic attacks at the mere sight of any spiders following that particular incident - which provided the Doctor with some interesting material come April Fool's.

Enormous glass windows decorated the walls, showing off the interiors of break rooms and offices. Strauss was frightening - some might have even called her a monster - but even she wasn't above joking around and discussing projects with her staff over a cup of coffee.

"Doktorin," Thorne asked, bending down to look at the Doctor's face, "are you okay?"

"Ja, ja," Strauss waved her off. "I am fine. Ze- Ze cleanink supplies, ze smell makes mein eyes vater. It's nosink."

The security officer knew better than to press any further. The two walked together through the halls in silence for some time. Every now and then, the sound of marching feet or the cry of some experiment echoed through the narrow halls. Strauss had already spent her final hours in the building saying good bye to each of Thorne's 'sisters'; something which the security officer was fortunately not present for.

Only ten minutes remained by the time they stepped out onto the tarmac. There, an idling private helicopter awaited the Doctor with its loading ramp down. The sky was painted in colours of orange and grey as evening began to settle in over Varrigan City. Everywhere she looked, crewmen ran to and fro, tending to a bevy of waiting Apache gunships and Chinook transports parked along the edge of the airstrip.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Exile of Doctor Strauss Part 1 archivalfag 11/30/13(Sat)12:37 No.28579814

Strauss made a single, slight nod of resignation as she looked up at the helicopter.

"Vell, Sorne," she muttered, turning to the other girl and stretching out a hand, "it has been a pleasure vorking vis you."

The scarred security officer blinked, taken aback by the sudden act of respect, then took the Doctor's hand and shook it.

"It has been an honour, Doktorin."

Giving Thorne a final pat on the shouler, Strauss stepped up to the helicopter and began to clamber in. After a few moments of struggle, due mostly in part to her bad back, she took her seat as the pilot handed her a clunky headset. The Doctor tapped the microphone twice as the chopper began to lift off.

"Testink, testink," she muttered. "Zis is on?"

The pilot responded with a silent thumbs up.

"Ah, guten Abend, everyvun!" She called out. "Protocol Ten vill now commence! Initiate phase vun!"

Peering out the window, Strauss watched intently as a group of five Apaches took off. The first phase of Protocol Ten was simple: destroy every bridge off of Jefferson Island and burn the harbour. Every one of the pilots had been run through strenuous background checks and training to ensure that they were able to carry out their sordid task. Her own helicopter was just starting to scratch five thousand feet when a series of explosions rocked the city. Smoke and flame wafted upward from each possible point of egress. None could be allowed to escape.

But that wasn't all.

The Doctor watched as the Apaches turned back toward the headquarters, beginning their second attack run. The transports- along with most of the airstrip - disappeared into a blossoming garden of fire as the attack helicopters swooped overhead. Strauss could swear that she could even pick out the tiny figure of Thorne staring up at her. She almost felt bad about the whole affair. Almost.

"Phase one complete," said a voice over the radio, "standing by."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Exile of Doctor Strauss Part 1 END archivalfag 11/30/13(Sat)12:39 No.28579844
File: 1385833192623.jpg-(63 KB, 225x340, SEATBELTS, EVERYVUN!.jpg)

Strauss chuckled as her gaze shifted just in time to see the red neon sign of the Blood God's Arena come crashing down. She had always hated that awful thing.

"Initiate phase two!"

Assuming the men on the ground were still willing to do their jobs, they would be fortifying the main building. They had all been told that Protocol Ten would entail the systematic destruction of the city. Scorched Earth policy, and all that. Instead, it was quite the opposite - at least to Doctor Strauss. Even from her vantage point, Strauss could hear it beginning. Horrid, animal screams and roars emanated from the Horzine building as each and every one of her hundreds of experiments was simultaneously released from captivity.

It took only a few seconds before she saw the first doors swing open as people began to stampede out of the building. Some of the faster creatures were already on top of them, tearing hapless victims limb from limb. One or two would get shot down, only for something bigger and stronger to emerge from the bowels of the building.

"Ready to go, ma'am?" The pilot asked.

Strauss was silent for a moment, lost in the sight of her creations finally set loose. There was a certain child-like rush to it, like building an enormous tower out of blocks, only to finally smash it to pieces.

"Ja," she mumbled, still unable to pry her gaze away from the destruction. "Take us avay."

Almost in the same moment as she had finished speaking, an explosion tore through one of the upper floors of the building, carrying away several black specks that may have been people. Strauss watched, a satisfied, toothy grin plastered to her face. Her revenge hadn't been delivered just yet, but it was a start. She had gone out with a proper bang and brought down an entire city with her. For the time being, she would be satisfied.

So began the exile of Doctor Strauss.

INTRODUCTION
Long time ago, it had been written, that the one who knows his enemy, as well as himself, needs not fight a hundred battles. While I don't intend to disagree with the great man who wrote so at all, it's vital to understand, that his point stands in the realm of pure logic.

It does not, and was never meant to, account for the battles that must be fought. It doesn't consider that choosing morality, or emotion, even impulsive actions, rather than calculating outcomes coldly, may often be the right path. Both Magical Girls and Witches are definitely beings born out of passion. And, what‘s more, they were brought to existence for the exact purpose of avoiding that chilling, hopeless world, that terminal station of reason.

A Witch is all that‘s left once we leave reason behind. We have the terrible fortune of having to deal with mystical elements, which we don't truly understand, on daily basis. It seems, that everytime you try to establish a rule followed by all Witches, in order to gain advantage, you are eventually faced with one who throughly breaks it.

I have thought that Witches have no control, and then I've met the martial artist Witch.
I have doubted their wits, and bit the substitute hook, line, and sinker.
I have used to consider witches mere things that just happen to contain some leftover thoughts, believed that the writings in their world are something like shadows of their past, and that I am putting them out of their misery, only to be begged by a teary-eyed witch to spare her Familiars, in rather broken Japanese.

Some Witches are so fragile in what they are, that their nature changes under one's hand, and some are so strong within their world, that they can just do and be whatever they decide on, whenever.

An Incubator would add, that this shifty unreliability and imperfection is the most valuable trait in humans.

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:47 No.28579954

What, then, you may ask, is the point of Witches being cataloged, and why should you read a book concerning the lore of Witches?

Even if we disregard the quote of a strategist, there is also a much simpler saying: "Knowledge is power". Have you ever considered how much weaker could the Incubator's occasional "You don't need to know" be making you? It is my personal belief, that you do, indeed, always need to know. If knowledge holds no value to you itself, let it be power to protect what you hold dear, as well as smite that which you detest, that compels you to read on.

Your learning materials are going to be mostly speculations about the internal mechanics of a Barrier, observations about certain stronger Witches that might give you the much needed edge over them, should you face the still living ones in the future, and finally, the gathered personal accounts of many girls regarding the more interesting Witches they have faced. Please, understand that the Classification of this book is E, meaning it merely must not leave the Twelfth Officio, but every operative can freely read it. This in turn means that it doesn't use anywhere near all the information available, and it most definitely won't use a single page located in the Librarium. Despite that, it will usually attempt to figure out the true state of things, using only the information that is not highly classified.

Most notably, it must not contain any firsthand accounts from the Witches or Familiars themselves, even if the author did have access to a number of these.

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:49 No.28579970

Because of that, please keep in mind, the path to understanding is twisted itself, before even attempting to unwrap the chaos that most Witches revel in. The reader may attempt to memorize the many apparently nonsencial, and, at a glance, eldritch 'rune' scripts used by Witches, which clearly don't mantain any of the basic rules of scriptwriting, fit neither for pen, nor brush. But it would be much more useful if she chose to wiew it as battle notes, an excercise in tactics. And it might be more befitting of a wise person as well - after all, what you are fighting is a girl much like you, with her own life, which must also have been lacking, otherwise she never would have made the wish. Would you pry into her mind, if she was still human?

I had been, quite uniquely as I am told, gifted with telepathy as my major power, so I've never had a choice in this matter. Someone else might find it to be an issue, though. Whether you can put this knowledge to practical use, and whether you would let pity stray your aim anyway, you will probably find, that through understanding the nature of Witches, you are coming to understand the nature of magical girls as well.

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:50 No.28579987

ON THE SOURCES OF IMAGERY
There is no single point that the contents of a Barrier would come from. If you would have believed a Barrier to just be the projection of a girl's mind, twisted with a certain complicated pattern every time, which is a common misconception, simple observation proves that wrong.

A great example of this are the writings from arcane texts found in many barriers. Obviously, many Magical Girls of the Twelfth have memorized passages from the Necronomicon or the Tabula Smaragdina, so it would make perfect sense for these verses to find their place into their future Barrier, if they held them in high regard. But, take Goethe's theatrical novel, Faust, which happens to be the most common of these texts by far. It does intristically fit into most - perhaps all – Barriers, without question. But I doubt that all of the girls that have it present in their Barrier have read it. Actually, a quick poll in the Central Archive had proven that only few of the Vanus working there - all of them having some degree of education in literature per the Officio tradition - have actually ever read the book, or even seen any sort of an adaptation.

Therefore, it seems that culture is a major force in a Barrier, and is completely unattached from the Witch herself. Human culture, to be exact, and mind that extraterrestrial witches come across as completely foreign and alien.

I cannot simply explain why this works the way it does to a layman, because it had requied years to learn, and the intricacies of karma and fate are the most esoteric part of all magic. Still, I will try to further illustrate this issue on the profile of one of the known Great Witches, Liliana. After all, her Barrier is simple, compared to a standard Witch, but possibly the most well known of all to us.

Kamile Ignalina [Cl. Rank: E]
Status: Active Witch

Kamile was the former Eversor Rank Leader of the Twelfth, a person of considerable skill, who had served the Officio for four years. She had turned into a Witch of her own volition, after being told about her upcoming promotion to a Warmaster, as witnessed by a significant part of the Officio staff. Using her own words, she did it "just to spite the cat and wreck his oh so important resources, because now it doesn't really matter anymore". Her Barrier had completely leveled the former Offico spaces in the catacombs under Prague's "Faust House", and she had subsequently killed more than a hundred of the Officio operatives present at the time, including some of the Vanus. Her rampage was only ended by the Warmaster's Aide issuing an order for tactical withdrawal.

This event had prompted many changes within the Officio policy and structure.

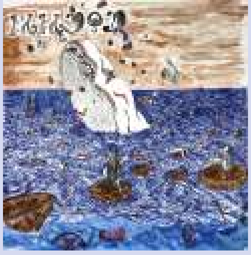
Liliana, Witch of Escapism [Cl.Rank: E]
Also known as: "The Big Fish"



Card: [Witch of Escapism, with an immature nature. Even the act of facing her foes is running away from her immature nature that wants to run away. Attack and defense have become one, and she can't tell the hunter from the hunted anymore. To run away completely is to refuse every choice.]

Engagements: 61, officially. Possibly more, held responsible for at least three unrelated squads of girls from different officios suddenly going MIA on the sea. Still active, always on the move.

Barrier: It simply consists of sea surface with oversized walnut shells. In her first appearance, she had completely flooded the place with seawater, which remained even after she was long gone. On land, her barrier can only be entered through a water source in the area, which is generally dangerous and not advisable, since you would pop up under the surface. The water is filled with various rusty junk. It also seems, that deep below, on the bottom of the sea, there is pool floor. Strangely enough, that is all, there is nothing such as a Labyrinth. This, in practice, means that Liliana will immediately attack anyone who enters her Barrier within seconds.

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:55 No.28580058

There are no sightings of her Familiars anywhere outside the barrier, and they don't seem to attempt giving witch kisses to anyone. Liliana doesn't seem to really use them for anything, try to feed them, or even acknowledge their existence at all. They aren't aggressive, either. As a band, they are apparently attempting to play Led Zeppelin's Moby Dick.

In combat, she is often described as incredibly fast for her size, and extremely tough. Despite that, she had been beaten, wounded, and chased away in the past, but always at great costs. Engaging her with any sort of power is definitely not recommended, unless you know precisely what you are doing. Tactics that made it even possible were mainly flying, great land speed, and teleportation, but they can't win the battle alone.

In the past, there were periods when scrying on Liliana would only reveal cold, empty space, suggesting she has left Earth. But she always comes back.

god damn Moby Dick.

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:56 No.28580076

Commentary:
I did not get to meet her, but miss Ignalina was very fond of Moby-Dick. She had apparently claimed that it has no place in the libraries for children, would quote it all the time, and it's no surprise to anyone that she had ended up becoming a whale herself. I will skip over the main theme, though, mostly because it would inevitably mean going into the reasons for why she did what she did, which seems to be a touchy subject around here. I have no idea myself, anyway.

The way it uses nutshells reminds me of the tradition of children sending nutshells with candles on water. This has no real meaning, kids just do it because it looks nice, and technically, it could mean anything she had associated this childhood memory with. If I had to guess, though, it's usually done at night, so not only friendship, but also loneliness , isolation, possibly even fear, would be obvious guesses. The nutshells are a good example of association, usually the really fickle part of a Barrier.

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:57 No.28580086

The pool bottom had only ever been seen, because someone fell into the water by accident - in the water, you will get eaten right away. I don't see much sense in it, but the girl who saw it says that it had appeared out of nowhere when she had looked that way.

Well, sometimes, you can do something in the Barrier that you aren't expected to do, and the whole place then has to adapt to what you did - much like if you had confronted someone with a whole new way of thought and he had to make his mind about it on spot. You can jump through a window that was only supposed to be a decoration, you can pull a rope and all the familiars just die all of sudden as if their strings were cut, something weird may happen if you hit a light switch one too many times. I have known a powerful girl, who would smash down on a witch so hard, she would often break through the floor of the Barrier, the hole leading to a completely different world before dissipating along with the Witch. These places are fragile, because they were just made, and are also incredibly dangerous.

>> ☐ Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)12:59 No.28580102

The penguins are surprisingly the most interesting part of it all. You see, much like Miss Ignalina had, as she said, never actually seen a real whale – which is why she doesn't dive and jump like one at all and just jumps out of the water like a piranha and bites everything in her path – she had propably never seen a penguin either. She had better things to do than visiting a ZOO, and considering her service history, she may well have been that one kind of a Magical Girl who had lived in the twisted world for so long, she had lost the entire notion of correctness. She had relied on her instinct a lot, and you may remember that she had described the way she fights Witches as "Kind of like doing what a smart animal does when it has to attack a human."

>> ☐ The Riddle of Witch Flesh Ratmie 11/30/13(Sat)13:01 No.28580123

Her motherland, Lithuania, is far from the South Pole, so unless she was a passionate Linux user or so, adding a penguin through association is ridiculous. On the other hand, penguins do carry a general meaning, and thus it could be a case of an aforementioned cultural pattern. They are being used by many present day literary authors of various backgrounds and foci, as representatives for higher planes and forces. They also often represent the human unconscious and dreams, both of which fit right within a Moby-Dick Barrier.

It gets a lot more interesting, though: There is no proper source for this meaning. The history of its usage is less than a hundred years old, because nobody has previously really cared about penguins, and older meanings seem to outright contradict it. All those writers are adding them, because they themselves feel like they fit. The meaning had historically first appeared in quite the obscure books, but ended up being referred to by even the most famous of psychologists. Sometime before the World War II, all the smart people had suddenly started dreaming about penguins. So, penguins are, in this sense, definitely a part of human culture now, but their presence in it is hard to justify by logic, and what they represent is the part of humanity which can't be properly explained, either.

Are you seeing the patterns yet? Witches are thoroughly insane, but their insanity is the one of man. You must understand this. Fighting them and fighting humans or other Magical Girls is the exact same thing. If you ever come across wars, or inter - Officio conflicts, the next time you kill someone whose language and customs you don't comprehend, give it a thought.

Well, this is wrong, since the quote is "If you know your enemy, and know yourself, you need not fear the RESULT of a hundred battles."
Also, >It doesn't consider that choosing morality, or emotion, even impulsive actions, rather than calculating outcomes coldly, may often be the right path. is pretty much regarded as incorrect by many of the commentators on the work, since morality, and taking moral action, nearly takes up an entire chapter on how a general should prosecute a war and when a king should initiate one.
As for the right path being often chosen based on emotions, that really does not appear to be the case, and the commentators explained why, as it usually led to defeat and failure.

Culture playing a part in a Witch's powers and Barrier is an interesting idea, but I have to question a lot of the ancillary ideas tossed about by this Misaki.

I don't think that's necessarily true - certainly it could be argued that Ghengis Khan and his horde did more damage/was worse than Hitler, but his not exactly being contemporary should seriously hurt his chances at winning. Same for Cao Cao although at least he has a lot of literature about his person around. Remember, this isn't a 'person I'd least like to meet' or anything asking for a rational or reasoned answer, but 'least likeable' which is more emotional - would your average Chinese person really have Cao Cao or ol' Khan as their least liked person?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/01/13(Sun)06:30 No.28595050

A tail? Cat? Someone's been following you?

Your eyes narrow at this, and it's here that the dots connect themselves.

"NECO." You growl this while turning back to glare at the road from the rear window. The otherwise deserted highway sporting only a few other fellow motorists - a couple of folks on motorcycles, and an old Volkswagen Beetle chugging along.

Ngh. You shouldn't have listened to Kyoko earlier. You should've just snuck the Golden Desert Eagle into your inventory and be done with it. Sure, you could probably gamble with your Shield, see what it'd bring you - but without the familiar weight of the shoulder holster against your side, you feel naked, more than ever.

An advanced...naked. Or something.

You don't feel all that comfortable without the Golden Desert Eagle in easy reach, is what you're getting at.

Ah, no, it's just a game a play whenever I'm drivin', I pretend I'm getting tailed by whoever I keep seeing on the rear view mirror. Never really actually gets to be a tail, though, unless I'm onna assignment."

It's here that she turns towards you briefly, before bursting out laughing again. "Holy shit, Murderface! Look at you! It's like you're gonna have diarrhea anytime soon!" She slaps the side of her steering wheel. "I'm drivin' you to a date, not your execution! Jeez, just turn it down a coupla notches!"

...Gnh. Well. It's not like you want to be like this all the time, just--

"I know, I know. It helped more than it didn't. But come on, nothing's gonna happen! You and Midori-chan's just gonna have dinner and that's it! Seriously, what could go wrong?"

. . .Oh, Kyoko. You poor, naive redhead.

Fine. Alright. Where's she taking you, then?

"Mami-chan's holiday cottage!" Kyoko grins. "Apparently Mami let Midori-chan borrow it for the night just for this occassion. It's not really that far from the city, though, just a bit of a drive near the countryside. It's near a small lake and everything - o-oh, and it's got an ENTIRE bear fur rug near the fireplace! Even the head's still there, with the teeth and everything!"

Huh. A bear fur rug, huh.

"Yeah! Really warm and comfy to sleep on, since it gets really chilly up there!"

How do you react?

A holiday cottage? By a lake?

...Well, it does sound like Mami to have one of those things. She works harder than anyone you know - it'd make sense for her to have some place to retreat to, away from the city, in case the job gets too much on the nerves. You have the same kind of thing, too - just that your version is a dingy bar staffed by a large, scowling man with the world's biggest afro.

Still, it...kind of reminds you about what you saw during the seeing, earlier. A cottage in the mountains near a lake. But that's just a coincidence, right?

You have to make sure, though. Even during times like these, you can't afford to drop your guard. Not for a moment, because as Malal had so succintly put it, the people you're up against have no concept of playing fair, and a moment will be all they need.

You ask her, then, if the place is secure at all, and if so, how much? How populated are the areas around it? What are the other ways that the site can be accessed, besides the way you're taking? Any blind spots? Dammit, these are the details you need to know!

"...Whoa." Kyoko turns to you, the cheerful mood gone, replaced by a dismayed surprise. "...Is that really you, Murderface? I mean, you know, you'd have taken the hint by now. But seriously? You're goin' on full paranoia mode on your DATE?"

She shakes her head. "Well, okay. Jeez. Let me think...it's kind of out of the way, so there's no other cottages around, but it is near the road we're currently on. There's a gas station down the road from it, an' a convenience store. The lake's small and doesn't connect to anything..." It's here that she frowns at you. "Aw, hell, can you just take it easy? It's not just me that's gonna be there, you know! Kuma-tan's also going to be there, except she's not really on guard duty. If it'll get you to dial it back a bit, I'll assign her as my backup just in case. There, you happy?"

Kumatora? The newbie you trained? What's she doing there, then?

"Search me! Midori-chan's idea, though - when I drove them back here she was lugging around boxes full of papers and stuff! And they couldn't stop talking about scenes and framing and dialogue...manga stuff, I guess? But yeah, Kumatora'll help." She lets out a breath through pursed lips, creating a raspberry sound. "Man. Guard duty for a date! Career first!"

Ah, knock it off. Wasn't she at all worried about security during her dates with Sayaka?

"I was more worried with showin' her a good time!" Kyoko snaps back. "Even more in Mami's cottage, I never even thought about that kinda stuff, and--" It's here that the red-haired Eversor snaps her mouth shut, her cheeks going red as her hair.

Ah. So. She did take Sayaka here, too. And no doubt the thing with the bear fur rug was part of that experience?

"N-no comment," Kyoko manages, blushing furiously. "I ain't sayin' nothin'!"

Right. Sure. Do you need to watch out for any stains or what?

"Aw, fuck you, Murderface!"

The both of you glare at each other from the rear view mirrors, before grins slowly break over your faces. You chuckle at this, before giving the back of the driver's seat a lazy kick.

"Anyway, just relax, will ya? It's gonna be fun. Just take it easy for tonight, go back to your ol' paranoid self after." Kyoko's voice regains its cheerfulness some, but not enough to rob the seriousness in her voice. "She deserves it, you know? Midori, I mean. She couldn't stop crying during the first day of our stakeout."

Midori? What was she crying about?

"Who else? You, of course, ya maroon." Kyoko shakes her head. "And her friend, I guess. The one she lost in Siberia. Didn't tell me much, but she's holding back a lot, Murderface. Up to you if ya want to help her through that, or just let her deal with it herself."

How do you react?

...Well, of course you'll help her through it. You owe more to her than you remember, and then some. Besides, your own way of dealing with that kind of shit...well, Mami probably wouldn't be all that happy if she found Midori chasing painkillers with whiskey. It's just not done.

You were expecting Siberia to come up, to be honest. Siberia's a dodgy issue for the both of you that would need talking about sooner or later. You just didn't want to hurry the issue or pressure her into it. Some wounds need to be left to fester first before they can be lanced, that kind of thing.

"Yeah, I gotcha." Kyoko nods. "Well, so long as you're gonna be there for her, I'm good." Another sigh. "Ya know, I know she came from the Tenth, and I heard from Mami-san what she was doing when you got her, but...I don't know, Murderface. She's way too nice for this kind of job, and..." Her voice trails off into a hanging silence, one dangling over the both of you.

...And what?

"Aw, nothin'." Kyoko shakes her head after a moment. "You're my Warmaster, an' I'm not gonna tell ya how to do your job or anything like that." She glances at you from the rear view mirror. "What I am gonna tell you is that you gotta make up your mind sooner or later, too, Murderface. Are you doin' all this just because you like her too, or you're just really grateful?"

Ah.

"That's the kicker, ain't it?" Kyoko manages a laugh, here, but it sounds more forced than anything else. "I mean, if you two're just best friends an' all, and you don't think it can go beyond that, well...ya just gotta make it clear to her beforehand. If it's the opposite, make sure she knows too. But you didn't really need me to tell you that, right?"

...Yeah.

"Thought so." And it's here that the trip resumes in silence. A comfortable one, yet with some things still left unsaid.

Soon enough, the car exits the highway and turns into a rather hard dirt road, and then into a cemented driveway belonging to a cottage. At the sight of it, you let out a sigh of relief - it doesn't even look remotely similar to the one you saw during the seeing.

That was a veritable palace in itself, on a postcard-perfect background of verdant green grass and sapphire waters. This was an old-fashioned, rustic cottage - certainly modern but made to look as if purely constructed out of brick. It's...it looks charming, and would have cost anyone loads of money.

"Yeah, I couldn't believe it when I saw it, either," Kyoko seems to read your mind here as the both of you alight from the car. "Really fancy, eh? And look, it's just on top of a hill overlooking the lake - so it's got a really awesome view from its second-floor balcony." She crosses her arms behind her head. "I'm saving up for something like this myself, hahaha!"

Well. Good luck with that.

"Thanks! I got the location all picked out, too!" The red-haired Eversor grins. "It's gonna be back at Okinawa, and it's gonna be near the forest and everything, and--" It's here that she blinks. "Uh, don't tell Sayaka, alright? It's kind of a surprise."

Yeah, sure. Lips are sealed, and all that.

"Oh, Miss Matsuda!" A short, lithe form lugging a couple of boxes in its arms strides out from the cottage's front door as you approach. Kumatora, it looks like. "Miss Sakura! You're pretty early, we weren't expecting you for another hour or so!"

"Hahaha, well, I wanted to make sure Murderface here isn't late for her little appointment with Midori-chan!" Kyoko grins, before walking forward and ruffling the shorter girl's hair playfully. "Midorin still making you help her draw her porn comic, huh?"

Kharn's costume isn't completely BGS, I did make a few minor changes here and there to follow with the minor changes that Decu had made, like the skull pauldrons and the long-coat.

Malal was just Rival Schools, because that was the reference that was given and no changes were described.

Decu described Kumatora as BRS with jacket zipped up and soul gem belt buckle, so I asked him if I could make a few other minor changes and he said it was alright so long as it was still recognizable.

You 'look' cool? You're...well, that's great and all, but what does that mean? Does it mean you don't look cool in your normal getup? Your Magical Girl costume doesn't look cool at all?

"Huh?" Kumatora blinks at you, both eyes wide. "N-no! No, of course not, Miss Matsuda! I-it's just that, um, I..."

She what? What was it, then, if it wasn't that?

It's here that Kyoko cuts in. "Ah, no, Murderface, maybe ya got it wrong--"

You hold up a hand. No, it's okay. Ishikawa's a big girl, she knows what she said. You nod towards Kumatora, signaling for her to continue.

The twintailed Eversor swallows audibly, before looking to Kyoko desperately for help. All she gets from the redhead, however, is an averted gaze and a nonchalant whistle. "R-really, Miss Matsuda, I didn't mean...I..."

What? What didn't she mean? You don't know, she said it. First she said your costume isn't cool, now she's saying it isn't?

"M-Miss Matsuda..." Kumatora seems to be shivering slightly now, her face pale, the boxes she's holding quivering the slightest bit.

You stare at her for a few moments more, before Kyoko pokes at your side again. "Oi. You're gonna make her cry, you know."

"W-what...? No, I wasn't going to--!" Kumatora protests, before suddenly realizing what you've been up to. She pouts at you. "A-aah, that's mean, Miss Matsuda! And you too, Miss Kyoko!"

You shake your head, allowing yourself a small smile. You were only kidding, but you worry about Kumatora sometimes. She may fold under questioning, if she gets captured by a rival Officio or something.

"Of course I won't, Miss Matsuda! I still remember what you taught me, after all!" It's here that Kumatora beams again, getting her enthusiasm back. "No witnesses!"

Kyouko guffaws at this. "Hah! Classic Murderface!"

Well, anyway. Where's Midori, then? And what's up with the boxes?

"Ah, Midori-san is getting ready inside, Miss Matsuda!" It's here that she gives the boxes she's carrying a shake. "And these are...well, to be honest, these are Midori-san's stuff, actually. She told me not to look inside, but, um, I couldn't resist, and--"

And?

"I do think they're unpublished volumes, Miss Matsuda. Of Midori-san's work. Manuscripts and stuff - they just need to be sent in to the publisher. Print-ready stuff."

Huh. But why bring them here...?

Kumatora shrugs. "Midori-san really didn't say, Miss Matsuda, I--"

Kyoko nudges you again, before gesturing towards the cottage again. "Maybe you can ask her yourself, then."

You look up from Kumatora, and see...well, Midori, come out from the cottage herself.

In a way you've never seen her before.

She's wearing a rather form-fitting black dress, the figure-flattering sort you've seen Iori wear too, during the gala. Her hair let down and teased into silky straightness, flowing down her back in glossy green waves. The slightest bit of makeup accentuating her features.

Is...is that what she looks like? Are Callidus supposed to be this pretty? You've never seen her wear anything else other than her usual black hoodie and stuff, so...

As if reading your mind, Midori smiles at you. A nervous smile, but trying its best not to look the bit.

"Sempai," She says, her voice small, quiet, sounding just as shy as she felt.

How do you react?

Fran is what happens when you don't clean out your bellybutton. It starts out as lint, but then the next thing you know it's crawling on the ceiling in the dead of night, stealing snacks and scurrying to the dark under your couch as the lights flick on.

But then it grows. It can no longer subsist on the leftover food scraps littering the kitchen of some lob. It needs more. So some family pets go missing. Not for food, no. This is a greater Purpose.

The Fran integrates itself into the base of the spine and assumes direct control of the neighbor's dog. No more yapping. No more barking. Only cold, soulless obedience from the k9 host.

Using the mutt, fresh bodies are sniffed out. Parts. String is woven from stray hairs and the webs of unlucky spiders. This string will be used to stitch the found parts into a new form for the Fran to inhabit.

And inhabit she does. The Fran forces itself into the patchwork corpse, filling, twisting, consuming every last morsel taking up space in its new space.

But she's not done yet. She's only just begun. You see, it needs new parts. Optimal parts. How can you expect her to walk with one leg longer than the other? You can't expect that. It's inhuman to do such a thing.

She needs more. She will get more. And that's why you clean your bellybutton really good.

You find yourself unable to talk for a while. It's...a strange thing, really, when you think about it. You've always been of the opinion that Tomoe Mami was invincible - both in the pancake-making category as well as being a looker. No one else had really impressed you in that kind of way, not that you look at that kind of thing to be impressed with in any case. But Midori...well, suffice to say even you got bowled over by it.

Well, who wouldn't? She was looking forward to having dinner with you, enough that she went through all of this trouble to look good. You, who even had the audacity of thinking of barging in here with only a jacket over your Magical Girl costume.

Idiot, you could almost hear Sayaka shriek. You fucking idiot, Murderface!

"You look...nice," You finally manage to croak out, inwardly horrified at the awkward tremor in your voice. Feeling as underdressed as you could possibly be, at the same time unable to shake off the feeling that you're going to ruin this night somehow. That everything wrong that you've done would actually come crashing down on you at this very moment, ruining the night that Midori - one of the few people you haven't disappointed yet - had obviously been planning for quite a while, and had been working hard to pull it off.

No. No. Don't think that. Just...get through this night without thinking that. It'll go perfectly. Nothing will happen. Midori deserves this.

You're just not sure if you deserve it, too.

"R-really, sempai?" Midori replies shyly a moment later, her cheeks going pink. "I...Kuma-tan said it might be a bit too much for a date--er, a dinner and all, but..."

Well. Er. It...it is a bit formal, you venture out. You were expecting a dinner somewhere in the Mall district, or something. If you'd known it was going to be like this, then maybe you could've dressed a bit better.

"O-oh, no, sempai!" Midori shakes her head. "You look pretty good, too...! I mean, well..." It's here that the green-haired Callidus seems to regain a bit of her own composure. "It's not as cool as your costume, but it's a nice kind of different."

Huh. Well. That's good to know, you guess.

Just before things get awkward again, though, it's here that Midori seems to relent to her instincts - stepping forward and taking your arm. "I-in any case, sempai! Let's go and have dinner, quickly! Before...before I lose my nerve and everything!" She smiles at you, a brittle smile, clearly nervous and not at all confident about this - but desperately trying to be.

You allow yourself to be dragged. But...she's not going into the house? Isn't that where the dinner's supposed to be?

"Oh, well, we're doing it outside today, sempai!" Midori's grip on your arm is warm, smooth and impossibly soft. Reminding you of how you'd been relaxing earlier in your own quarters. "The view's much better, too!"

Ah. Well. You'll take her word for it, then.

A few moments' walking brings the both of you behind the cottage - and in its yard facing the lake. There's an expensive-looking dining table set placed right there, in the middle of it, with a spread that wouldn't look out of place in yet another expensive restaurant. The table set for two people.

And she's right, you think as the both of you take your seats. The view is pretty good, with the moon above shining down on the lake, making the ripples across the surface glitter with light.

"I got us Italian cuisine, sempai," Midori murmurs from across the table. "Is...is that okay?"

Italian? It's...well, you don't really eat much besides pancakes, so...

You shake your head. No. No, it'll be fine. Whatever it is, it's food. You're sure it'll be delicious.

"Ah. Well, alright, sempai." Midori smiles at you, sheepishly. "I was thinking of pancakes, too, but I thought something different would be nice once in a while."

It should be, anyway, you reply as you pull off the silver cover off your plate.

...

Spaghetti...? With meatballs apparently the size of fists. Really big meatballs! You're not sure what's the point of packing balls of meat as huge as these.

"You don't like it, sempai?" Midori looks up at you from her own plate. It seems she's gotten some rice covered in cheese and mayonnaise, with some bits of herb and peppers? What's that, omelette rice or something?

"N-no, sempai, it's Risotto..."

Ah. Right. Well. That certainly is Italian. You think.

Well, no, spaghetti's fine. You've had spaghetti before. Pretty sure you do.

Just not to this...extent. The most experience you've had with the stuff is with the instant noodle variety, with the egg noodles and the packet of chunky ketchup.

"Oh, I see." Midori smiles. "Well, I hope you like it, sempai. I, um, I made it myself."

...Huh. Really?

"I can cook other stuff besides ramen and takoyaki, you know, sempai," Midori says somewhat sullenly, although the smile on her lips tells you she's not as hurt as you thought.

Right. Well. Here goes, then.

The both of you give thanks for the food, before digging in.

...Hnh. Not...bad. The noodles are a bit soft, and the sauce a bit tangy, but...it's actually pretty good. Good spaghetti. ...Then again, all you can compare it with is the instant kind, huh?

"How is it, sempai?" Midori asks after your first couple of mouthfuls.

How do you react?

You cut one of the fist-sized meatballs in half with your knife, the two halves steaming in the cool night air as you do so. From what you can tell, it's properly cooked all the way through, and after a taste - made rather masterfully. No, you don't know the first thing about cooking, but damn if it doesn't taste good.

"You'd make a great housewife," You hear yourself say, and very nearly choke on the pasta you've been swallowing as what you said sinks in a moment later. You just have enough time to see Midori drop her fork on her plate with a loud clatter, her face going completely and utterly red before you down your glass of ice-cold coffee in an attempt not to choke to death.

The hell did you say that for?! You're not wearing your hat right now, right? You checked! You checked before leaving the goddamn Officio! It's in your Inventory!

This is all YOUR fault!

"U-um, well...if...if it's sempai..." You hear Midori murmur, and the two of you glance back at each other, you with plain disbelief and her with the same horror-filled expression that you'd been sporting mere heartbeats ago. Horror at her own self.

Silence. Painful, heavy silence.

And then--

"Ah, ahaha, I mean, j-just kidding, sempai! Hahaha!" Midori is the first to break it, flashing both a peace sign and a very forced smile, and you try to chuckle along the best as you could.

A moment of silence, and it's then that you both hunker down to eat once more, just as embarrassed as each other.

YOU'RE FUCKING IT UP, Sayaka is roaring at you right now. DON'T FUCK IT UP I SWEAR TO GOD MURDERFACE

...Quick! That...that H.A.D thing Kyoko taught you! Do it! DO IT NOW!

What do you ask her?...Wait, what the hell does the H stand for again?

I yawned and stretched my arms over my head. Security duty might not be nearly as phsically demanding as combat, but it was still exhausting; the need for constant vigilance taxes the mind and dulls the senses. It's boring, monotonous work, to the point where I'd almost rather be getting shot at instead.

"Just another forty-five minutes, Tanya. Hang in there." The short, white-haired girl walking beside me shot me a half-smile, which I returned.

"I know, Sonja. Can't wait to get out of this armor." I gave her a wry grin. "As nice and shiny-new as it is, it gets old after being shut in it for twelve hours at a time."

Sonja nodded fervently, and wrinkled her nose. "That, and I think my environmentals are acting up. It smells funny in here."

I nodded sagely. "That'll be all that chili you ate last night. Honestly, I don't know where you put it all."

The younger girl swatted my armored shoulder and, judging from the noise that emanated from my com, blew a small raspberry at me. "I can't help my metabolism. Perks of being young, I suppose.~"

It was my turn to blow the raspberry. "I've got what, three years on you? I'm not old. And you can blame the smell on that metabolism of yours, too, so I don't begrudge you it."

Sonja shrugged. "At any rate, we're not going to be in these much longer." She turned and snapped out a textbook-perfect side kick, watching appreciatively as the Cadre armor's artificial muscles bunched and flexed with her own, lending the kick vastly more power than she alone was capable of. "I do like them, though. I wonder if we'll get to keep them."

"Davin has them on a probationary basis." Linde's voice sounded in the channel. "We'll be running a few operations with them. Depending on our performance, we may be permanently redesignated as a Cadre unit."

>> ☐ Rin 12/01/13(Sun)14:02 No.28599299

>>28599274
I raised an eyebrow, a gesture I was amused to note Sonja mirroring through her transparent faceplate. "Sounds like kind of a big deal, Boss."

"It is. Warmaster Pavlovena's been making noises for some time about re-founding the Cadre, and this is her first step in actually doing so."

"So why us?" Sonja's voice was considering. I suppressed a smirk. For a fourteen-year-old, Sonja had a strong grasp on how the Officio did its internal business.

"I'm...not entirely sure," Linde hedged. "There could be any number of reasons. Let's stay focused, though, shall we? We'll have ample time to speculate on this later. For now, give me a report."

I manipulated my helmet's datalink, patching the camera feed through to the HUD Linde's implant projected across her vision. I panned the camera across my field of view. "Nothing but concrete, metal, and water out here. No sign of any sort of disturbance."

"You've made a full perimeter sweep, then?"

"Of course. All clear, nothing to report. Except one minor altercation; two of the off-duty guards in the cafeteria, but that situation resolved itself."

"How?"

I grinned. "You remember Jack?"

"That one dude who never takes his balaclava off? Facial scarring, or something?"

"That's the one. Anyway, yeah, one of the other guys apparently got into the Sar'Major's scotch, and took issue with Jack not showing his face."

"And how did that end?"

I chuckled. "Predictably. Last I saw of the poor bastard, Jack was carrying him over one shoulder off to Medbay. He should be fine, once the doc gets his shoulder back into its socket and checks for concussion when he wakes up."

Linde laughed. "I'll give him one thing - ugly mug or no, our lad Jack knows his way around a fight. He and Rev had a go in the ring the other day while you two were on patrol. She won, of course, but he put up a pretty good fight."

I grinned. "The way he's built, I'm not surprised. How did it go?"

"Well, he had reach, but she had flexibility. He managed to keep her at arm's length for a while, but she absolutely floored him when she got in close. By the time she was done with him, he couldn't see straight!"

I raised an eyebrow. "We're...still talking about fighting, right?"

Rev's distinctive laugh issued from the com. "Yeah, he wishes it wasn't just fighting. Not bloody likely."

Our collective laughter was interrupted a moment later as one of the guards used his emergency override code to break into the channel. "Freon, Bulldog. We may have a situation."

I blew out a breath. "This means we have to keep the armor on, doesn't it, Boss?"

We stood in a semicircle around Linde, watching as she rolled a small metallic cylinder in her palm.

"Tranquilizer?"

The man standing beside her, who wore the stripes of a Sergeant Major, nodded. "Each holds enough to knock a man out. We've found four of our men unconscious in the last hour, each with a dart in him. We found a fifth who'd been choked out."

Linde's eyes narrowed. "You think we've been compromised?"

The man nodded reluctantly. "It looks that way. Unless this is someone's very bad idea of a joke."

Linde smiled wryly. "I'm not laughing, Sergeant. Are you?"

The Sergeant chuckled. "I suppose not. I've already taken the precaution of having the men patrol in groups of three; hopefully, at least one will be able to report in the event of a breach."

Linde nodded, considering, then turned to us. "Rev, you and I are suiting up. Zero, Pawn, you two stay together. You're our mobile reserve and rapid reaction, such as it is, and what there is of it. Sergeant Winters, I want your men on alert. Don't make it obvious, but I want every inch of this facility searched."

Winters nodded. "And if we find the intruder?"

Linde's voice was cold and flat. "Capture if it's feasible. If not, I'd rather have them dead than escaped. See to it."
The Sergeant saluted, spun smartly on his heel, and left the room.

Rev turned to Linde. "My armor's down in the Armory for maintenance. I'll hook up with you on the outer shell once I'm suited up."

Linde nodded, and turned to go. "All right, People. Let's be about it."

Barely ten minutes passed before we got a break. Or, rather, Rev got a break.

A broken neck, to be precise.

When her med-alert went off, Linde ordered the bulkheads surrounding the Armory sealed off completely, to trap the infiltrator inside. Moments later, the three of us who were left stood outside one of the bulkheads. Sonja hit the manual override, and the three of us moved in.

Linde signalled us to split up, and for several tense minutes, the only sounds that broke our silence were murmurs of "Clear" as we moved through the sealed-off section of the facility.

We reached the room with Rev's transponder signal at roughly the same time. She lay on her stomach in the doorframe, head tilted at an impossible angle. Linde motioned Sonja forward, covering the younger girl with her battle rifle. I looked around the room for any sign of the infiltrator, but saw nothing.

Sonja bent down over Rev, before jerking back and shaking her head muzzily. She reached up to pop her helmet seal. "Getting some weird interference. My HUD's down." She bent down again to turn Rev over.

There was a ping!

The concussion grenade that had been concealed under Rev's inert body detonated in Sonja's face.

An instant later, something dropped from the ceiling and landed heavily on my shoulders, driving me to the floor. I made to get up, only to see a second grenade inches from my face. The world went white.

---

I awoke to the sound of combat. I blinked muzzily, trying to clear my eyes, and took stock of the situation. I was still face-down, precisely where I'd fallen. According to my HUD my suit wasn't compromised - it had just been the overpressure that had knocked me out. I rolled over onto my side. I blinked.

"Jack?"

The masked guard didn't answer - he was wholly focused on the armored Puella Magi who was doing her level best to put him down.

Jack was good. He was very, very good, trained and experienced to the pinnacle of combat skill.

But Linde was riding the Tick.

Jack was wholly on the defensive, evading and redirecting blows as best he could. Linde, for her part, refused to let go of him - she stayed in close, strike after perfectly-executed strike chaining together in an endless flurry of blows. It was like watching a beautiful, violent dance, a waltz of flashing hands and sweeping legs, as Linde slowly pushed Jack further and further back. With one final palm-strike, she blew completely through his defense, hammering a blow into his diaphragm and slamming him against the wall. In an instant, she had her combat knife to his throat. He let his hands drop into a nonthreatening stance.

Linde's voice was clipped and without inflection - the voice of someone who was deliberately slowing down their speech from the hyperacceleration of the Tick. "You didn't fight like that the other day."

The man chuckled. "Only an idiot shows his skill before he needs it."

"Take your mask off." He did so, revealing a not-unattractive face. "Pawn, run a search through the Officio database. I want to know this asshole's name, where he's from, who he works for."

I activated my helmet's camera, and ran the resulting photo through the Officio's standing database on known security, mercenary, and military personnel. Moments later, a match came up.

"Kamijou Kyousuke, of Militaires Sans Frontières. Nothing too notable...." My eyes widened. "Until recently. He was mixed up in that clusterfuck at that idol's concert, working with the Ninth's Warmaster."

Kamijou smiled tightly. "You know I can't tell you that."

Linde Van Dyke's eyes were hard, and her voice soft. "I know you don't want to tell me that. Not yet. Now, normally this is the part where I would call up my boss and have him start digging. But you've hurt my girls, Mister Kamijou."

Linde's combat knife inched its way down until its point rested against his stomach.
"I think I'm inclined to do a bit of...digging...myself, if you prove uncooperative. So I suggest you start talking, Mister Kamijou. I am not a patient woman."

Yo, my first time here, i hope it's not too bad.

As Sally stumbled into the church to evade her pursuers she didn't exactly expect the doors to shut with a CLICK just -that- ominous. Neither did she expect it to actually stop them. Then again, the immediate cessation of all outside noises like traffic, yelling, agonized screams, police sirens and the intermittent chatter of machineguns should have clued her in that something wasn't all vertical here.

But then again she was new on the job, who could blame her?

So Sally slowly stepped back from the huge wooden doors she just had slammed shut with her magically enhanced strength timidly, carefully, afraid that something she would do, anything, could shatter the illusion.

Instead, she heard a bit of a cough from behind her. Whirling around she brought her fists up, ready to whip out a punch that could disintegrate flesh and bone at five meters' distance-

And only saw an old man with white hair, a five o'clock shade and a flatcap look back at her over the backrest of a pew, his face formed to a smiling sort of grimace. Sheepishly, she lowered her hands again, then stepped towards him as silently as she could. He sort of did look like a religious man; one had to be to show up at four in the morning at a church in the middle of the inner city.

The church was big and neo-gothic. And dark. And spooky. A few lamps at the altar lit the huge plain cross put up behind it.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/01/13(Sun)14:15 No.28599509

This caught me totally by surprise, I'm actually feeling a little dizzy right now.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/01/13(Sun)14:16 No.28599525

>>28599505

She silently sat down next to the man while he slid over a fair bit to give her some breathing room. Silence followed, since that seemed to be a theme in this church.

He was holding a thick, black bible. The book was worn and opened at the very end; he looks like he was reading before she entered. At her curious gaze he shut the book, holding it up for her to see. The painted-on gold cross faded and dull.

"I just wanted to take another look at what this funny old book says, haven't done so in a long, long time. Thought I'd start at the back, this part called The Apocalypse, that way I'd already know how the story ends, y'see?" he smirked at her in a voice somewhere between kindly old grandfather and blender full of gravel.

Her nervous giggle didn't exactly make the situation any more comfortable for either of them.

The old man shifted in his seat a bit and coughed into his fist. He glanced away to the side.

"So, I assume you didn't exactly come here to pray, did you?"

"N-no sir. You could say I am, um, seeking shelter? Y-yes, that fits." Sally mumbled while sheepishly scratching her cheek. Well, she WAS sort of sitting in a church while sort of wearing a full suit of sort of cobbled-together combat armor. Worst part was that it was her summoned costume and just dismissing it would raise another batch of questions she wasn't very comfortable with answering right now.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/01/13(Sun)14:17 No.28599548

He hummed like a subwoofer and then nodded. "Just as well. This is a place of safety and salvation for a reason."

He gave her a sidelong glance and a smirk. "Though I suppose little rascals like you getting into trouble should rather ask their parents for help instead of their local priest."

She had to laugh, a little. If only her problems were still in that size category. Involuntarily, she felt herself relax a bit. At least this place seemed to be safe, for the moment.

"...well?" The old man grumbled towards her. Her head jerked up again and regarded his curious expression.

"Oh come on, you wouldn't have taken the spot next to the old stranger if you wouldn't have something on your heart you wanted to let loose. Go on, I'll listen."

What was this guy thinking of himself, asking questions like that? And why was he right? Well, the reason for the latter was probably that Sally had been caught up in a treadmill of assignment after assignment for over three months now with not a single day off. And that she had seen things, well. The less said the better. And of course, nobody cared enough to give her a few minutes of sit-down and talk-out. So yeah, this was probably a pretty good chance to get a bit of weight off her chest. Maybe later on when nobody was looking she could go AWOL for a day or two and blame it on the fighting this night, call it MIA. Yeah, this sounded like a good plan.

If the incubator didn't mind-probe her to find out if she told the truth. Again.

Eh, she didn't care by this point. She needed a break and she was going to get it. A deep breath and a sigh later, she began talking.

"You're a religious person, aren't you?" was the first thing she said.

"Oh yes. Moreso than anyone else I might say." The old man smiled.

"Well, did you ever have, like, a crisis of faith?" She rested her elbows on her knees, then bent over and rested her head on her hands.

"Certainly, I do believe sooner or later anyone alive and living will have one."

She gave him a glance with narrowed eyes in return. "No, I mean more than just the usual. You ever have that sort of feeling that, you know, the one you've always been told about is so great and will save you when you fall and always fights for you, well, isn't all they're cracked up to be?"

The stink of rotting bodies. A sick bloodstained smile.

"Not just that, but really, that the one you've been thinking grandly of and looking up to is... well, the exact opposite? The one that's going to put you to the blade, throw you into the abyss and laugh all the way?"

Those claws. Her sheer being, a caricature of the Blessed Lady. But too authentic, too real.

"Did you ever have that feeling? Because I am having it right now. I don't exactly think what I am doing with my life is all that... right, or the way to go. Wether I want it or not."

"Hmm. when I'm honest here, that's not really what I expected a thirteen-year old girl to say. But to answer your question, well, did you consider that maybe, the difference between the Devil and God is from our perspective non-existant?"

"Huh?" Sally straightened up. The man drew his smile a bit wider.

"Well now, consider history and etymology. The words Satan, Devil and Lucifer, in their original languages, carry meanings like the Accuser and the Tempter. Nowadays people often think of the Devil as the bad guy who sends you to hell as soon as he can get your fingers on you. But that's not necessarily the case."

Sally still didn't exactly grasp where he was going with this, but nodded along anyway. The old man leaned towards her a little.

"God has a court, young lady. The one Court. And someone needs to play the persecutor. Heaven wants to accept you, but your deeds in life will be what colors God's judgement. So the Devil takes the role of the tempter, the one trying to lead you astray and towards Hell and he will be the one to call out your sins on your own Judgement Day."

Sally furrowed her brow. This was getting a bit strange for her. "Yeah, uh, I don't really understand how this gets to my point at all."

The old man leaned back and coughed in his hand again. "Excuse an old man for rambling. What I mean is, God gave you the Devil to test you. The one laughing at you and tempting you to do bad things, God put him on the job." He smiles again then. What a damn smiley.

"Someone needs to separate chaff from wheat, you know? And that's where contracts come into play. It's a really easy way to tell the sinners from the saints."

She jerked when he mentioned 'contract'. Did he...?

"Oh, I see you already understand what I mean!" the old man says, grinning. "Yes, contracts! Deals with the devil! Pacts with the underworld, power in exchange for servitude! And do you know what's the worst of it?" he says, his face barely an inch from Sallys'.

"N-no?"

"We make them everyday, that's what!" He falls back onto his spot on the pew. "Every day, the devil plays a bit of power into our hands. Every day he's right there, over your shoulder, whispering to you. When you could share the candy or keep it to yourself, he's there. When you can crush another's science project so yours ends up looking better in the end, he's there. When you hold the gun and- ah, I suppose that metaphor is a bit far-fetched for you, little one. But still. Whenever you get your fingers on a little bit of power, it comes from him, the adversary. And the larger the amount of power, the stronger a person you need to be not to give in to any evil desires."

That... that actually made some sense. When she rolled it around in her head a bit, and bent it somewhat to fit her worldview. Made sense in respect of politicians anyway.

"And that is good! It is the freedom you have been given by God. You have the choice, Heaven or Hell? One must consider, you make this choice every day again and again. That is the beauty in God's plan."

And then he leaned in again.

"So, little lady. It seems like you've already had a few contracts in your time."

Sally starded sweating and swallowed her own spit. "Eeeh, nandemonai desu..."

He laughed the laugh of a mall Santa, then clapped her on tha back hard enough to make her cough.

"It's okay, it's okay. Just keep in mind: the Lord is watching! He doesn't like to see His sheep fall by the wayside and follow a bad path! Do what your heart tells you and I'm certain you'll find the right way through the world. What these old crocks sell in their books here is way too unweildy for someone like you, who no doubt has lots of stange and confusing things happening to her everyday, hoho!"

She laughed, too. Ha ha. Yeah...

Yeah.

Then a sharp voice cut through the warm atmosphere like Amanda's steel wire cut through necks.

"Creeping up on young women again, old man?" Sally turned around.

Behind her, in the middle of the path between the pews, stood a man. Black shoes, black pants, black heavy-set coat, black hat. Skin chalk white, or whiter. Dark eyes. He did look old by the lines almost cut into his face, but he stood ramrod stiff and the piercing look in his eyes spoke of- well, she wouldn't call him a killer, but something in that general direction. He seemed to be cut right out of the darkness covering the church itself.

"Hah!" said the old man over his shoulder. "You're the one to talk!" He dusted his legs off and stood. Turns out this old man was fairly spry for his age too. "You don't let an hour pass without bothering me, don't you?"

"You've grasped the essence of my existence, dear doctor." The dark man spoke again with a voice like razors. "Though I really must say, this try is a bit.... lets say, unfriendly?"

"Ah, stop it already. I need to go to the ends of the world just to have my peace from you for five minutes and it seems like this place worked out better than the last." The old man said, stepping next to him. "Shall we go then?"

The dark man just raised an eyebrow at him. "Did you lose all sense of etiquette on your quest to get away from me?" He nodded towards Sally. "At least say your little... 'friend' goodbye."

Silence reigned for a few seconds, broken only by the tapping of the old man's shoes against the floor. "A nice fellow, isn't he?" said the dark man, who just kept standing there while his 'friend' left. Sally couldn't help but nod.

"Just like Robert." "Robert?" Sally asked, turning to the man. "Yes, Robert. You met him earlier this night, didn't you? You can't tell me you already forgot him."

The great wooden doors fell shut loudly that moment. And Sally remembered a blue shirt with a nametag on it. 'My name is ROBERT', in thick permanent marker.

"If I remember correctly, you walked up to him and asked him some funny thing. Then while he was laughing, you had a little social faux pas and hit him. I'm certain he'd have forgiven you sooner or later but he seemed a bit short of breath, what with most of him being spread over the surrounding cars in the parking lot. Pesky things, those security guards, but-"

And that's where his voice stopped cutting and started piercing.

"-you've got to do what you've got to do, right? Especially when the mission is on the line."

How did he get behind her?

Sally sprung up, brought up her fists and got into a fighting stance. Her face had already shifted from mild apprehension to frightened alert. Who was this? What was his angle?

"Sally Sullivan." The sound of her own name made her fall to the ground like a doll with it's strings cut. A feeling of dread ensnared her heard like ice-cold razor wire and wouldn't let go. The dark man- were those red lights in his eyes, staring at her from under the brim of his hat?

"You had the luck of meeting one of my associates in person so I'll give you a hint that most everyone else needs to figure out all for themselves." And then he was whhispering in her ear. "You still have a chance. Not very much of one, but you do still have it. Try to make it count."

And with that, the pressure bearing down on her from all sides just up and vanished.

Sally looked around. She was alone in the church. She immediately got up and made to leave but a glint on the floor caught her eye. It was the cross on the old bible, left behind on the cold stone slabs of the floor. Acting on an impulse from somewhere deep inside her animal brain she picked it up. 'It might come in handy at some point', she thought. Out of curiosity she let it fall open. There was a business card stuck in the pages, so she grabbed it and took a look at it. In gleaming white text on the coal black card it read:

ERITIS SICUT DEUS, SCIENTES BONUM ET MALUM

She looked past the card, on the page it was stuck in. It was the first page of the Revelation. The Apocalypse.

Sally took to her heels and ran.

~~Mephistopheles, the Devil (and from the picture that I posted further up, the color palette and rolemodel for Kyuubey) associated with Doktor Faust, the doctor that had studied everything that one could have studied back in his day, he who was lusting for more power and knowledge. And he made a bet with him, a wager for his soul, overseen by God himself: Mephisto would serve Faust for his entire time left on this world and fulfill him every last wish and in turn, Faust would do the same if he ended up in Hell. The Devil himself would hive him power, all the power he could ask for, and, after the Devil's calculation, it would only be a matter of time until Doktor Faustus fell to evil and earned his damnation without the Devil himself having to do anything but let him have his way, whatever that was.~~

~~Suffice to say, the story wouldn't be as popular if it was as flat as the standard deal with the devil a lá Ghost Rider.~~

I suppose so, since it ends with ~~Faust winning everything and ascending to Heaven without even being penitent or renouncing his ways. He just kept demanding more and more from Mephisto, that if the second part was written for a /tg/ audience, Faust would have demanded Eclipse Phase level of technology and demanding the reversal of the heat death of the universe. ~~The second half was extremely relevant for the time period it was written in, he made references to governments, kings and so on everywhere which is of course way over the head of us today unless you're a major historician. I disregard it because it's just not the The Way The Bible Should Make Sense: The Book that the first part was. Gretchen's death and the circumstances around it just made for a much more satisfying cutoff point. To me, the story was always about the wager being a direct metaphor how, well, basically everything the old man told the little girl in the storyposts further up. Power is a temptation and if you want to be a good person you need to act responsibly with it. And nobody can send you to hell but yourself, thats a good thought to hold onto too. Not that I'm religious at all, I just really liked the book.~~

~~I mean, ask yourself this: how many of our protagonists in this little world would be going right into the flames as soon as their soul gems shatter? Food for thought...~~

Hobbies? The H stood for Hobbies, right? Yeah. Yeah, that's it. ...Tch, you probably should've made a note of it earlier...hnh. Well, nothing for it. If this ends up with you falling flat on your face, at least you can say to yourself that you tried. You tried your best, and that's enough.

So you ask her about her hobbies. Does she have any others, besides....well, drawing her Miracle Midori manga? She's got some other stuff, not just that, right?

...

Wait. You...you don't know much about her, do you? You've never taken the time to ask her about herself, REALLY ask her, to know more about who Hanegawa Midori actually is rather than the bits and pieces you learned from her after a brief interrogation in a Silent Room. Yes, you know she'd been a Callidus for the Tenth, that she'd been made to do unsavory things because of a mutant cat bastard that you still need to kill - but you've never really taken the time to get to know her.

Christ, you're bad at this...being a normal, decent person thing. Really bad.

Maybe you could ask Mami for lessons on that, too...?

At your question, however, Midori seems to perk up, as if relieved with the opportunity to get this date back into track, and into something much less awkward. "Oh, my hobbies, sempai?"

Yeah. Her hobbies. What does she do in her spare time, for fun?

"W-well, besides drawing and writing for Miracle Midori, sempai, I...I do a bit of cooking, too. I try to learn at least two recipes for each kind of national cuisine when I have the time, and i have the kitchen to do it in." She gestures to the spaghetti you're currently trying to polish off, with one of the oversized meatballs proving to be a bit of a challenge. "Miss Mami was kind enough to teach me how to make proper Spaghetti from scratch, and it's something I've been meaning to learn, so...um."

Midori gives you an awkward smile here, before leaning forward on the table. "D-did you know, sempai, Miss Mami has a really, really nice kitchen? It looks almost like something out from those cooking shows from America, where all the pots and pans are hanging from this elegant rack over a counter, and a really big oven, and...and stuff! Some of the things she has there my dad only dreams about for our restaurant!"

Mami's kitchen? ...Yeah, you do remember something like that. Cooking was something Mami took seriously. It's probably the reason why she can make those awesome pancakes of hers.

"I'd...I'd say so too, sempai." Midori smiles at you again, the same as last time, but you detect the faintest hint of something else behind the familiar gesture. ...Was she jealous of Mami, or something?

"W-well, what about you, sempai? What hobbies do you have?"

How do you reply?

Your eyes go wide behind your glasses at the sudden reversal of your own, feeling a sudden rush of panic slam against your chest. Hobbies? Do YOU have any hobbies? Any at all?

Besides drinking yourself to sleep on the cold, hard floor of your first apartment, empty Kong bottles strewn around you? Seeing how many days you can walk around in your own costume until somebody actually physically manhandled you into a shower? Or how about collecting empty pill bottles of Interfectum 600, those bitter painkillers you constantly snacked on?

No. No need to tell her about those. You'll just be ruining the night.

"Sempai?" Midori blinks at you, her brow furrowing slightly in concern. "Are...are you alright? Did I say anything--"

You shake your head, swallowing with a painfully dry throat. You take hold of your glass of iced water and take a generous sip from it. It's...it's fine, you tell her. You just had to think about your answer, that's all.

"If...If I'm prying, sempai, I--" The green-haired Callidus tries, working up a smile, but you shake your head again. No, goddammit. It's a question about your hobbies, of course you'll answer it. It's not prying or anything.

"A-ah. Al..alright." Midori blinks again, seemingly taken aback, but for some reason she's smiling. You're not sure why. ...It doesn't look like she's laughing at you, though. Maybe she understands how hard this is for you, or something? You don't know.

You take another sip of your water, before putting the glass back down. It's...well, you don't really remember a whole lot of what you used to do for fun, back then. Amnesia, and all. But you do remember...something about knitting? You might have knitted a scarf for someone, you're not sure. And something about making explosives.

"Making...making explosives, sempai?" Midori's eyes go wide, here. "Y-you mean, um...like bombs, and stuff?"

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 12/06/13(Fri)08:28 No.28692795

>>28692783

You nod. It's not something you've done recently, mind - if you needed to blow up anything, Misaka could easily hook you up with whatever you needed. But you do remember spending night after night in a room, sitting in front of a laptop and making explosives from scratch.

"A-ah. I....I see, sempai." Midori nods again. "B-but what about the knitting? That's...I wouldn't have expected it from you!"

You manage an awkward smile here. No, you don't see yourself doing it, either. You probably would use the needles to stab someone in the face or in the kidneys or something. But that's what you remember. So...maybe those are your hobbies, even if you don't...do them anymore?

You shake your head again, before murmuring an apology to the green-haired girl sitting across from you. That's not much of an answer, is it?

"Ah..?" Midori blinks again, before shaking her head quickly, smiling. "N-no, no, it's good, sempai! It's great! I didn't even know about the knitting thing! It's...it's actually really cute! And, and the explosives, they're...um...well...!"

She's trying. She's trying very hard, you can see that.

But you can't help but wonder if she's having second thoughts about...well, all this, now. You're certainly doing a good job of mucking things up, even if you're trying not to yourself, and--

It's here that the whine of speaker feedback interrupts your train of thought, and the both of you turn towards its source. ...It's Kyoko, a few ways away from the table, standing behind what looks like a rather jury-rigged sound system, with what looks to be a DJ sound table propped up against some speakers. The red-haired Eversor clapping a pair of huge earphones over her ears and, grinning from ear to ear, flashes you a thumbs-up sign.

Wait. What the hell is she doing? Is she trying to--

The speakers under the DJ table thump into life, and you wince, half-expecting a ground-shaking dubstep song to blast out from them and vibrate your dinner off the table - but all that comes out is soft and gentle piano music, with a bit of violin. Not overly romantic or dramatic, but something you'd hear in a really posh restaurant, so that not everything you hear around you are people murmuring about how they're enjoying the tasteless, overpriced mess on their plates.

It's...it's actually a good thing. Something to fill in the holes in the conversation that you'll inevitably dig yourself.

"DJ KYOKO IN THE HOUSE, YEAH!" Kyoko suddenly hollers, apropos of entirely nothing, one hand holding her earphones in place as she bobs her head to an inaudible thumping bass track. It's here that you hear Midori giggle, at the same time that you spot Kumatora hissing at Kyoko about something, which the red-haired Eversor simply waves off, still grinning.

You couldn't help it, you laughed a bit yourself. Well, not a complete laugh, just...maybe you breathed a bit harder and faster through your mouth, if you'll be honest. But as you turn back to your date, she seems to be more relaxed now, smiling through her giggling.

"H-hahaha..s-sorry, sempai. I told Kyoko-san that this would be a serious date, but..." She shrugs helplessly, still smiling.

No. No, it's fine. That's the last thing you should say to Kyoko, you learned. She does what she likes.

Giving you quite the view down her dress, but...that's probably not intentional. "Um, did...did you really mean it? What you said before the mission? That you want me to move in with you..?"

You blink at this. That's...that's a bit of a sudden change of subject. Has she been waiting all along just to ask that again?

Everyone dies, death is inevitable. And no, dying as a Magical Girl isn't guaranteed since there are girls that live long enough to retire. The 17th had quite a few, and we've never actually checked how many from the 9th are still alive and collecting their retirement grief seeds.

Being a Magical Girl is very dangerous, an probably has the same life expectancy of a Soviet conscript during WW2, but it's not literally a death sentence.

Retiring reduces the danger level, but it doesn't eliminate it.

The contract can't be undone - managing your Grief level is still a thing, and it's done via a grief seed pension.

It's also a fair bet that most QB's don't have a witch in the basement producing grief seeds, so the number of witches who survive to retirement is very low, and anyone who witches out becomes fodder for the rest.

No-one who isn't a Magical Girl already should have to be put in contact with this world.

They aren't as good as a peace-time soldier's chances to live until retirement, I'll grant you, but I think that they would probably be around a soldier's chances during war time to survive till the end of the conflict.

You nod again after a moment. Of course you meant it. It's...you're not the sort to say something and not mean it. Besides, didn't she see the place for herself? You're not sure what you'd do with all that space! You'd probably end up doing breach-and-clears every day if you're left alone in there.

Besides, it's not like you'd be sharing the bed or anything, you add after another moment of awkward silence, not quite filled by Kyoko's ambient music. But if she really has a problem with that, and she wants her own place, then...well, you can probably see about it. You're not Warmaster for nothing.

You look down on your unfinished spaghetti, a quarter of a recently-demolished meatball still impaled on your fork, idly considering being alone again. It's...well, nothing you're not used to. You're fine being alone.

Being lonely is another matter entirely, though. A matter that you also tried to solve with cheap whiskey and stolen painkillers, besides everything else.

"Chiaki-sempai?" It's here that you look up at the sound of your name being murmured by her. Your own eyes wide from behind your glasses as you see Midori smile a shy, contrite smile. "I'm...I'm sorry if I made it seem that way by asking you that. I just wanted to make sure that I..." She hesitates for a second, before shaking her head and forging on. "I wanted to make sure that I wasn't forcing myself on you or something like that, and--"

It's then that her eyes go wide as she realizes just what she'd said, her cheeks burning. "I-I mean, um...of course not really forcing myself on sempai, b-but I guess I just didn't want to impose...um..."

No, no. You...you got what she said. That's okay. And she's not doing that. You're the one who's asking her to stay with you, and she doesn't need to worry about it being some sort of token offer or what. It was a genuine offer, no strings attached.

Despite the furious blush on her cheeks, Midori seems relieved at this. "A-ah. Thank you, sempai. I was...I was really getting worried." Another smile, this time definitely not colored by anything else but the emotion it's supposed to convey. "I was thinking that Sempai was only doing it to be nice, and--"

You blink at her, before shaking your head. No, you don't...you don't do things to be nice. You do things because you want to do them, period.

She giggles here again, a sound that you probably wouldn't mind getting used to. "That's my sempai for you. But yes, thank you. I just needed to make sure." It's then that she reaches forward with a soft, gloved hand, across the table - and places it on top of yours. A warm, soft touch.

Behind her, Kyoko is waggling her eyebrows up and down, making a curious gesture with her hands that you don't really understand.

"Sempai?" Midori blinks at you. "Is something wrong?" She turns to look at Kyoko, who suddenly begins to fiddle with her DJ sound table again.

How do you proceed?

It would be an important change, but it would be one that was forced from Chiaki's side, not one that came naturally from Midori's side.

You push Kyoko's unknowable gesture out of your mind to focus on your conversation with Midori - specifically, on a habit of the Callidus that's been needling at you ever since she started it.

She should be calling you Chiaki by now, not sempai, you tell her.

"Eh?" Midori blinks at you. "But, sempai, you're..." She gestures towards you. "Sempai is Warmaster, and--"

Of course you are. But there's a time and place for everything, and times like these, you'd like to hear her call you by your name instead of something as impersonal as a term for seniority. You want to hear her say the name you took for yourself.

And you'll get mad at her if she calls you 'Murderface'.

"B-but, sempai--" Midori falls silent at your stare, before blushing again and nodding. "I...I mean, yes, Chiaki."

...You tell her to say it again.

"Chiaki...?" The Callidus says it again, as if trying to get used to the word, rolling it around her tongue. She says it again, in a breathier voice this time, as if gasping it out. "Chiaki~"

...

Well. At...at least she knows how to say your name, and without any honorifics, at least. You hunker down to finish your spaghetti. That'll do for now.

"Well, of course I know how to say it, sempa--er, Chiaki." Midori seems to protest here. "...Wait, you're blushing!"

No. No, you're not, you growl with a mouthful of spaghetti, ignoring how your cheeks are burning.

You're really not.

Not at all.

You work your way through another fist-sized meatball before you pick up the conversation again. Thinking back to that thing Kyoko taught you - the HAD formula, right? Hobbies, Ambitions, something that starts with D? You're probably at A, so that's what you ask her now. What are her ambitions, then?

"Ambitions?" Midori blinks as she takes a sip of her own ice water. "Um, I...well, I'd like to be able to finish Miracle Midori, and then move onto--" It's here that she blinks again, before a smile of realization dawns on her face. "Sempai...you've asked me about my hobbies, and now my ambitions. Are you going to ask me about my dreams, next?"

HUh? Her dreams...?

Wait. That's...SHIT.

Shit shit shit shit--

"I know about the HAD formula, sempai. About how it's a, um, panty-peeler?" Midori grins here, own cheeks crimsoning as well "I overheard Miss Kyoko and Kuma-chan talking about it while we were getting ready. Not that I was eavesdropping or anything, but...well, Miss Kyoko's not really that hard to overhear, right?"

You glance towards Kyoko over Midori's shoulder. The Eversor's one eye wide as she shakes her head furiously, crossing both index fingers against each other in the sign of the NOPE.

How do you react, here?

You shake your head, letting out a sigh. Yeah, alright. You were following the HAD formula or whatever it was. It's...you really had no idea how dates like this go. Hell, you don't even know what kind of conversation passes for normal with normal people, so you managed with what help you could get. And you got Kyoko. So...yeah.

Honestly, though? They were pretty good questions, and you really did want to know more about her. You wish you'd thought of them yourself. And you do honestly want to know about her ambitions. And her dreams, too.

...She's not angry, is she? You didn't screw up the date completely, did you?

"E-eh? N-no, sempai, of course not." Midori looks slightly alarmed, here, before shaking her head, reassuring you with a smile of her own. "I wouldn't have known if I didn't overhear Miss Kyoko talk about them before our date, sempai, so don't worry."

Ah. Right. Well, you're glad for that. ...And she's still calling you sempai, by the way.

"Sorry. Chiaki." Midori smiles. "Well, if Chiaki-sempai wants to know...after Miracle Midori, I'd like to do something a bit less...um...you know." She giggles here, slightly nervous. "I want to write and illustrate children's books. It's something I've always wanted to do as a kid, write fairy tales that kids can enjoy and learn from."

Huh. Why didn't she pursue that, then? Instead of...well, Miracle Midori?

"I didn't know Miracle Midori was going to take off the way it did, Chiaki-sempai." The Callidus shakes her head. "I thought I'd sell no more than a handful of copies at Comiket, but people liked it." It's here that she grins. "As it is, though, I'm taking the experience from Miracle Midori to use for when I start writing children's books full-time."

Ahh. Well. It sounds like she's got things figured out.

It's not, actually. The girl who Chiaki's nervous with going out with has just asked you what would you do if you were intending on "getting her out of her pants".

This is nearly EXACTLY the same reaction we had with Mami when Chiaki found her on her bed; we flopped right into those Mamis.

When she found herself on top of Wendy's rear, groping occured.

Chiaki's full of spaghetti, but she's an opportunistic person with actions instead of words. Kissing someone here makes more sense than her trying to put it into nervous words punctuated with swearing.

Look at this, Pinky. You could have had all this. God knows we tried to give it to you.
But no, you just had to leave us and become a goddess. ~~Then we brought you back, and you STILL didn't take the HomuHomu.~~

My name is Chiaki, and I'm tired of your shit. You are a short, retarded, overly-pink goddess of the undead who spends every second of her day watching and fantasizing about what could have been and handing out golden sex-toys. You are everything bad in the world. Honestly, have you ever gotten any pussy? I mean, I guess it's fun eating the souls of the girls who have the balls to make something of themselves, but you take it to a whole new level. This is even worse than schlicking to the pictures on those weird-ass bibles your cultist fangirls leave behind wherever they go.

Don't be a stranger. Just hit me with your best shot. I'm pretty much perfect. I'm Warmaster of the Ninth, and even have a bitching hat. What gets you off other than torturing the girl you blueballed for centuries? I also get paid top dollar to purge punk bitches, and have a banging hot girlfriend (We're about to defile a bearskin rug; Shit is going to be SO cash). You are a colossal faggot who should just manifest yourself in magical girl form, then crush your own soul gem. Thanks for listening.

Decu's probably one of the better writers, but in terms of tone, not much is in the same neighbourhood.
Just check the catalog every few hours over the next week or so, read a few OPs, see what catches your fancy.
The Strike Witches Quest family is prime fodder for butts, though. I don't think anyone will complain if you show up there. China Edition in particular needs art badly ~~assuming it ever runs again, anyway~~.

AoPH has a protagonist who rolls very well at acting cute and utter shit at everything else which is amusing but I wouldn't say it is as good as MGNQ
PGQ has a great world behind it that the QM has put a lot of effort into but sadly it has been ruined by the fan base
Hollow Quest is good fun in a lolrandumb way that can grate on your nerves if you aren't in the mood but the QM does a good job of making even mundane things interesting
Valkyrian Merc Quest wasn't bad but I can't speak for the second part
GuP quest isn't bad but it is basically strike witches quest in tanks, Strike witches quest if you haven't heard was mainly about being a MAN in a female dominated setting it had its moments and it treated the characters better than the actual series ever did in terms of them being characters instead of stereotypes but that's about it

I don't really know any others because I don't follow them, I quit PGQ like the other anon because the fan base was literally that bad and there's Girls und Panzer Lafayette Academy quest which is about an american Academy ship which faces a situation similar to Oarai only starting with even more shit-tier tanks. and working to improve the situation also fascist Irish hall monitors who act like police.

So Magical Girls generally die in their late 30's/early 40's?
Is this due to Witching out or by being killed by other Magical Girls who held a grudge?

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/08/13(Sun)07:31 No.28734812

You're a Magical Girl, and you're currently trying to make it through your date - your first ever real date, as far as you can remember - without fucking it up like you always do. And you're currently with a girl that, by all rights, should be dead twice over by now.

Her name is Hanegawa Midori, Callidus, formerly of the Tenth Officio Assassinorum, now a Callidus of the Ninth.

A girl that, for some reason, you decided to take prisoner after a mission that you will never forget. After that, she became your subordinate. Then after that, your friend. And after that, your savior.

Even now, after all that's happened, you're still not sure what you did to deserve someone like her to actually care about you.

Well, you sort of do. You shot out her kneecaps, instead of putting a bullet through her Soul Gem.

You just wonder if there's anything more to it than just that.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/08/13(Sun)07:32 No.28734820

Now she's here, sitting in front of you, her normally slightly-mussed hair now teased into a long, luxurious stream of green flowing down her back. Dressed in a black dress that's as flattering as it is almost scandalous. And she's actually wearing tasteful makeup, instead of just the slightly darkened rings around her eyes from a chronic lack of sleep and the frequent blush of embarrassment on her cheeks.

Even for someone like you, whose very idea of beauty is based off your benevolent blonde goddess of promised victory, a plate of freshly-made pancakes in her soft, warm hands - you couldn't deny that Hanegawa Midori, right now, looked nearly as beautiful as Tomoe Mami always did.

And with the sly, almost mischievous smile curling her soft lips, her eyes hooded in a sidelong glance--

You make to learn forward across the table.

"S-sempai...?" Midori blinks at you, her cheeks reddening. Her smile disappearing, replaced with wide-eyed, speechless anticipation.

You're going to kiss her.

A look like that, it's...you can't resist it.

But just as you do so - it's here that a memory rises from your mind, unbidden, flashing across your vision for the barest second before fading.

A snippet of a dream from days ago, shared with a Magical Girl. One with brown, pigtailed hair and sleepy copper eyes.

A promise made by you, sealed with a kiss of your own, one that she returned just as she said goodbye.

A promise to get it right this time.

What do you do?

[]Kiss Midori as you intended.
[]Kiss Midori on the forehead. Not...not before you figure everything out.
[]Other.

There's no evidence it wasn't a meguca, either.

And I could see either being pretty bad. I, er, don't think they were planning on letting the meguca regenerate - it's likely they were planning a sacrifice to the Blessed Lady. So kill her body, sacrifice the soul gem.

If it's a normal, she dies. If it's a Meguca, soul annihilation.

The line is very thorougly crossed either way.

My feelings toward her about this particular indiscretion fall firmly under 'quite cross with everyone involved' but look at it this way; there's a blood cult worshipping Murderface, with our ex-girlfriend as a high-ranking member. We can TOTALLY turn that into an asset.

You promised. You promised her that you'd get it right this time. You promised her, the mysterious girl from your dreams that looked like she needed you more than she needed sleep.

But even with that - you couldn't stop yourself.

Maybe you didn't want to stop at all.

You're not sure.

...

The exact moment your lips brushed against Midori's own - her entire body stiffening at the contact - all thought flees from your mind, replaced by a single one: that no one's lips should be this soft, or this warm. But somehow, hers was, turned slightly sweet with what tastes like fruit-flavored lip gloss. ...Melon, oddly enough. But it's not a bad taste. Not by far.

More, though. You want more. You need more.

You lean forward a bit more into the contact - both your hands coming off of the table, to grasp Midori by the shoulders - and it's here that you feel her melt in your grasp. The reluctance that had made her freeze up mere moments ago vanishing as she leans forward as well, letting out a tiny, quiet moan into the kiss you shared. Her own hands come up to rest gently against your own shoulders - whether it was to hold on to you or to push you away, you didn't know.

And for that moment you forgot Pinky. You forgot the Golden Weapons. You forgot the Prophet, Kyuubey, even being the Warmaster of the Ninth Officio. For that one moment everything felt like they were going to be alright, and all it took was you doing something you probably should've done a long time ago.

After a small eternity, it's here that you finally pull away. The world slowly coming back into focus again as you move back to your own seat, feeling the warmth on your own lips still. What you had just done slowly sinking in, your thoughts curiously in time with your rapid, pounding heartbeat.

Midori, to her credit, didn't faint or break down like you thought she would. Still, she's considerably stunned, her cheeks a burning red, her eyes still wide with shock as they flutter open, having involuntarily closed during the kiss. Her own breaths quick and rapid, her chest heaving up and down as she tries her best to catch up to it.

Behind her, back at her DJ table, Kyoko is staring at you, one eye completely wide, mouth agape in shock. Kumatora beside her looking towards you with rapt attention, both gloved hands covering her mouth.

"S-sempai..." Midori finally began. "I...I um...you...we just..."

How do you respond?

I doubt we're going to given something that convenient.
Oh well, next time we check Chirpee, NECO's death warrant is signed and there's not a damn thing Sayaka can say or do to stop us.
NECO was given a warning, and ignored that warning. Now she's going to pay the price.

I seriously fucking hope not, all the writeups are getting dangerously close to interfering with the story and at that point you're going to lose a load of people who don't care for the writeups at all, I don't mind them when they stay away from the story and do their own thing, but when they get involved with story characters and scenarios, I dunno, but I feel like they just get crap, the writing ain't up to standard or the characters feel wrong and different or something and then you have to deal with outside knowledge and they become required reading which just shits things up.

TLDR; writeups are good, but keep them way the fuck away from the story or I'll burn your house down.

I'm not talking about Homulucifer. I'm talking about the "us" from before the barrier incident. That person is dead. This would be an excellent opportunity to explain exactly why she should keep things like this to herself....because someone might decide to start killing people who didn't deserve it. And it's the cat's fault.

midorin is a target....the cat is a target unless it works for us, because as long as it works for us, it's safe. If it doesn't work for us....then it got Midorin killed. And that means we get to give it the Murderface Experience.

Also any differences between those accounts could be chalked up to perspective, though they DO take place at somewhat different times - Sayaka's part in that takes place directly before the writeup (though if it contradicts beyond that, take the thread as canon, it's newer anyway).

Well, she asked, you reply calmly with a small smile, before taking another sip of iced water from your glass. Thankfully, Midori seemed much too stunned to notice your shaky grip on the crystal, or how you very nearly tipped it over the moment you set it back down on the table.

Midori doesn't seem to have any reply to that, only blushing further as she stares at you in silence. A silence that lasts for...well, admittedly a bit too long than you're comfortable with.

Maybe...maybe she's just trying to recover? You flick your gaze from her to Kyoko as you take another sip, using both hands to hold your glass this time. She's still got the same shocked expression as earlier, but now she's slightly shaking her head, now, while miming a slow golf clap. Kumatora seems to be tugging at her sleeve, trying to get the red-haired Eversor's attention, an annoyed look on her face. She gives up after a few more tugs, before stomping off towards the vacation house.

...Well. At least you're not worried about guard duty falling asleep.

You look back at your date and open your mouth to try and continue the conversation, but Midori speaks before you can.

"I...I've never been..." She shakes her head. "N-not...not like that. Not even when I--" It's here that she grows even redder. "U-um. I'm...I'm sorry, sempai, but I wasn't...I wasn't expecting you to..."

How d you react?

Well ok den

The officio was going to be placed in Detroit and spread throughout most of the NE coast of the states, however it was going to have groups in low officio dense areas world wide, when a girl showed potential they were sent to Hq to contract then sent to a privately owned Pmc to be trained, as a whole the officio does a lot of work with Pmcs reflecting the crusader squad aspect of the Templars. After being Pmced they are inducted into the Officio fully, they except a number of vagrant girls from other officios to help boost their ranks.

I had planned 10 equarys to help the officio function

the top 5 consisted of the God hand
Fem Griffith, Slan however her sucubus form is replaced by a angel form and she is head of the public relations, Fem Condrad being a slightly heavy set girl who was the head Venenum operatives, Fem Ubrik whos costume is based around a business suit and glasses as the head of the Vanus, Fem Void whos costume was sorta kinda based around a traditional wizard and an alien from mars attacks as the head of the Vindicares, and Fem Griffith as the tactical leader across the officio and appearance is not really changed.

The second half is the Devil hand which tend to be located away from the Hq. Rip was planned to be a sect that mainly hunted witches and was stationed in Germany, Fem Cars who is the head of R&D and is located within Quaker country Pennsylvania. Punch girl who is the head eversor and is located in a secondary Hq within the worst part of detroit. A "Girl" whom is a cross between Dio and Grey wolf from MGS who acts as the head of girls whom use familiars and other similar magics who works out of the same base as the Punch girl, and finally a girl who is based off of Shizuru from Rewrite who acts as the head of medical development based in south america

And here's a tip for you, shitfuck.
Not everyone reads every writeup. Quite a few people don't read ANY writeups. Making decisions based on the content of those writeups is metagaming, whereas not using that knowledge leads players to feel like they're watching a trainwreck that they have no control over.
Yes, filling out the universe is fun. But the instant any content not posted in-story becomes relevant is the instant I drop this quest.

Nothing in the writeups will ever be required somehow for Chiaki to know. That would be bullshit. They DO fill in the background of events and they WILL run concurrent to and be relevant to the plot.

You shouldn't have to read them to know what's going on with Chiaki, ever. You may have to read them to know what's going on elsewhere. If that's a problem, it's been nice having you.

You blink at her. She...she looks like she's about to cry, here.

Was...was it really that bad? It just felt like the right thing to do. If it was something she wasn't expecting to come from you, or expecting at all, then--

"N-no!" Midori manages to blurt out, shaking her head furiously. "No, no, sempai. It wasn't...it wasn't bad. It wasn't bad at all." She looks at you with a trembling smile. "It's...it's just, I was just trying to tease you, sempai, and I was...I was hoping you'd do it, but I wasn't expecting you to actually..."

Ah. Right. That's...yeah. Okay.

So...was it good, then? What you did earlier?

Midori reddens even more here, before lowering her head and then nodding silently. As if too shy or embarrassed to vocalize what she wanted to say.

Well. Seems there's hope for you after all, then.

You make to try and continue the conversation between the both of you - namely, to ask Midori more about herself - when suddenly your smartphone starts to vibrate. You blink at this, and pull it out from your inventory - but not after excusing yourself from your date, of course. And from the relieved smile she flashes at you, it seems she appreciates the chance to get her bearings back.

It's a call from...Kumatora? She's calling you from inside the house?

You stand up from your chair, giving Midori a nod and a smile - the best you can manage under the circumstances - before moving away from the table to answer your phone.

"Warmaster?" Kumatora's normally exubrant voice is hushed. "Warmaster, I'm really very sorry for interrupting your date - and I'm very happy it's going so well for you and Midori-san - but I'll have to ask you to continue it here, inside the house."

Huh? Inside the house? But you haven't finished dinner yet, and you're sure Midori hasn't either. What's wrong? Is there a security risk?

"Not...not exactly," The Eversor seems hesitant here. "Um, well, let's just say that staying outside may...may be detrimental to your and Midori-san's relationship, as it is, Warmaster. In the sense of it being private and all?"

...

It's NECO, isn't it?

"She just published a picture of you and Midori-san getting along, Warmaster. It's...well, it's a close-up, and it doesn't seem to reveal where we are, but...yeah."

God dammit, NECO.

"Anyway, let us take care of it, Warmaster." Kumatora's voice is hurried, now. "Get Midori-san inside and we'll track her down for you. Don't react visibly or outwardly, go back to your table and just tell Midori-san t hat you'd like to continue your date indoors. We'll clean up for a few minutes and then start hunting." A moment. "With Kyoko-san helping me, we'll get her in less than five minutes flat, half of that if Kyoko-san gets her scent early."

How do you react?

Let me break it down for you in an entirely non-Midorifag manner.

>you're going to get mami killed for more midori
Of course, given that Mami has fucking plans behind our back and thinks she knows better than her warmaster, manipulating everyone around her with a front of niceness when everyone in these threads knows by now that she's a stone cold killer on the level of Wendy Cooldown that actually enjoys killing people in the same way that you would enjoy winning a videogame.

>all that shit about ignoring things to go for midori
It depends on the situation. If you can have her with no serious backlash, such as RIGHT NOW, THAT WAS A DATE SPECIFICALLY SET UP FOR SEXYTIMES, IMPLYING THE KISS COULD HAVE BEEN AVOIDED SINCE SOMETHING LIKE THREE THREADS AGO, then of course everyone will go for it, this romance has been slow cooking for something like over a hundred threads, these blue balls are the size of Neptune already. In other occasions however we've regularily made good judgement calls for the benefit of the overall situation. It's not like one can enjoy Midori tits when the universe is crumbling around you.

Why the fuck am I even replying. Well not like I have something better to do.

>you're going to get mami killed for more midori

Hahaha, no. I like to believe that the people here are smart enough not to force us into a situation where we get to chose if Mami or someone else dies.

>you're going to ignore any attempt to acquire more golden weapons if it means you get to spend more time with midori

Again no. Think of it like this if you want: We have to get the golden weapons from their users so they don't go around killing people such as....Sayaka, Kyouko, Mami, Midori, Misaka, so on and so forth >the entire plot of this wonderful story is going to be ignored for more midori

We all know that ignoring the plot = DEATH
That and people want watermelon not grapes.

I think it's entirely necessary. The first consists entirely of puella which started out on the level of something like Kharn but then were put through the most involving processes of incubator tech. Basically living gods, even on the powerlevel -scale probably beyond a real primarch of spess muhreens. What I'd bet on is that one of them, preferably a trainee or a total rookie missing half the upgrades shows up once or twice and annihilates a bigtime enemy utterly without even breaking a sweat, then when the real shitstorm begins Pinky just sends black lightning raking across the moon and powderizes the entire surface while engraving Homu's face on the frontal side for everyone to see.

Except Midori who managed to bruteforce the mechanics of fate by being a mook and surviving contact with the protag of the story, nobody does. The First are in posession of such ridiculous amounts of power that, in a story sense, they cannot; using it in practice like one should would break the story due to too much power floating around. Their entire existence, from a writer's standpoint, is to get the fuck killed out of them. Sort of like Imperial Stormtroopers, who should be the 1337 of the uber-1337 but end up being jokes.

So what's the retirement/Witch out ratio for the First?
Given how, the more powerful the Magical Girl, the more powerful the Witch, and the diminishing returns of [energy from powerful Witch] compared to the [energy cost of creating Magical Girls] X [number of Magical Girls killed by the Witch], the First would have to take extraordinary measures to prevent their Magical Girls from Witching out.

That's another thing I was wondering about.

The Incubators created the Magical Girl technology. They have the technology to send their selves across the distance from their homeworld to Earth, and somehow convert emotional energy into a form that reverses the heat-death of the universe.
With that much science and technology, I really can't see Strauss being that far ahead of the Incubators in terms of Magical Girl science.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/09/13(Mon)07:16 No.28757355

You thank Kumatora for her diligence, and tell her that you'll do exactly what she said. You were expecting to hear from NECO tonight, sure, but not like this.

"It's fine, Warmaster. I'm just trying to do my job the best I can." Despite the hurried tone in her voice, you can tell that she's pleased. "Then, Warmaster, by your leave--"

You tell her not to hang up just yet. Kumatora seems to pause at this, before murmuring something approximating assent - and it's here that you turn on your heel and then fling your smartphone at Kyoko in one quick, abrupt movement. The red-haired Eversor - who'd been distractedly fiddling with some switches on her DJ sound board - easily catches the flung device, her arm snapping forward and snatching it out of the air, a testament to Eversor reflexes.

"Eh?" Kyoko blinks her one good eye at the phone, then at you. Her free hand pulling her headphones off. "What's--"

>> ☐ Deculture 12/09/13(Mon)07:17 No.28757370

>>28757355

For you, you mouth at her confused expression. The Eversor blinks again, before nodding and holding the device up to her ear, talking to the receiver in hushed tones. You take this opportunity to go back to your seat, where you spot Midori hurriedly downing her glass of water.

You apologize as you take your seat. You know enough that answering a call during a date isn't really all that polite.

"O-oh, no, it's okay, Chiaki-sempai!" Midori beams up at you, her cheeks still positively red. "Who was it? Was...was it an emergency, or something?"

You shake your head. Nothing that important, you reply, glancing back at Kyoko - the Eversor now looking vaguely annoyed, like a pet owner being told that a pet's gone and shat on the rug that really tied the room together.

"Are...are you sure, Chiaki-sempai?" Midori blinks her wide crimson eyes at you, before reaching forward and placing her hand on yours. "It was something, wasn't it? I could tell, you...you have that look that says you're either angry, or worried, or someone's about to get their kneecaps shot out." She giggles here, a rather pleasant sound - and different from the Midori from earlier.

"Come on, Chiaki. Tell me what you're thinking. Just for tonight, I want my sempai to be really honest with me." She smiles at you again, a tender smile, strangely all too similar to the smile Mami would make whenever she encouraged you to do something you'd really rather not - like stop drinking. "Please? It's our date, after all."

...Ngh. Mami's been teaching her more than just recipes, huh...?

How do you react?

I mean, how do you even start that story?

"Once upon a time there was a girl named Homura Akemi. She fucked everything up.

You can't help it. That smile of hers - you'd have said yes to anything for that smile, only for the fact that it was Mami who wore it. And she's always worn it with a disarming warmth and affection that you knew doing anything to the contrary of what she asked would simply be impossible. It'd be like trying to fight back a tide using only a small plastic bucket and harsh language.

For Midori to use it on you, in this way, it's kind of unfair.

Well, almost. She's not really Mami, that much is clear, and you know that comparing them is wrong - but you couldn't help but feel that there's nothing really wrong with that. Much more, you'd be fine if...if Mami were to somehow be replaced with Midori.

Maybe for a day or two. No, for half a day. Probably. If you're drunk by the gills by then, insensate and feeling no pain.

Still, Midori did get the smile down pat, and you find yourself unable to take your eyes off of her, her hand a soft warmth upon yours. It takes Kyoko walking up to the table to snap you out of it, the Eversor clearing her throat and excusing herself, before passing you back your phone.

"Thanks for the assist, Murderface." Kyoko smiles at you - her usual smile, but one that doesn't touch her eye. You nod back, slipping your phone back into your inventory, and turning back to Midori just as the Eversor returns to her sound station.

"Well, sempai?" Midori giggles again. "You've been looking at me really weird. Is...is there something on my face--"

There isn't, you tell her. And yes, you'll be honest with her tonight, if that's what she really wants.

It's here, then, that you take a hold of her hand. Making the green-haired Callidus blink at your touch, her blush deepening.

But you'd like to do so indoors, you add. Where it's much more private, and where the both of you won't be disturbed.

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 12/09/13(Mon)09:09 No.28758179

>>28758164

Midori stays silent here, her eyes still wide, her blush going so far as the encompass her entire face. When she finally speaks, it's back in the reluctant stutter that she'd abandoned just a few moments ago.

"I-indoors? In...in p-private? With...with sempai...?"

You nod, here. Your brow furrowing. It's...is there a problem with that? It's fine, you say. Mami probably won't mind, and whatever happens, you'll take responsibility.

"Sempai...sempai will...take responsibility...?" Midori echoes, her voice barely above a whisper, blushing like crazy now, sweat bedewing her brow. Her hand shaking in yours.

Well, of course. It's your first time doing it in Mami's place, after all.

"A-ah." Midori nods slowly, as if steeling herself to make an important decision. "T-then, please be gentle with me, Chiaki-sempai..." She murmurs this, giving your hand a squeeze as the both of you stand up from your seats.

What? She doesn't even need to ask that, you tell her as you lead her into the house. Of course you'll be gentle as you can. It'll be hard for you to, but you'll try your best.

"A-ah, but if Chiaki-sempai wants, I...um..." Midori seems to stumble, here. "Sempai can be as harsh as she wants to..."

Really? Well. You'll keep it in mind, then.

The inside of Mami's vacation house is...well, there's no other word for it except that it's cozy. Very cozy. Expensive wood furniture everywhere, with tasteful bits of modern glass and steel that she's known for. The floors are also lacquered wood, made up of those geometric shapes that fit into each other, forming some sort of mosaic. The living room is especially cosy, with a modern fireplace that's already been lit.

And true to Kyoko's word, the bear fur rug is there, in all its glory. It's a huge bear, just as huge as the sort you fought in Siberia. And its head is intact, too, snarling at you from its place on the floor.

Oddly enough, there aren't any sort of hunting trophies on the fireplace's mantelpiece. Not that you expected Mami to be a hunter or anything like that, but...well. Instead of them, there are framed pictures.

Not of Mami especially, but of other girls. Magical Girls, from the looks of them. None of them especially familiar.

"Are...are we going to do it here, sempai...?" Midori speaks up, here, reminding you that she's there in the room with you - and her hand still in yours. Her voice so nervous and brittle you'd swear she was waiting for her execution.

Huh. She's acting a bit weird...

How do you react?

You consider the shivering girl in front of you, then glance towards the fireplace with the bear skin rug - and it's here that you lead her slowly to it. No, you tell her - you'll do it here, on the rug. She looks like she needs warming up, anyway.

"A-alright, sempai, if...if that's what you want," Midori replies in a tiny squeak as she lets you pull her along, taking a seat on the rug as soon as you do so. Squeezing your hand all the while, as if loathe to let go of you.

...Huh. Well. You were expecting that the skin rug would be an uncomfortable and itchy mess, and that it'd smell like the huge beasts you had to put down back at Siberia - it's actually pretty damn comfy. The fur's thick and soft, if a bit stringy, but definitely warm.

It doesn't smell either. Well, not as much as you thought, anyway - there's a definite hint of it, but only if you're looking for it. They must have treated it for that kind of thing before it was sold. The warmth coming from the fireplace is helping, too - it was getting chilly out, the cold seeping in despite your blazer. And if YOU were cold...well, Midori would definitely have been freezing, at least.

Anyway, you might as well explain to Midori what's up, and it's here that you turn towards her to say so. You heave a heavy sigh here - no doubt it'll ruin the night for her, but it'd be better if she knew from you instead of finding out somewhere else.

"Midori, I..." You begin, before stopping as you realize what you're seeing.

The Callidus was slowly, carefully, slipping the straps holding her dress from her shoulders. A hesitant, yet determined look on her reddened face.

"S-sempai...?" She looks up at you calling her, cheeks reddening even more. "I, um, give me a few moments, and--"

What? WHAT? Why is she taking her clothes off?! You reach forward and trap her hands where they are, stopping her from lowering them more. She doesn't need to do that, you're just--

You're just...you mean...

Wait.

...

Oh, shit.

"Sempai...?" Midori is completely puzzled here. "I, um, would...would you like it more if I didn't...?"

NO! No, you were just trying to talk! You didn't bring her here to do anything else, you wanted to tell her that someone was spying on the both of you and Kyoko and Kumatora are taking care of whoever it is and, and...!

"Spying...?" Midori blinks again, before it finally sinks in. Her expression turning from one of puzzlement, to realization, then finally horror. "Y-you mean, sempai didn't mean--you weren't talking about--"

N-no! No! It's all that damn NECO's fault!

The green-haired Callidus' face blanks out, here, her eyes glazing over - and it's then that she pitches forward, into your arms, her entire form slack. You blink at this, panic rising in your chest, and open your mouth to yell for help when you smell the scent of alcohol in Midori's breath.

Alcohol...? But you were only drinking water, how...?

You carefully turn Midori onto her back. Something falls from her gown's pockets - a small, one-shot bottle of vodka.

Oh, Midori.

It's here, then, that your cellphone rings. Cradling the passed-out - and obviously inebriated - Midori with one arm, you pull your smartphone from your inventory with your other and answer it.

"We got her," Kyoko's voice rings from your phone's speaker, tired but triumphant. "Gave us a hell of a chase, but we got her. Want us to bring her there, then, boss?"

Well, probably because coobie pretty much told us not to do that during the whole Ruri fiasco.

I don't see why he'd change his mind about her now. I don't see why we don't go explaining the situation to her about all this Oriko stuff and how people out to kill us might be reading her stuff. She seems pretty good at sneaking into places and following people, why not ask her to help hunt down Oriko and say we'll give her an interview afterword.

That just seems to make more sense to me, I dunno. Killing someone this good at sneaking around seems like a waste.

Partly because it should intimidate NECO quite nicely.

Why not try the carrot rather than the stick? NECO is a reporter and all she cares about is getting a scoop.

Direct information gathering, like an interview, is better than indirect information gathering, like spying on someone from afar.

We will show her how much she SUCKS.
We will strip away her fantasies of being an "investigative journalist", and show her for what she truly is: a trashy paparazzi.
THEN we will have her apologize, face-to-face, everyone who has been hurt by her actions.

The problem is that we're rewarding bad behavior. She'd be getting the interview (which shed probably like but clearly doesn't need) only because she got caught snooping (and she only got caught because she started posting pictures of us while still staking us out). What we need to do is encourage her to actually go through proper channels to get access to us and other Officio members, but given that she seems to already have personal relationships with Mami (well, maybe) and Sayaka I don't think we can really restrict her access at all. Basically what I'm saying is that we have no real leverage in this situation so do expect to get anything out of negotiations.

The best we can do is point her in the direction of something juicy and unrelated to us.

You look down at the sleeping Callidus on your lap, before shaking your head. No, you tell Kyoko. Have someone from Headquarters come over and pick her up, then secure her in a Silent Room. You're in no mood to deal with her right now - you might do something you'd regret if you tried. You'll deal with her in the morning. Besides, you're still on a date, and you're not going to fuck it up more than you already have.

"...Alright, boss. Kuma-chan's right on that. We'll be back there in about ten minutes, tops." She pauses here, and when she speaks again, she sounds more contrite than anything else. "Christ, Murderface, I'm sorry. I should've taken care of this before it go to this point, all I wanted was to make sure you and Midori-chan had a good time, and--"

You cut her off, here. It's fine. It's nothing. You're not blaming anyone except NECO. Right now you just...you just want to salvage what little's left of the date.

"Right, right." Kyoko replies after a while, sounding more miserable than you've ever heard her sound. "Catch you tomorrow morning, Murderface, and...and tell Midori-chan I'm sorry too, yeah?"

Yeah. You'll tell her.

"Thanks." There's a click, and a beep, and the connection is severed. You shove your phone back into your inventory, and glance back down at the inebriated girl on your lap. Midori now snoring through what looks like a wide, drippy smile.

"Sem....sempai, pleeze...hug me...don't let me go..." She murmurs, her voice thick with sleep. Dreaming, obviously. "I don't...want you to go..."

You shake your head again, before carefully scooping her up in your arms and lifting her off of the rug. Rising to your own feet as you do so, carefully, slowly.

..Nrgh. Alright, you know she's taller than you, and definitely not as noodly, but...you probably need to tell her to work out a bit more. She may be a lightweight when it comes to alcohol, but she's no delicate waif.

But warm. Very warm. And very soft, too.

You make for the cottage's master bedroom, and it doesn't disappoint. It's not as big as your own quarters, sure, but it's certainly not uncomfortable, with a memory foam four-poster bed that could easily sleep five people side by side.

There's also a silk pajama set on the bed - one green and one violet, with the former definitely in a larger size than the latter. It's clear that Mami was fully expecting the both of you to stay the night, and you murmur your thanks.

Careful not to look or touch too much, you undress Midori down to her underwear and get her into her pajamas. It was certainly an ordeal - the Callidus seemed to have foregone wearing a bra tonight, and her panties were...well, very lacy. And black. With garters, too.

A few moments more, and Midori is finally tucked into the bed, the quilted blankets pulled up to her chest. You step away after a moment, watching her sleep - and it's here that you work on getting dressed for bed as well.

It's here that your smartphone beeps, however. In the middle of disrobing, you pull it out, and blink at the message being displayed.

Yep, and that photo is copyrighted to the Officio and tagged with fine print making it legally unavailable for commercial use. If an agency wants to use that photo, they have to request permission from our Officio's PR department. You pull on the silk pajama top as you tap in the name that's still fresh in your mind. After all, you just spent most of today hearing her talk about how she rescued your former Warmaster.

M A L A L

[PASSWORD ACCEPTED], the app chimes, and as usual, a dialog pops up with scrolling text.

It's...a substantially longer entry than what you're used to.

[UNLOCKING ENTRY #4.]

[Rank Leader Malal always had visions. Since she was a little girl, she saw past lives. Dreamed about a goddess that looked exactly like her, that threw away everything, and visions of a short lifetime filled with blood and fire. Maybe the fact that it was short was a blessing, in the end. She was stronger than anyone, though. Braver, too. She never ran away, not for a step. She decided to take up the goddess's mercy - to hold up the universe for Kaname Madoka, and the ripples from her efforts are still bouncing wildly.]

[I wonder sometimes if everything she did was a part of it. If skipping school was something she had to do to save the world, or running with yakuza gangs. If hunting sparklies with Nicole Touchdown before they even spoke the same language was part of it. Maybe everyone she got close to - Miki Sayaka, Tetsuo Izumi, Nicole Touchdown, Sabrina Blackburn, Chitose Yuma, and Valnikov Ekaterina...a lot of people, probably more than that - maybe it was all part of her plan. Maybe she was setting it up as early as middle school.]

[But you need to remember: all of this is what she left behind. Kaneda Madoka is dead. Rank Leader Malal is dead. She set everything up as best she could, and now it's on you you force your way through whatever she couldn't save you from. But you aren't alone. She left you to carry the world on your shoulders, Matsuda Chiaki. That's all you have to do. Carry the one world. Malal's burden - and Kaneda's, and Kaname Madoka's - belong to other people now.]

[It's the least she could do.]

...Well. That's...nothing you didn't infer from what you heard from REMOV, but...

What kind of person was Malal? How could someone even plan this far ahead?

The names, too. Some of them you know, a few you haven't heard or seen before.

The app beeps, and another dialog opens up. Asking for another five-letter password. Thinking for a moment - still a bit unnerved by the last journal entry - you enter another name. One that you're not likely to forget.

TOMOE

[PASSWORD ACCEPTED.]

[UNLOCKING ENTRY #7]

[You love her, don't you? It's alright. Everyone loves her. She makes sure of it. There's nobody in the magical girl business more connected than Tomoe Mami - she's got friends in every Officio. More than that, she has people that would kill for her, maybe even die for her for nothing more than a smile and a pat on the head. Not just rank and file, either - Warmasters have fallen in love with Tomoe Mami. Special forces. Cannibals and murderers, heroes and psychopaths. If Mami died, the entire magical world would grieve, and then it would hunt.]

[You're one of them. There's no shame in it. She's a mother figure for a lot of people, and a lover for a lot of others. Someone that always knows what carrot to use and when, and how to use the stick after she pulls the ribbons out.]

[I don't trust her. Nobody should command that much power. But if you're on her side - no, of course you're on her side. If she's on your side, and you know that for certain, she's probably the most valuable asset you could have. Just be careful. Watch your back. Don't let her smile fool you. She's a killer, just like any other magical girl that's been around for as long as she has.]

Okay. Instead of being cryptic as usual, this...this thing decided to talk about Mami that way.

Whoever wrote this journal entry needs to be dragged into the street and shot.

No. No, you're not going to throw your phone out the window, or crush it in your grasp. That'd make too much noise, and might wake Midori up.

You won't get angry, either. You're done with angry. You don't want to go to bed angry.

You place your smartphone on the bedside table, before taking off your glasses and blearily rubbing the bridge of your nose.

...You hope that tomorrow would be better. Maybe...Midori will forgive you for screwing things up as badly as you have, tonight. With any luck, she may not remember anything before she passed out. With real luck, she'd think it was all a dream.

Carefully, slowly, you slip into the covers, letting your tired, aching frame rest on the memory foam bed. Trying to make sure not to rock the matress too much as you move closer to Midori's side. Stopping until there's only one feet of mattress between the both of you.

This...this is nice. This is near enough.

Even though you're too wired to actually sleep, just...staying like this is enough.

You try to close your eyes, to at least simulate the activity of sleep - when you feel movement on the bed, beside you. Followed by something warm and silky and soft pressing against your side, one arm draping over your waist and pulling you close.

"My Chiaki," Midori murmurs into your hair. "My sempai."

This is love, you think. When someone drags you from the wreckage when you have given in, ready to just lie there and die.

This is love. When someone, no matter what the cost, shows you there is hope, a choice, that you can put down your gun. This is love.

Love hurts.

Plenty of fortune tellers running around.

Speaking of, [X] make a mental note to see how Yuma's lady love is doing.

Then, make a mental note to get an actual journal to write stuff in.

Malal was a digital girl. Chiaki is pure analogue. If meeting Wendy proved nothing else, it's that we have a tactile sense of memory.

Writing notes for yourself. It seems like a no brainer for someone who has frequent bounts of amnesia.

Eightball is a weird one in the way he thinks, though its probably just because he’s something else. Case in point; he believes the best way for two magical girls to reconcile their differences and events in the past are to team them up in a mission that requires teamwork and trust. And perhaps this would work if the situation didn’t involve the chance of death.

…Least this wasn’t my extra. I would have killed him for that.

“It’s fucking cold, why does it need to be-“Megan kept mumbling to herself while rubbing her arms in frustration. It’s been two weeks since the tourney, so either she didn’t get the memo that this mission would be way north or she thought she could tough out the cold. For me, a scarf, two jackets and thick pants seem to be doing fine. And honestly, the name itself should have ringed a bell. Mount Shasta, right? Or at least we’ll be near that area. It’ll be the farthest north I've ever been.

The mission itself was quite simple; a smash and grab for some doc's on some drug cartel up here followed by "GTFO ASAP", as well put by Eightball. Megan, being the Eversor, will be the distraction by killing everyone she sees while I sneak in through the back and grab what I can. Once we're done there we jack a car and make a getaway. At least, that's the rough gist of it.

"I'm sure the blood of the fallen will warm your cold heart, Megan."

"Oh, shut the fuck up Gina." The biggest problem we have – and why I think Eighty is out of his mind – is the required amount of teamwork. Sure, being on a mission together puts up a different kind of quota needed, but she's still bitter about the tournament. More surprising is her reason; it's not because I won instead of her, but about how nonchalant I was about it.

So Eightball sent us here together to make us learn more about each other. Wonderful.

"You girls know what you're gonna do?" The pilot asked over the radio. We were being flown in by helicopter that doubles as our escape route.

"We got a rough idea; we'll see how things turn out." I respond in the absence of Megan who still rubs her shoulders furiously to gain friction heat. "And cut that out. You're gonna harm yourself before the mission begins."

"You know what happened to me?" She spits out the side, watching it fall down to the snow below. "Got woken up at six in the god damn morning saying I was in for a treat. I come expecting chocolate and gifts and I'm told I got ten min's prep for a mission up north. Not how far, not for what. Just gets me going and-"

"Gifts and chocolate?" The pilot chimes in. "This isn't daycare you know."

"It was a fucking analogy! Now hurry up, I feel like killing shit."

We're on the ground ten minutes later, a good mile away from the complex. Megan tried to keep a low profile for a while but gave up from coldness and transformed half-way there.

"Keep it calm on your end and I'll see none of the fuckers need to deal with you." She notes as we approach the building. "Once you're done I'll get into the garage area and see what I can jack. Then we're out. Plain and simple, just don't fuck up."

"Yea, I'll make a note not to do that."

The building looks strangely out of place on the white-covered mountain with its grey walls and blackened windows. It looks like a cross between a warehouse and an office, like the constructor just said 'fuck it, we'll do both'. It has an obvious entrance, which seems to be the go-to for Megan. The four floors might be difficult to get up but it depends more on the interior design than actual height at this rate.

“Alright, seems clear enough. Go ahead and do your thing, Megan. Meet in garage in aprox twenty-“

…Shes gone. Great, time to move.

Despite previous combat ventures, I’m still a Callidus at heart, even if my skills need to be bent a strange way in order to become one. Case in point, darkening the color of my barrier to blend in with the darkness of the room I’m currently in, which seems to be some sort of a warehouse. It’s not the best it could be right now, but it’s at least better than going-

POP-FIZHHHK

“Have fun, fucker.” The radio cackled in my ear as the power went off in the building, followed nicely by the swearing of various men, including …Missing out on tonight’s raid? A power outage shouldn’t- oh.

Heh, we’re dealing with nerds.

“Appreciated.” She’s actually pretty clever; nothing can interfere or drop in on our conversation now that the power is off. For now, higher ground and better stealth is all I’m looking for. They will already have a hard time trying to see a black blur during a power outage, but that doesn’t mean they can’t hear me. Of course, I can also take that advantage differently.

The boys in the room over finally begin to move out while I’ve already ascended to the walkways above. Show time.

“The fuck is going on, seriously?” Thick boots give audible thuds as the men enter the room. Two with flashlights, three without. The cones of light scan the area in front of them, and they don’t bother looking up.

“…Sir” One of the meeker ones tries to speak up. “I don’t think it’s much of a problem. Can’t you just-“ “Silence! Idiot, how much free time do you get, huh!?” The yells echo and bounce through the room, stopping in place as he points his flashlight at him. “We’re gonna fix this problem quickly and- huh?” He begins to configure something in his ear, only to rip it out entirely.

“JESUS FUCK, CALM DOWN! What is it?!” Distractions are good, but I should capitalize on this. Anything around, no, up above… heavy boxes. Heavy boxes on a wooden shelf. This can work, just throw it hard enough.

One step back, lever the arm correctly… throw. The mace begins to fly through the air. “Everyone, man the fuck up. We’ve got a- MOVE!” He yells as the boxes above begin to fall with the splinters from the broken wood. Only two are left unharmed; two are crushed immediately and one has his legs stuck. There’s a lot of blood.

“Lock this place down! NOW!” The doors are closing, back-up power, shit. Mace back in hand, I manage to run to an exit on the walkway and jam the doors open to slide through. Still a black blur, still a-

“INTRUDER ALERT! LOCK DOWN!”

…Now things get interesting.

I manage to get to some office complex before the place begins to really get hard to move through. The windows are locked down too, so I'm almost perfectly camouflaged in the darkness. Main question still stands; how the hell do I get out of here?

Of course, if there are no doors open, make one. I lightly swing at the wall to test it and it makes a good ringing. It looks like drywall, but its probably reinforced from the inside. Yea, no way I'm getting through this.

"What was that?" "I don't want to know." Ooh, two voices on the other side. Maybe… I don't need to break down the wall. I swing at the ground this time, another thud.

"H-hey, don't you think we should-" "No. Not happening." Hmm, a little more motivation, then? I set it up against the wall and scrape it sideways.

"Give me the card, I'll go through!" "I told you, I'm not-"He stops, probably now recognizing that the scratching was heading in the direction of the door itself. "…Get behind me."

They race to the door, and I do the same except go past it and hide in the dark corner, making sure my shield is still up. The door slides open and a well-prepared man with a rifle steps through first, followed by someone clutching a pistol with both hands. Now, how to make this work…

Well, I could always do –that– but it's a really dick move… whatever, what works works.

One large step into a jump, twisting my body to kick the one lagging behind, propelling myself off of him and directly into the hallway he used to be in. "Agh- what?!" Landing on one foot, I twist correctly to throw the mace at the control panel, which breaks and sends the door slamming shut.

Now run, just run.

Double doors. The first pair I've seen in this complex, and most likely the location of my objective. It's only been a few minutes since the lockdown, so I shouldn't have much trouble. That doesn't mean it hurts to be prepared. The door is locked at this point, and having no other way of entry, the mace in my hand will be my key in.

Charging forward, I begin to swing the mace upwards as the doors- open?!

"Eh-"

There's no time for protest as the chubby man from the doors goes flying through the room and lands on the wooden desk in the back. The desk barely holds as I hear the crack of bone breaking and the man falling on the floor, spilling a document full of papers everywhere.

The hell is that wood made out of? I've heard of some Cuban tree whose wood was hard enough to break down concrete, but…

What the hell, I have what I need here. But papers are going to be difficult to carry all the way out. They do have the information I have; I just need to find a way to-

"Summary of all events is in the USB drive."

Oh yea, they're techies. It takes a while to find the small drive among the piles of paper, but once it's in my hand I'm gone.

"Hope you've found a way out. Target secured, headed to garage."

And if so, can you confirm or deny whether or not that Homu is us?

Southern end of the complex, a perfect square from overhead; It wasn't hard to find the end location. It was more of a problem trying to be stealthy as a black blob in the middle of snow.

"Hurry the fuck up," an annoyed voice comes over the radio. "The corpses are starting to really stink."

"You're fault for killing everyone."

"It's my –job– dumbass. Yours getting what we need and getting over here." I sigh in resignation and get to the roof, finding a loose hatch and prying it open. Once I get down, I immediately see an antique car; one with no actual hood unless you raise the black curtain in the back, with a long haired redhead in the front seat. And corpses, lots of dead people.

"Open the door and let's get out." Climbing into the shotgun seat, I take one more look at the interior of the car, and god damn it looks expensive. "And seriously, this kind of car?"

"Hey, gotta make a show when you go, right?" Finally, I notice the trigger she has in her hand.

Oh, mother fucker.

I cover my eyes as the explosion of C4 and grenades blows open the garage door, and immediately afterwards the engine revs up and the car bolts out the door.

And Megan was laughing all the way-

"STOP THE CAR!"

My head was down after the blast, trying to rid my ears of the constant ringing. When I popped my head back up, I saw the one thing we didn't want and yelled out. The car brakes screeched in protest as the car came to stop near a cliff side.

"Fuck! Dead end!"

We're supposed to meet at the bottom for the pickup, but this is making things hard. With more roars of engines behind us, we're trapped unless-

Hmm. Fuck it. I kick the door open and resummon the mace. I ignore the cries of "what the fuck are you doing?" as I swing the mace and break the door off. Megan asks again, louder this time as I carry the broken door to the cliff.

"I want to live, is that a problem?!" I yell back, setting the door down and getting myself ready. "If you want to live too I'd suggest getting over here!"

"You're fucking insane!" Looking back, she hesitates immensely, eyes darting back and forth until she sees the cars coming from behind. She swears to the air and any gods above as she runs to me and gets on my back, pushing the door down and riding the slope.

"Out in style right?"

"Fuck you!"

The chaos already begins. A few shots miss us from the firing squad up at the top, and I barely manage to drive the door-sled out of the way.

"Contact the heli! Tell them to meet at the bottom!" I need to narrow my eyes against the wind, steering ourselves right and hopefully out of sight. It's difficult with Megan's arms wrapped around my waist Man, this is great. I should do this stuff more often.

"I think we're being followed!" Her yells make me aware of the approaching sound of motors. They're most likely on some of those skis, and armed.

"I'm leaving it to you!"

"You're expecting me to do that?!?"

"I'M DRIVING!"

She groans loudly, shifting herself so she can get her whip out of the container on the back. The sparks fly as she rips out the spiked chains, letting them fall onto the snow behind us as we continue sliding down the mountainside. It's pretty clear for now, but I can see the woodlands up ahead. That's going to be difficult.

"Go left! I can get one there!" I lean over to that direction but it's quite enough to get where we need to go.

"You need to lean too!"

"Right."

"You said left!"

"RAAAAAAGH!"

She manages to pull it off in the end by making it explode, probably by overloading the electricity in the engine to enormous amounts. Well, I'm not a physics expert so only she really knows.

"Another one on the right! With an uzi!"

"Left is the safer way down!"

"We're gonna get shot!"

"I got that covered." Soon after the car door and both of us are encased in the usual barrier, not bothering with the color. Bigger ones are easier to break, but since we're all moving like this it shouldn't be a problem. "Evasive maneuvers incoming!"

We finally breach the forest, shifting left and right to avoid the trees and bushes scattered. The motors in the distance falter a bit, and it seems only the good drivers are chasing after us from here. Shots are fired at us, but any that don't miss or hit a tree are absorbed by the shield.

"Heads up!"

"What-"A foot in the air; that's all we jump after going over a bump but it causes her to scream a bit and hold onto me for dear life. She curses as we land.

"I warned you! What, a little scared of heights?"

"RIIIIIIGHT!"

…Shit. Well, someone had to bring in the bang.

"Heli, get out of here! They have RPGs!" Megan quickly shouts into her com, but I grab it right after and yell into it.

"Delay that order, move up! I have an idea!"

"Have I mentioned you're FUCKING CRAZY?!"

"Too late to get off the ride now!" I begin to lean right, looking out for the extra riders, if any are still here. "Megan, one at eight-thirty, take him out!" The door slides over as she reaches out with her whip, wrapping it around the handles and pulling the ski and driver over to us. They crash nicely into a tree, though some debris gets a bit too close.

“ETA ten seconds, Gina!” The radio buzzes in from the pilot of the helicopter. Everything seems to be going alright.

“Don’t worry about anything! Think of this as glory points for Eightball!” I encourage the furious girl behind me.

“You’re still going to pay for this!” Megan still gets ready for the inevitable as the heli begins to pop into view and gets into position. The cliff is getting closer too. The shot is fired.

It’s time. “NOW!”

Both our legs push off the door at the same time as it goes over the edge. The barrier bursts and gives us an extra boost as it leaves us behind, hurtling back to the snow becoming a shield for the incoming rocket. The ladder from the helicopter swings as both of us grab onto it, Megan just underneath me. Looking back, the owner of the RPG can’t stop himself from falling over a ways right of us.

“Get us out of here!” I yell upwards as I climb the ladder up. Once inside I slump right against the same seat I was in when we came in. Megan shoots me a death glare as I give her a thumbs-up when she enters.

“I have a severe disliking towards you.” She grumbles as she slowly gets to her seat.

“Love ya too, Megan.” Filled with complete sarcasm. And now it was my turn to laugh, all the way home. Completely spent.

Today was a good day.

(I probably didn't do as well as I hoped)

I get this question a bit! I was really expecting Midori to be just blasted out of the story the moment she appeared, but when she became more and more important I had to come up with things for her, and integrate her into the storyline! Some parts of MGNQ would not be taken up at all if it hadn't been for Chiaki sparing her life!

It's been an eye-opening experience for me then to make sure all the characters I introduce are at least story-friendly, and not just make throwaways!

I know it's not a co-incidence. I just find it amusing that despite the fact we already have about three or four versions of Homura, we keep pulling in more and more Homu-alikes too.

They exist and have shown up in various writeups. I remember some were girls who left/abandoned/got booted from their officios, but I'd guess theres also some incubator shenanigans where random girls get contracted.

If there is an Incubator for the "Farming" Officio, I wouldnt be the least bit surprised if he was mass contracting girls just for the sake of having them witch out for grief seed harvest. That is a thing that this setting hasn't explored very much; I feel like there are far more grief seeds in this universe than the scarcity in PMMM implied.

Shenanigans are going on in order to keep our MG's fed.

I don't think Incubators care what they're supposed to do given that they get away with it anyway. One magical girl wiped a fucking city off the face of the earth with bilogical weapons, man, and nobody gave a fuck, she's still running around willy-nilly. Planet Earth in this setting is officially a playground where everything magical can just do whatever it wants and anyone making a move against them is crushed like nothing.

Okay, this is plainly stupid, and I wonder why it keeps coming up. Are you unable to do the math? It takes energy to create a Magical Girl, more than is returned from the average Grief Seed.
Contracting a girl just to Witch her out for her Grief Seed would put you in the energy hole so bad that Home Office would have you recalled.

Not really. It just needs to be put out of it's misery. This world is beyond healing, all one can do is inject the cyanide and hope it acts faster than the festering sickness infecting it.

Luckily, it seems like Pinky and / or Homura provide in that respect at the end of this story. It will be fast and painful, but at least it will be over.

not nessiciarily - as I figure it, it's the wild mood swings between hope and despair before the final crunch that generate the energy.

So, if you had a way of making their moods fluctuate (say, a green haired Callidus with neat illusion powers), potentially you could make it worth your while to intentionally witch out a magical girl.

>intentionally witch out ones own MG's
>Implying I implied any such thing
You don't have to force anything.
What I mean is closer to what was happening in the TV series, wherein an incubator makes a contract with a girl, leaving out the critical information on the MG process, and sits back and watches as the MG's wish goes tits-up and she witches out, ready for the clean-up crew to harvest for a grief seed.

Face it, there are far too many seeds to be floating around for the amount of MGs in operation, with respect at least to the 9th's staff.

In one write-up it was stated that a retired MG gets a pension of 2 seeds per month, and I think its a conservative estimate that an active duty MG is going to consume at least twice that amount.

Now look at the 9th, 1000 MGs, at most half of which are actively fighting witches. Thats 4000 witches a month, 8 per month for witch-fighter, or about 2 witches per week. Now if fewer MGs are on witch duty and/or seed consumption is higher, things get even messier.

Also, Waluigi night only got locked in a basement 2 years ago, and there are 18 other officios to feed as well.

Shenanigans are happening.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/14/13(Sat)07:44 No.28854341

"My Chiaki. My Sempai."

These were the words that you last heard before you yourself fell asleep, in the embrace of your own Callidus - a Callidus too drunk to realize what she was saying, and too asleep to withdraw it in a nervous, stuttering denial.

You didn't mind. You'd long accepted the fact that she did have feelings for you, even though you weren't at all sure how real they were - if they were only just based on some imaginary version of you. A version who never drank and simply brooded; who could always shut down any argument with a glare and a glib, cutting reply; who was perfect in every cold, chilling way, and was taller and less noodlier besides. An ideal version of you.

A version that you'll never live up to no matter how hard you tried.

Except for the complete and total bitch part. You'd like to think you'd never be that kind of person, no matter how low you got.

And you'll admit it, half of you wanted her to realize that you were nothing like she fantasized. That the ugly, rank truth would penetrate the pink haze of whatever shoujo nonsense filled her mind and allow her to finally come to her senses, to see you as who you really were. Someone generally unlikeable, unreliable, and absolutely unworthy of her affection - much less an iota of her sympathy or attention. Someone who would, in all probability, get her killed.

But no. Even after everything you've put her through, she'd stood by you, every step of the way. Even when you yourself had attacked her, nearly murdered her in a fever of gold and bloodlust. Even when the very demons haunting you came after her, blood frothing from their mouthfuls of teeth, staining their pink dresses crimson.

Half of you wanted her gone. The other half of you wanted her to stay and never leave.

Even if the rest of you knew full well that her staying with you would put her in much more danger than you could ever protect her from.

You are a Magical Girl, and it's with a cold start that you wake up.

You open your eyes, for what feels like the first time in a very long while. The sunlight, harsh despite the curtains shielding you, streams from your bedroom window - stinging enough that you close your eyes in reflex and turn away.

Your body - unused to sleeping for so long, so deeply, and on something so strange and unfamiliar as a bed - is aching and painful, but not terribly so. There's a bit of pain moving this and that, and you think it'll be a while still before you can walk and stand without wincing, but overall you feel...well, rested. You probably wouldn't be this achey if you'd slept in your usual way, but you could've also woken up worse.

You manage to open your eyes now - and, still squinting as you fumble for your glasses, you realize that you're alone on the bed.

Hanegawa Midori is gone. Vanished.

A rumpled bedspread and a pitted pillow the only trace of the girl that had cuddled you to her chest until you fell asleep in her grasp.

How do you react?

Before panic - reasonable, everyday panic, strictly not induced by paranoia at all - could grasp you, you force yourself to rmain calm. Willing down the compulsion to jump out of bed, transform, and search the entire cottage room to room.

Calm down. Nothing's wrong, you tell yourself as you slowly sit up on bed. She probably just woke up first and...went off somewhere. There's no need to panic--

It's here, then, that you catch a whiff something in the air. Just a hint of it, but all the same, clear and significant, setting itself apart from the smell of wood and pine floating from the forest outside.

Something familiar. Something pleasant and inviting.

Pancakes. Someone's making pancakes.

You could also hear voices outside. ...Kumatora and Kyoko training, from how the former is audibly pleading for the former to 'cut it out, I tapped already, uncle, uncle, no please don't set me on fire'.

...If those two were comfortable enough with the situation that they're actually sparring, then things are okay. It's okay. Midori's okay.

You glance down at the spot on the bed where she'd been sleeping, and place your hand on it.

Still warm. Not all that much, but definitely some left.

Heh. Strange. You seem to be finding yourself sharing beds with other people more often. Well, twice for Midori, anyway. And once, during a dream, where you woke up groping a brown-haired girl who looked like she needed much more sleep than you ever did.

You shake your head at this. It's...no. Later. It's too early to think about that. Too early to think about her.

[]Look for Midori. She's probably in the kitchen.
[]Stay in bed for a bit longer. Call the office, check up on NECO.

No, it's too early to think about HER, either. NECO can wait for a bit longer in the Silent Room you've had her thrown into last night, after she all but ruined your date with Midori. A date that had been going well enough, despite all your inadvertent attempts to ruin it yourself.

You lever yourself off the bed and stumble into the bathroom, relieving yourself, as well as cleaning yourself up as reasonably as anyone could expect you to at this ungodly time of day. You stumble out a moment later, with your face washed and your mouth rinsed, and it's here that you begin your search for the green-haired Callidus that you were supposed to have woken up with.

Predictably, you find her in the kitchen part of the cottage, cooking the lone breakfast item that you were very comfortable replacing any other meal of the day with. You didn't even need to follow the scent of cooking pancakes, although you did, sniffing the air every step of the way.

...She's humming a tune as she's cooking, swaying her hips gently from side to side. The pink apron worn over her emerald pajamas cinching the loose silk fabric to her waist, showing off the silhouette underneath.

Watching her flip a pancake onto an ever-increasing pile on a plate beside the stove - it's here that you realize that Midori hasn't noticed your presence yet. Giving you the element of surprise.

How do you greet Midori?

[]A hug from behind.
[]A friendly slap on the bottom.

She's cooking breakfast for you. She's cooking breakfast pancakes for you.

After everything she's done for you, she's actually--

You couldn't help it. You wanted to admire her view from behind a bit more - the cute swing of her hips certainly mesmerizing to watch - but you couldn't resist walking up and gently, carefully, wrapping your arms around her. Hugging her close, relishing her body heat, and secretly enjoying the way she gasped in surprise when you did so.

You press your face against her hair, against the back of her neck, and breathe deep.

It's a different scent. Different than what you're used to, different than what you usually associate with the one who makes you pancakes...but it's a nice scent. Something you can easily get used to, you think.

Mornings like these...they can make you forget that you're in a world where horrible shit is about to happen, and it's all your fault somehow.

You mumble the proper greeting into her ear, and she lets out another gasp.

"S-Sempai...!" She barely just manages to speak, here, the frying pan and spatula in her hands shaking ever so slightly, before being carefully replaced on the stove. There's a click as the stove is shut off, and it's here that you hear her - and feel - take a couple of slow, deep breaths. As if trying to compose herself enough to talk. "Um, you...you too..."

You too? What kind of greeting is that?

"Eh? A-ah, oh...I meant, g-good morning, too, sempai." You look over her shoulder and see that Midori seems to be flailing just a bit with her hands, first wringing them together, then resting them on the edge of the counter where the stove was resting, before wringing them again. As if flustered to the point that she couldn't exactly settle down, nor find out just what to do with her hands.

It's an amusing display, one that you watch in silence, before she finally places her hands on top of yours, feather-light and slightly shaky.

"Did...did sempai sleep alright...?" She turns slightly to smile at you from the corner of her vision. "I wanted to, um, surprise you with breakfast in bed, but..." The green-haired Callidus gestures to the plate beside the stove, where a decently-tall stack of pancakes were gently steaming in the cool air. She lets out an awkward giggle, letting the sentence hang in the silence between you.

How do you respond?

You don't really have an answer to that, considering she didn't let you sleep much last night.

"E-eh?" Midori freezes in your grasp again. "Did...was I moving too much, or something? I--"

You squeeze her just a bit tighter, before murmuring that she needs to take responsibility, now.

You realize you're not exactly wife material here, but you're definitely ruined for marriage after what she did.

"S-sempai!" It's here, then, that Midori whirls around in your grasp, turning to face you - and you blink as the soft, warm back you were nuzzling is swiftly replaced with a soft, warm apron-clad bosom. Her hands coming up to plant themselves firmly on your shoulders, and you blink up to see her flushed, tearful face. "N-no, sempai, t-there must be some kind of mistake! I don't remember all that much from last night, it's all a blur! I can't...I m-mean, I'll happily take responsibility, but I want to remember it this time, and--!!"

Whoa, whoa. Okay. You were just joking, there. Nothing....nothing like that happened.

"Eh?!" Midori's eyes go wide, here. "B-but...t-the pajamas, sempai...! A-and, I remember us, um, kissing, and...and..." Her cheeks reddening as she holds up fingers to her lips. "I...I can't forget that..."

Yes. You two kissed. You initiated it. And you enjoyed it, too.

But, um. Something happened, and you took her to bed right afterward. Where nothing happened except just sleeping, after the both of you changed into pajamas.

Of course you're going to leave out that you changed her into the damn pajamas. That was something out of necessity, dammit.

"But...I...I thought...so that meant..." Midori seems all but ready to cry, now, as realization dawns - and she buries her face in both hands. "This...this is so embarrassing..."

It's fine, you tell her. You enjoyed the date - all of it, including the chance to actually sleep like a normal person for once. Just that she should try and keep the booze out of it next time.

"I...I promise I'll never touch it ever again, sempai!" Midori looks up from her hands, red-faced. "I just...I just thought it'd help me relax, and stop...being like this all the time you're around..."

You blink at this, before shaking your head. Alcohol's a friend, sure, but not one you'd trust anything to. It's either for drowning sorrows or rounding corners - both situations where being drunk is happily acceptable. You're not all that well-versed in dating, but you're pretty sure being sauced isn't a desired state of being during it.

"I know that now, sempai," Midori hangs her head. "I'm sorry. I ruined everything, didn't I?"

What? You just said you enjoyed last night. Wasn't she listening?

"W-well, it's...um...I can't help but think that sempai is just trying to be polite..."

...Do you look or seem like the person who would lie just to be polite? Would Murder Mayumi lie to be polite?

You lift up Midori's face by her chin, gently, making her look at you. She blinks, here, before reddening again.

"No..."

So, that's settled, then.

In any case, you should probably get started on breakfast together, right?

"I...I suppose, sempai--"

Chiaki. She's forgetting again. You want her to call you Chiaki.

"Yes. S-sorry, Chiaki-sempai."

You let out a sigh here, but shake your head. You call for the two idiots still mucking about outside as you take your place on the small four-person dining table in the kitchen. Midori placing your plate of pancakes in front of you, amongst the rest of breakfast food already spread out - bread, eggs, sausages and bacon.

Midori is pouring you a tall glass of orange juice when both Kumatora and Kyoko walk in. The former is looking rather miserable, with one of her twintails considerably shortened, the ends singed. Both of them are also sporting bruises here and there, but fading moment by moment.

Eversors.

"Oh, morning, Murderface!" Kyoko cheerfully greets you, while Kumatora smiles and bows, all formality. "Didja sleep okay? It's nicer when you've got someone warm beside you, right?" The one-eyed Eversor guffaws here, with all her disgusting morning person-ness. She looks down at the full dining table and blinks her one good eye. "Wah, such a spread for breakfast! I knew you were gettin' tutored by Mami-chan, Midorin, but not like this!"

"I-it's really nothing, Miss Kyoko, it's just frying and stuff..." Midori murmurs, but clearly pleased with the praise.

"That's because Kyoko-SEMPAI's idea of cooking is the sort that only involves a microwave oven," Kumatora cuts in as she takes her own seat. "That, or takeout delivery. Or a can opener."

"Yeah, yeah, yuk it up. Maybe I'll tell Sayaka-chan ya forgot yer forms again today, see how you like it!" The red-haired Eversor snaps as she sits down, beside you. "Well, Murderface? Anything fun happen after I called?" She grins at you, eyebrows waggling up and down.

How do you respond?

The litmus test for how we handle any situation is "What would Malal have done?" and then we do the opposite.

So, via-a-vis NECO, the obvious solution is we don't speak to her. We march into the silent room, gun in hand. We sit down, put the gun on the table. and GLOWER at her without ever saying a word.

NECO will talk, because that's what she does. Sooner or later, she's going to say something that'll interest us.

She gets 15 minutes of us saying as little as possible. Then she gets the fuck out of our silent room and if she ever pulls anything like this again you will personally move her to the Kill On Sight list, Sayaka and Malal be damned.

PROSE MAGICA

((for more Canadian meguca goodness, catch the rest of PM here: http://pastebin.com/u/Grizzlyniisan))

Heavy breathing and jingling metal mixed with a howling gale. Odette ran, feeling the crunch of snow beneath her steel boots. It was still powdery and fresh - no more than an inch thick - making every step a fight to keep from slipping. She pushed forward, an arm held in front of her face to shield against the blinding snow. The world beyond a foot in front of her was a solid wall of twisting, swirling white. The cold bit at her skin and chilled her bones. Rime crept its way up the black cloak trailing down her back like a white shadow, raking her with icy talons.

Still, Odette ran. She couldn't afford to stop and breathe. Figures emerged from the edges of her vision as she moved, veiled in the blizzard. They grasped with desperate hands as cold as death. They begged for her to stop and look at them. She had to keep moving. The sound of blood pumping pounded a steady marching beat in her ears.

The silver-haired girl stumbled. Pain seared through her gloved hand as it scraped against the rough ice on the ground. As Odette regained her balance, she shoved the hand under her cloak and against her side. It forced her to lower her other arm, exposing her face to the biting cold. Snow and ice stung at her eye before she could shut it. A single, thin streak of ice ran down her cheek where tears had once been. The wind shrieked past her ears - a mournful, wailing noise.

Odette spared a quick, pained glance over her shoulder. It kept pace with her while maintaining an impossibly relaxed and deliberate saunter. No matter how fast she ran, it always seemed to keep pace with her. Odette ran ten metres and she'd turn around to find it two steps closer. Every now and again she'd mutter a quiet, "No, no, no," to herself, pleading for the world to pull over and let her off.

The cold had a way of sapping one's strength. She was stumbling more than ever; her legs begged her for rest. Soon enough, Odette fell to the ground. She couldn't be entirely sure if she'd tripped or if her feet had finally surrendered ahead of her mind. The icy ground stung her hands as Odette desperately tried to pull herself back up. Instead, she only succeeded in crawling a handful of feet before something smashed into her ribcage and knocked the wind out of her.

"I told you, didn't I?" An all too familiar voice asked. "Look at me."

Odette nearly dug her face into the snow. A hand seized a shank of her white hair and forced her face up, its fingers crackled as they moved and felt unnaturally rigid.

"LOOK AT ME!" The figure screamed.

She did. Odette stared at a face that was broken and twisted beyond recognition. It was deathly pale and tinged blue with frost. One eye was nothing more than a ragged, empty hollow. Worse yet were the figure's hands; from the elbow down, they were coated in what Odette could only imagine was frozen blood. Each crystalline, talon-like finger ended in a jagged point that poked and cut into the fallen girl's scalp.

Despite her best efforts, she couldn't quite tear her gaze away from the eldritch mirror image whose glare bore a hole through Odette's soul.

"There's a good girl," the mirror cooed, brushing a few stray strands of long, angelic white hair out of her face. "Look at yourself. Look at you, scrabbling around like an animal. You had a CHANCE. WE had a chance. You know, I bet that if you walked in right now, Therese would roll over and let you be Warmaster again. Instead... Instead, LOOK AT WHAT YOU DO!"

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 15 archivalfag 12/14/13(Sat)13:05 No.28857846

Odette's shadow yanked on her hair again, forcing her to arch her spine painfully.

"You come home with your tail between your legs, begging for them to let you prove yourself again," she spat, her face contorting into an expression of purest hate. "Well aren't you just the prodigal daughter. And then- And then you... I don't even want to say it. Not only do you sleep with that FUCKING whore, you MOVE IN WITH HER?! And I know what you plan on saying to her. Oh, do I know. You promised. You promised yourself, you promised US! Mark my words, Odette Brighton, you will regret it," the mirror image hissed, bringing herself so close that their noses almost touched. "You will suffer."

With her peace said, the twisted figure released Odette. As her head hit the ground, the ice began to crackle and pop. The last thing she saw before the ice gave way and plunged her into the waters below was a strange, misplaced glimpse of pink.

Icy waters gave way to cold sweat as Odette's eyes snapped open. She was home. It had only been her home for a span of a few hours, but it was home nonetheless. She wasn't just shivering - she was shaking so hard that she could barely move. Tears streamed down her face as she sat upright, hugging her knees. The blonde to her left recoiled in shock as her hand brushed up against Odette.

"Holy-! Jesus, Odette!" She cried, sitting up. "You're freezing!"

The one-eyed girl didn't respond. She only shook and whimpered faintly with each breath. Lotte gathered up every blanket on the bed, then wrapped Odette with them and hugged her tightly from behind.

"Hey. It's okay, I've got you," the Callidus cooed as she rocked Odette gently. "I'm here. You're safe."

She didn't. I don't think Malal is the diary author.

Infact, she was all set to give us a Homu identity before Kharn dubbed us Murderface.

Lotte kept whispering to her, reassuring her. There was a time, a bit shy of three years ago, that such things were a nightly ritual. It almost brought the blonde girl to tears seeing Odette like that again. Every night after the first Warmaster had died, she'd stayed with her. It had taken a month for Odette to finally be able to sleep undisturbed. The Callidus had almost become an expert at soothing her. She wrapped Odette in the sheets and held her, making sure to keep talking, never for a moment letting the other girl think that she was alone.

Just like old times, Odette stopped shaking - or at least calmed down to a slight shiver - after just under ten minutes. Lotte pulled her in closer and kissed the back of her white hair.

"You okay?" She asked, her face still buried in the other girl's hair.

Odette nodded without a word.

"You want a hot chocolate?"

The one-eyed girl shook her head. "Just stay like this," she mumbled, just above a whisper. "Just a little longer."

Cold as she was, sitting there buck naked, Lotte obliged. She knew enough not to say anything more. The fact that Odette had turned down something sweet to keep being held told the blonde all she needed to know. Neither of them quite knew how much time passed after those few spared words. To Lotte's surprise, it was Odette who chose to break the silence first. Only three words were spoken. Three simple words that were enough to open the floodgates and finally drive the Callidus to tears. Odette didn't even deign to lift her head as she muttered that which she had kept herself from saying for two years.

"I forgive you."

Several hours later, sunlight filtered in through the windows and threw stripes of light over the sleeping pair. Odette groaned softly as her brain churned to life. She was still mostly draped across Lotte's chest, her head cushioned by pillowy softness. The one-eyed girl pushed herself upright, stretching and yawning. A quick glance at the clock told her that it was already nine in the morning. As she tried to pull herself out of bed, Odette felt the Callidus' hand wrap around her own.

"Stay," Lotte murmured, a sleepy grin on her face.

"I'd love to," the silver-haired girl answered, giving the blonde's hand a squeeze, "but I've got work to do."

"It's not going anywhere."

Odette rolled her eyes and laughed at the Callidus. "Remember that 'fresh start' thing I was talking about? Besides, the quicker I wrap this case up, the quicker I can take you out somewhere nice."

"You- You mean like," Lotte muttered, suddenly sitting upright, "a date?"

The silver-haired girl laughed again as she lifted herself out of bed and began scouring the floor for her clothes. "Figured that'd get your attention," she said, unable to wipe the grin off of her face. "Yes, y'doof, like a date."

Lotte blinked. "This is real, right? This actually happening?"

Having thrown on some underwear and scooped up and armful of clothing, Odette leaned over the bed and gave the stunned blonde a firm flick on the forehead. "Real enough for you?"

"Well- I- Okay, um," Lotte stammered as she tried to find her words, "at least let me make you breakfast before you go."

"I can do breakfast," the one-eyed girl replied, throwing the blonde a winning smile. "But I should probably get cleaned up first."

Lotte nodded several times before everything seemed to register. Her eyes were still sore from crying earlier in the night; no doubt she had a pair of streaks down her face to match. It wasn't until she heard the dull roar of the shower being turned on that she finally pulled herself out of bed and threw on a t-shirt and pants as quickly as she could. Lotte had always managed to stay cool when it came to matters of the bedroom, but what came afterward was a different matter entirely. Usually she just said her good-byes and the two went their separate ways. Now she had to think of breakfast, not to mention the fact that the one-eyed girl LIVED there now.

By the time Odette stepped out of the shower, Lotte had already set down a glass of peach juice and a plate of blueberry toasted waffles. The blonde silently cursed herself for being so frugal with her grocery shopping. The one-eyed girl dried her silvery hair with a towel as she took her seat, letting out a satisfied sigh.

"Man," she started, taking a sip of her juice, "that was nice. I haven't had a hot shower in months."

"Wait, you," Lotte cocked an eyebrow at the other girl's comment, "you haven't had a shower in months?"

"A HOT shower, I said," Odette clarified as she began working on the waffle. "Just took cold showers at home, since I didn't want to run out of hot water. Not like it bothers me, anyway."

The blonde let out a quiet "hmph" as she rested her head on her hand, idly watching the former Warmaster eat. "So what's on today's agenda?"

Odette swallowed a mouthful of waffle, then tilted her head from side to side as she thought. "Gonna go interrogate that little shit," she answered. "Gotta talk to Holly about some stuff and get Sue back. After that, I dunno. Oh, need to talk to, uh, what's her name? Bernard, I think. How 'bout you?"

"Probably gonna go back to bed," Lotte sighed. "May's in town, so I might go hang out with her later."

"Mm. We should go see one of her shows together."

"Yeah?" The Callidus asked, her eyes going wide. "What, um, what if she sees us? Like, together? I'm never gonna hear the end of it..."

"Oh, I'm sorry," Odette laughed. "Were we supposed to keep the whole 'dating' thing a secret?"

"Well, no, I just- I thought that you-"

"Relax, Lotte," the silver-haired girl rolled her eye, smiling gently. "It's not like it's some big secret that we were already foolin' around. Even Foobs picked up on it."

"O-oh," Lotte murmured as her gaze wandered around the kitchen. "Dating, huh..."

"We've kinda been doing things in the wrong order, eh?"

"I guess so." A smile tugged at the edges of Lotte's lips as her eyes found their way back to Odette. "So, um, does that mean I can call you my- my girlfriend?"

"Beats me," Odette shrugged, taking a bite out of another forkful of waffle. "It's not like I've done this kind of thing before, either. But, I don't really mind it..."

The blonde nodded, smiling to herself. "Odette is my girlfriend," she muttered, trying out the phrase. "Odette is my girlfriend..."

The one-eyed girl simply laughed and shook her head. "You are such a dork."

It was rare for the Warmaster to call upon Fredrica Volk. It was rare for the new Warmaster to call upon anyone personally, for that matter. Sure, they had been partners for assignments in the past - one might have even called them friends - but the Warmaster seemed to have distanced herself from her old friends over the past week. Some said she was too broken up over Odette's disappearance, others that she was finally taking her job seriously.

Freddy shifted her weight as she stood at attention before the Warmaster, itching to fix a clip from her white shoulder-cape that was uncomfortably digging into her shoulder. Therese typed away at her computer, a large, flat, rectangular box sitting off to the side of her desk. The junior Eversor had already been waiting some time, trying to keep herself from imagining why the Warmaster might have called her in, or what the box on her desk might contain.

"Right," Therese finally announced, pushing her keyboard away. "I'm sure that you've heard the news about Frieda Norton by now, yes?"

Freddy nodded. She had heard, alright. The rumour going around was that her soulgem went and witched out at an airport in Calgary. Still, Freddy remained silent.

"You have my condolences. She was one of our best Callidus, third only to May and... Miss Laufson," the Warmaster stated, with no small hint of disdain in her voice as she spoke the second name. "Now, with the leader of the Valkyries gone, that leaves me in a bit of a predicament, as I'm sure you can imagine."

The boyish magical girl nodded a second time as she slowly began to realize what the contents of the box must be.

"You are well-respected among their ranks. Recommended by Odette herself, as I recall," Therese nodded as she pulled the black box in front of her and pried the lid off, revealing a black shoulder-cape, nearly identical to Freddy's own. "Which is why I believe it would be fitting for you to be Miss Norton's successor."

Freddy's eyes went wide as a mixture of surprise, joy and confusion coloured her face. "Terry, I-"

"Warmaster."

"Ah, Warmaster, I- I'm honoured," the Eversor gulped, trying to sort out her words. "I really am, and, I don't mean to be ungrateful, but... does this mean I won't be getting the promotion to, um, to Rank Leader?"

Therese cocked an eyebrow as a wry grinned crept up her cheek. "And what makes you think that, Fredrica?"

"Well, it's just, y'know," Freddy stammered, fidgetting with the hem of her jacket, "traditionally, a- a Rank Leader couldn't be a member of the Valkyries. It's- it's how we've always done things and-"

"Traditions change, Freddy," her superior replied as she leaned back in her chair, giving the junior Eversor a smile that seemed so very unlike her. "This is no longer Odette's officio, or Brie's for that matter. Out with the old, in with the new, as they say."

"So... so you're saying that I am getting the promotion?"

"If you'll accept it, that is. It's been a long time coming, if you ask me."

"Wing Captain and Rank Leader..." Freddy murmurred, letting the thought trail off.

"The very first."

"Well, shit," the Eversor laughed, grinning sheepishly, "if you put it like that, how could I say no?"

"Excellent!" Therese smiled, clapping her hands together. She lifted the box from her desk, holding it out to Freddy in a rather reverent manner. "Then by all means, try it on."

The black-haired Eversor nodded, sighing with relief as she finally got to unclasp the white cape from her shoulder. She picked up the black one with all the respect any Valkyrie would give it, feeling its weight in her hands. It was silk - top quality silk, at that - in contrast to the cotton of her old one. The pair of golden clasps that every Valkyrie's cape bore were adorned with round, brilliant cut diamonds. It was awe-inspiring in a way. All of Freddy's idols had once worn that same cape; Odette and Therese, along with just about any past or present Rank Leader in the Seventeenth.

"I've got some big shoes to fill, huh?" Freddy asked, unable to supress the smile on her face as she put on the new cape.

"You'll do just fine, Freddy," the Warmaster assured her. "There will be changes around here in the coming weeks, and I look forward to having someone of your talent by my side."

The boyish Eversor saluted, thumping a fist over her heart. "I won't let you down, my lady."

"I should hope not," Therese laughed, waving the newly-appointed Wing Captain off. "Dismissed. I'll give you a couple hours to prepare something to say before we make it official."

Freddy bowed her head without a word before she turned to leave. After hearing the click of the door closing, Therese spun about in her chair, twirling a pen between her fingers.

"'My lady', huh?" She laughed, smiling from ear to ear. "I like the sound of that."

(Catch up on http://pastebin.com/u/WendyCooldown if you like crazy.)

I stared numbly at the television screen in my hotel room, now nothing but a spiderweb of cracks over a black abyss with a smartphone sticking out of part of it. The audio was still going – it was a scene from Return of Killerman, the original cut from 1982, I think. Hadn’t heard it in Japanese before, but I recognized the sound effects, and the lines were roughly the same.

This was the part where the restless spirits kidnapped Ken, and they shoved him…fuck. I couldn’t even keep it straight. I think that was Killerman’s Revenge? I’d only seen these movies eighteen million times, but my mind was a blank. Even went on the theme park ride over and over again. My dad would take me like, once a month. Lied about my age to get me in, because it was one of the only things he could get me out of my room for back then. He was happy to see me happy.

So was she. Man, she emptied out the theater that one time because-Fuck. Don’t think about it. Don’t think about her.

You broke the TV, dumbass, what else are you going to think about?

Her mocking laughter filled the room, and I hissed aloud.

“Fuck off. I’m not in the mood.”

Ooh, but she was gonna do it right this time. Kissed you and everything. Gonna make up for the birthday you missed being dead. Hers, I mean. Not like she even knew yours, right?

Her voice came in clearer now. She was Here, sitting behind me. I could smell her. Just like the real thing – sweat and blood, with a hint of beam katana ozone.

“I told you I’m not in the FUCKING mood.” My head snapped toward her. The room around us was different already, bathed in a soft, girly pink. The bed under her looked a hell of a lot softer than the shitty hotel bed I’d been sleeping on.

Christ, you’re easy today. She cackled with a disgusting, oily voice. A mockery of Nico’s. Her face was twisted into a permanent grin, gouged with pools of black that barely resembled human features, and sunny-blonde hair was glued to her face and shoulders with something I couldn’t quite recognize.

Come on, you didn’t visit her for half a year. What does she care? Why should she? She forgot you, and she deserved to. Probably for the best; you remember what happened the LAST time you had a-

My knife found its way into her face on its own, and I leapt on her, pulling it out and shoving it back into her, over and over again. Screams and laughter rocked the hotel room, but I was sure nobody else could hear them. She tried to talk, so I stabbed her in the fucking mouth. Tried to grab me, so I stabbed her in the fucking hand. There was no blood, no ichor even, just nothing, as the room blossomed pink around me and the puke-green carpet turned to checkerboard tile.

Fuck. FUCK.

I slammed my hand down on the bed and poised my knife over it. Needed to focus. Needed to get a grip. Fear is the mind-killer. Pain is the antidote. …No. No no no. No.

I released my grip on it slowly and sat back. Don’t do that to yourself, Wendy. You know better than that, now. Just take deep breaths, pinch your cheek, and hold it. Hold it until you wake up. …Wasn’t sure if I was talking to myself, or if it was one of them again.

…Who the fuck was she? Some fat bitch with green hair. No problem. I could manage that. I could definitely manage that, it wasn’t that different from my Kikiyama Aoi disguise. Just tweak a few things, let my hair down…looked a little like a chubby Miss Marigold, right? I stood up to turn the TV off and yank my phone out of it, get another look at her.

At the girl that stole my Kong.

Wendy. You’re in a tight spot, remember? Tighter than tight. Tighter than the tightest t-shirt at the tight t-shirt-

“Shit,” I grumbled aloud. It was someone else from the legions of people I didn’t want to deal with. A short girl with messy pink hair and ghost-white eyes, with a voice that was like nails on glass filtered through an old radio. She pretended to be someone I didn’t like in the first place, but I was pretty sure she wasn’t real. Maybe. I mean, she was sometimes.

They all were.

…Now's not the time to be screwing around, is what I'm getting at, here. I know all you like to do when you're upset is stab people until it works, but-

She was absolutely right, as my knife flew into her head, too. Rather than screaming, though, she just sighed and went limp, until I'd stabbed her enough to convince myself she wasn't real.

FUCK FUCK FUCK WHO THE FUCK EVEN IS SHE. She's just screwing everyone in her fucking high-rise office now, I bet. Didn't remember me, just made up some stupid promise to get in my pants later, and I fell for it, because I'm hopeless and I'm retarded and I broke the stupid fucking TV and I can't even finish watching the Killerman marathon and what do I even have left?

This was bullshit. It wasn't my fault. I didn't wanna die. I didn't want to be gone. I came back for her, goddammit. I tried. Everything got weird, and we had to hide from the First, and…

…And it didn't matter. It didn't matter anymore. I jammed my knife into my pillow, then buried my face in next to it. Nothing mattered. This was all a huge waste of time. I should have stayed dead. Malal was right.

"…Hey." A gentle voice came from behind me, and a small hand squeezed my shoulder. "…Hey, Wendy…"

"…Leave me alone."

"…Cheer up, buttercup."

"She promised."

"I know." She sat down on the edge of the bed and ran her fingers through my hair, and undid my braids and everything. Brushed it out, just like Miss Tomoe would, as I tried to hate everything away into my pillow.

"It's Hanegawa Midori. Her family used to run that ramen place by Deli Heal, with the banana ramen. Do you want me to kill her?" …It was a question that would have been horrifying for any other person in any other context, I guess. I didn't say anything for a long time.

Yes I wanted her dead. Fuck her. Fuck her for taking away the last thing I fucking had.

…But I shook my head. Wouldn't solve anything. It'd just crush her, too. She was a stupid asshole, she'd always been a stupid asshole. But she didn't deserve that.

I'm a god damn professional. I don't kill out of spite. It'd be high-profile now, anyway. No way to get out of it without some serious shit.

I probably looked like shit – no, I knew I looked like shit. I hadn't bothered changing…

anything. Left my hair down. Tossed my disguise – wasn't a good idea to use magic right now, if those things were just crawling out, but mostly I couldn't even pretend to give a damn. Nakajima barely managed to force me into clean clothes before she dragged me out, and there we were, trying to act like nothing was fucking wrong.

"Sayaka-chan and I get lunch here sometimes. It's way different than the American ones, right?"

…Tasted like shit. I wanted something from Burger Suplex, but-

"Dooon't. Don't sit and think about home right now, okay? When you're done with whatever crazy cult bullpoop you have to do here-"

We, I reminded her.

"-we have to do here, we can get a teleport there and get something to go." She popped a fry into her mouth, sliding it between pale pink lips with one smooth movement. …Ugh. I really needed to get laid or something, if I was starting to notice that stuff on Nakajima.

"…Heeeee. I know that look. You'll have to fight Sayaka-chan for me, though." Gross.

…Wait, didn't Mickey have a girlfriend? When I asked, she choked on her burger and started to giggle, holding her hand in front of her mouth to make sure nothing flew out.

"Mmmm." And once she managed to calm down, she took a long slurp from her shake. "That's the difference between you and me, Wendy. You let little details stop you. Defeatist, is what it is. That's why you just sat and cried when you-"

I wasn't crying.

"That's why it STARTED RAINING like the second you got some bad news. If you didn't let it get to you so much, you'd be like, HELL YEAH I'M GONNA CHOKE THAT BITCH AND STEAL MY WOMAN BACK, or something. I'm really surprised you're not."

"So like, is that the plan, or…" she prompted me again after a second.

...Didn't really know. I wanted her to be happy.

"Well…you could go back to Miss Tomoe, too. Didn't you spend like a week at her fuck cabin last month, or something?" My soda launched down into my lungs, sending me into a coughing fit. I could feel my cheeks burning red as I tried to stutter out a response.

"I knew it, it IS a fuck cabin! Just do that, you're into her, right? Haven't you been magical girls together like forever? She gives you those googly eyes when she visits." …Little fucker was practically vibrating with excitement

Miss Tomoe looked at everyone like that. That was what her eyes looked like. That was what she did, she made a bunch of soulless assholes feel like they could be people again. I shifted and leaned back in my seat – this whole topic was a lot more personal than I liked to get into.

“Don’t be such a pussy, Wendy. Seriously.” …It was something I’d only seen a handful of times. Nakajima’s smile dropped, and she gave me a stone serious look, one that seemed completely out-of-place on her face.

“Crackers, are you really going to fold just because your girlfriend dumped you? You DIED and you didn’t take it this bad. Nut up or witch out already.”

As soon as it had appeared, Nakajima’s serious face vanished, and she stuffed another mouthful of fries in her gaping maw. She said something or other, but I sure as hell couldn’t understand it.

…Try and win her back? Or just go after Miss Mami instead? …Seemed like going either way would suck, but Nakajima had a point. It was better than sitting around talking to myself and waiting to die. Again.

…Well, it was enough. Enough to go on, for now. But I wasn’t looking forward to seeing Murde…seeing Miss Matsuda again. We needed to have a Fucking Talk, and neither of us was going to like it.

Except it is different. "Do what she wants" is not "blithely allow her to tresspass on the Warmaster's private dinner date." Just because SHE thinks she has something important to tell us doesn't mean that WE should be expected to personally attend to her, or allow her free reign of the premises at Mami's sex cabin.

That said, we definitely shouldn't kill her. Just let her contemplate her poor life choices in the Silent Room overnight, and then in the morning, while we're eating our pancake breakfast, she has a brief interview with a surly Eversor and a reasonable Vindicare. While this is going on, some nerds from IT bug her phone, delete her chirps, and erase all the photos from her camera and cloud storage. We then send her on her way with some stern warnings and the report is filed on our desk for perusal at our leisure. If we feel it warrants followup, we arrange a meeting on our terms: this time someone much scarier asks the questions, while we listen in an adjacent room.

Nakajima flat out tells her to suck it up, because she doesn't let Kyoko get between her and Sayaka. She's basically implying to Wendy that its okay to share.

Quite frankly, while I'd normally disapprove, Sayaka maybe-cheating on Kyoko may have saved our asses here
~~because lord knows that the Wendyfags have fucked us all over enough already.~~

Doesn't, actually. She mirrors Chiaki to an eerie degree. The only difference there is between them is that Chiaki had Mami and the others to pull her onto a right course and Wendy was roped into a cult about worshipping a murde godess. All she needs is a guiding hand and she'll be right as rain in basically no time. And implying her old flame isn't the very best for that.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/15/13(Sun)07:57 No.28876489

You ignore Kyoko's baiting jibe at you and simply greet both Eversors good morning. Due to your surprising Midori just before she could finish getting your pancakes ready, she'd served them without syrup and butter - and as such, you busy yourself applying these two important elements to your breakfast. Carefully and deliberately, with your complete attention focused wholly on the task.

"...Look at her. It's like she's assemblin' a bomb or something." You could tell Kyoko's grinning without looking at her. "Midorin, watch carefully if you want to lock down the making-pancakes-for-Murderface market, yeah? Murderface is really particular about just how much syrup an' butter's on her pancakes, and if you get it wrong she'll just say 'it's okay' and pout the rest of the damn day."

She guffaws, here. "Mami got it right after tons of trial an' error, and I'm betting she's never going to teach you that unless you get to her Master Class or something."

>> ☐ Deculture 12/15/13(Sun)07:59 No.28876504

>>28876489

"O-oh! I...I guess I should--" Midori replies, and you finally look up to frown at Kyoko. Her grin only grows wider, and you shake your head at this, before telling Midori not to believe that. You're not THAT anal with your pancakes, for fuck's sake. Kyoko should shut up with the lies and slander, here--

"Says the person who's using a teaspoon to spoon syrup over her pancakes." The Eversor shoots back. "Normal people just pour the damn thing over, no questions asked. You're even counting!" Kyoko shakes her head as she begins to fill her plate with eggs and bacon. "How many teaspoons was that again? Twenty teaspoons of syrup for a stack of five, add five more for every pancake beyond that?"

Silence. Awkward silence.

You look up at the stares coming from all sides of the table, the smoking gun of a teaspoon in your grasp.

...It's...it's just that you have a particular idea of how much syrup you like, that's all, you try to explain to the silent table. Too little and the plate goes bland and dry, too much means too sweet and soggy. A balanced amount is best, and--

"Yeah, yeah." Kyoko grins as she lifts up her glass of orange juice to her lips, about to take a sip. "See, Midorin? Ya can always trust the word of an Eversor. We never lie."

...Except, of course, about leaving mysterious stains on bear skin rugs, you note as casually as you can. Causing Kyoko to choke on her orange juice, coughing most of it out in a spray.

"BY DOSE! ID WEND UP BY DOSE!" The red-haired Eversor screeches, a look of pain and anguish contorting her features as she leans back. "God Dabbit, Burdervase!"

Kumatora, who'd been pecking at her own breakfast at the moment, shoots Kyoko a look - one that said just how much she thought the red-haired Eversor deserved it - and then nods at you.

"Warmaster, um, not to change subjects so suddenly, but...may I ask what you plan on doing to the prisoner we took back to headquarters last night? She seemed...um, generally harmless, when we got her. Still fought like a cat the entire time, but..." It's here that she shrugs. "She doesn't seem to be magical or anything. Just a really persistent reporter."

How do you respond?

NECO, huh? You consider Kumatora's question as you cut out the very first portion from your stack of perfectly-syruped, perfectly-buttered pancakes, working carefully and deliberately with both knife and fork. Does she really think NECO's as harmless as all that?

Kumatora blinks at this, before nodding. "W-well, um, it's my opinion that she is, Warmaster. I mean, besides what she did last night, I...I don't believe she's that much of a security threat, if we're taking her as one. She just seems like someone who's really, really enthusiastic about you, though... kind...kind of like a creepy fangirl? Or a stalker?"

You ignore Midori choking on her own orange juice - misting Kyoko in the face with it, causing the Eversor to screech again - as you lift up your fork up to your face, examining the impaled chunk of layered pancakes you'd just hacked off of your pile. Nodding to it - and to yourself - in satisfaction, it's here that you deposit the portion into your mouth and begin to chew, closing your eyes to focus on the taste and texture more. You swallow after a few moments.

...Not bad. Still not as good as Mami's pancakes, but getting there. Definitely getting there.

You work on your second portion as you reply. While you agree with what Kumatora believes about NECO, something tells you that there's more to the pesky, meddling snoop besides being a pesky, meddling snoop of a journalist. There's also the fact, too, that the things she publish could put some people in harm's way, especially if those people are on missions or under cover. And you don't like that at all, not one bit.

"Then...are you...?" Kumatora leans forward here, as if unable to contain her curiosity. "Um, I mean, will the Warmaster..."

You shake your head. You know where she's getting at, and as quick and clean as that solution would be, it's not on the table yet. Honestly, you'll probably just give her enough of a scare, hopefully that'll set her straight.

"Huh. Sayaka-chan wasn't kidding." Kyoko seems impressed, here, pausing from stuffing her face full of breakfast. "Maybe we'll have to think of another nickname for you after all, Murderface! Like, uh, Goody-two-shoes-face!"

Or Chiaki, you tell her. She can call you Chiaki instead.

"Ehh. But it's not cool enough!"

You shake your head, here, before telling Kumatora to stop asking questions and get started on her breakfast.

"U-um, sempai?" Midori's voice is quiet and a bit nervous. "Um, this NECO person...what did she do last night? I remember you saying something about how it's all her fault, and you seemed very angry then..."

Huh? But didn't you tell her...?

Oh. Wait.

No, she was...um...shit, she doesn't know, does she?

You glance at both Kumatora and Kyoko, to volunteer them telling her instead - but the both of them had suddenly started to focus on their plates, studiously eating, their heads hunkered down.

Yeah. Thanks, you two.

How do you respond?

Wendy won't trust our promises, at least. The word of someone who'll break a promise made just two days ago isn't to be trusted, after all.

So far, the only consensus for no-go seems to be

-Sayaka & Kyouko (NTR)
-Yuu & Misaka (Imouto are pure.)
-Kuma/Hat-chan (Kohai material.)
-Ruri (Too much manipulation.)
-NECO (Unceasing cat hate.)

...That leaves, for major contenders,

-Midori
-Wendy
-Pinky

Right? Can we sign a gentlemen's contract to pursue just one?

Yes, that's likely how it'll eventually turn out.

If we hadn't broken the promise to her, we could have wringed some more pathos out of her by forcing her to choose between Kong's love and that Pinky probably has a killswitch in her and is manipulating her mind and emotions.

Really, though, I'm expecting her to compare us to Kharn again, and say we're worse than Kharn. At least Kharn never promised to love her conquests in order to get into their panties, or lied to them afterwards.

It was to set things right. Chiaki kissed her on the cheek before promising.

You can read it on thread 123 on the suptg archives, or in thread 130 on the magicalgirlnoir.com site.

No, it was when we were fully conscious in her dreamscape, the third time we'd been there (technically the first time in that section, showing she trusted us again) and so fully aware that she is both alive and still around.

If you had read the backstory of Wendy you'd know that she seriously deserves someone to hold onto and cherish and that all the insanty that is ascribed to her is just a byproduct of not having that sort of person along with life taking her for one of the most cruel rides ever.

She needs a happy ending or that'll be one hell of a tragedy. And she's basically Chiaki's mirror image, she just always lacked the mami-equivalent to pull her up on her feet again. If there's any love left here she has earned a part of it, if only by virtue of surviving for this long.

They apparently didn't consider that Chiaki had already been showing feelings for Midori, especially with that scene in the medical wing.

So yeah, we appear to be a bitch who will lie and break promises to get what we want and into girls' panties.
And the worst part of it is, that it's not even a part of the character, but mental lapses on the part of the players.

You let out a sigh, here, before putting down your knife and pulling out your smartphone from your inventory. You open up the Chirpee app, point it at NECO's profile, and then hand it over to the green-haired Callidus.

"Eh? But..." Midori blinks as she takes her smartphone from you, puzzled. She takes a look at the screen, still confused - before freezing as all color drains from her face, her eyes growing wide. The smartphone in her hands beginning to shake as she looks back towards you.

"T-this...this...we actually..." The Callidus starts, clearly at a loss for words.

It's why you moved the date indoors, you explain. For what it's worth, it's a pretty good picture - NECO seems to have some good sense with photography during low-light conditions, and the resolution means that she's using an expensive DSLR camera with an equally-expensive lens.

"Hah, really?" Kyoko lets out an impressed sound, here. "Didn't think you'd know anything about that kind of stuff. Photography, I mean, Murderface. When'd you pick up the hobby?"

It's here that you pause yourself. How DID you know, anyway? You've never shot anything other than a firearm in your life, and you certainly don't remember being invested in a pastime that has sobriety as a requirement.

You shake your head here, before covering up your confusion with a shrug. Probably just something you read or something. It's not that hard to tell, isn't it? Only expensive, high-end stuff can get that kind of quality in night shots.

"I guess you're right," Kyoko nods. "It ain't your style, I think. Although it's pretty hilarious to think about, you sneaking around and stalking Mami-chan with a camera! Hahaha!"

You blink at this. ...You didn't do that, did you?

>Magical Girl security detail
One meguka and DK Kyoko does not count as "security".
